This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION.

The publication of the text of the second division of the Rig-Veda by Professor Müller, affords safe authority for the continuance of the translation, which is therefore now offered to the public, under the same liberal patronage of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company under which the preceding volume appeared, and without which it would probably have been withheld from the press: little interest in the work having been manifested in this country, however indispensable the Vedas may be to an accurate knowledge of the religious opinions of the ancient world, and of the primæval institutions of the Hindus.

The view which has been taken in the introduction to the former volume, of the religion and mythology of the people of India, and of their social condition, fifteen centuries at the least prior to Christianity, as derivable from the Veda, is confirmed by the further particulars furnished in the present volume. The worship is that of fire and the elements: it is patriarchal and domestic, but is celebrated through the agency of a rather imposing body of priests, although it consists of little more than the presentation, through fire, of clarified butter and the juice of the Soma plant, to the gods, who are invoked to be present, whose power and benevolence are glorified, whose protection against enemies and misfortunes is implored, whose displeasure and anger are deprecated, and who are solicited to bestow food, cattle, riches, and posterity upon the individuals who conduct the worship, or on whose behalf it is performed: occasional intimations of the hope of happiness hereafter occur, but they are not frequent, nor urgent, and the main objects of every prayer and hymn are the good things of this present life.

The chief individual objects of worship are the same as in the former volume, even in a still more engrossing proportion: of the hundred and eighteen hymns of the Second Ashtaka, thirty are dedicated to Agni in his own form or subordinate manifestations, whilst to Indra by himself or with other divinities, and especially with the winds or the Maruts, his attendants, there are appropriated thirty-nine: of the remaining hymns, six are addressed to the Åswins, five to Mitra and Varuna, five to Brihaspati and Brahmañaspati, five to the Vibwadevas, and three to Váyu; Vishnu has two, the Dawn two, Heaven and Earth three: the rest are distributed, for the most part singly, amongst a variety of personations, some of which are divine, as Rudra, Varuna, Savitri, the Adityas, and Pushtan, each having one hymn: some of the objects are human beings, as the Rája Swanaya who is the hero of two Saktas, Agastya and his wife who are the interlocutors in one, and the Ribhus, or deified sons of Sudhanwan, to whom one hymn is addressed: some of the number are fanciful, as Pitu, Food; Water, Grass, and the Sun; the supposed divinities of a Saktta each; whilst two hymns, as will be presently more particularly noticed, are dedicated to the Horse, who is the victim of the Abwamedha sacrifice.

The particulars that are related of Agni are little else than repetitions of those ascribed to him in the First Ashtaka, told with rather less detail, the language of general panegyric being much more diffuse in this Ashtaka than in the First, whilst the legendary incidents are comparatively scanty: the same may be said of the Hymns addressed to Indra; such of his exploits as are alluded to are those which have been previously particularized, but fewer of them are specified, and some of them have been ascribed in the preceding book to other agents, as, for instance, to the Aświns (p. 242). There are a few hymns in this book which evidently imply a recent grafting of the worship of the Maruts upon that of Indra, an innovation of which the Rishi Agastya appears to have been the author, and which was not effected without opposition on the part of the worshippers of Indra alone (pp. 145—163): the Maruts are here, as well as in the First Book, termed the sons of Rudra.

There is but one hymn addressed to the A'dityas collectively, but the chief divinities of the class are the subjects severally of other hymns, or of scattered stanzas, such as Mītra, Varūṇa, Aryaman, and Vishnū; the latter, in one place, appears as identical with Time (p. 97), in which capacity his three paces, which are repeatedly alluded to, may be intended to allegorize the past, present, and future. Varūṇa, besides being characterized by the same attributes as those formerly attached to him, is represented as the especial resource of persons in debt, or of those who have been reduced from affluence to poverty (pp. 278—280).

The Āświns are described in the same strain as in the First Ashtaka, and various of their exploits are repeated, but with less copiousness and distinctness: although it is rather vaguely intimated, they are regarded mythologically as born in the firmament and the sky (p. 179); and in one place they are called the grandsons of heaven, being identified, according to the Scholiast, as on a former occasion, with the sun and moon, or being, in fact, mythological personations of the former.

Savitṛi, the Sun, has but one Hymn addressed to him, and this offers fewer particulars than occur in the three Sāktas, of which he is the deity, in the First Book: the principal attribute noticed is his defining the day and distinguishing it from the night: it is said, also, to be his office to effect the generation of mankind, but this seems to be little else than an etymological conceit, the noun being derived from the root su, to bring forth: he is called also the husband or protector of the wives of the gods, usually considered to be personations of the metres of the Veda.

Brahma\=naspati is in this Ashtaka identified with Br\=haspati, and both receive more honour than in the former Book, in which Br\=haspati is named only incidentally in single verses of hymns to Indra, or the Vi\=swadevas, and one hymn only is dedicated to Brahmanaspati; the former, when treated of separately, is identical with Indra, by his attributes of sending rain (p. 199) and wielding the thunderbolt (p. 285); but he is hymned indiscriminately with Brahmanaspati, who is styled the lord of the Ganas, or companies of divinities, and also, which is in harmony with his former character, chief or most excellent lord of mantras, or prayers of the Vedas (p. 262); he also, in some of his attributes, as those of dividing the clouds, and sending rain, and recovering the stolen kine (p. 268), is identical with Indra, although, with some inconsistency, he is spoken of as distinct from, although associated with him (p. 270); but this may be a misconception of the Scholiast: his attribute of father, or cherisher, and purohita, or family priest of the gods, may be merely figurative as connected with his presiding over prayer.

Rudra is described as in the first book by rather incompatible qualities, as both fierce and benignant, but his specific province is here also the tutelarship of medicinal plants, and administration of medicine, and he is designated as a physician of physicians (p. 290). With respect also to his presiding over medicinal plants, there occurs a passage worthy of note, as among the herbs are those, it is said, which Manu selected, alluding, most probably, to the seeds of the plants which Manu, according to the legend as related in the Mahābhārata, took with him into his vessel at the time of the deluge. There are more particulars of the person of Rudra than usual. He is sometimes said to be brown or tawny, but he is also said to be white-complexioned (p. 291): he is soft-bellied and handsome-chinned; he is armed with a bow and arrows, and brilliant with golden ornaments. He is also called the father of the Maruts. There is little however in all this except his fierceness to identify him with the Rudra of the Purāṇas.

Of the remaining persons of the Vaidik pantheon, who appear in this portion, the notices that occur conform generally to those of the preceding Ashlaka, and require no remark. There are several hymns, however, of a peculiar character, some of which deserve notice. The two hymns, of which the Rājā Swanaya, the son of Bhācayavya, is the patron or deity, record the munificence of a Hindu prince to the Rishi, Dīrghatamas, and furnish, apparently, the model of the many similar acts of regal liberality which are narrated in the heroic poems and Purāṇas, as well as of the family alliances of royal and saintly, or military and Brahanical races by marriage, the daughters of Rājās being wedded to holy Rishis. It also affords evidence of the prevalence of polygamy at this early date, as Dīrgha-
INTRODUCTION.

TAMAS marries the ten daughters of the Rājā. It may be doubted, however, if this was universally practised, as the institutor of a sacrifice is ordinarily associated with but one wife at its celebration; and at the Aśvamedha, although four denominations of females are specified as the women of the Rājā, the first wedded is alone considered to be the Mahisht, or queen. The multiplicity of wives may have been a privilege of the Rishis—if, indeed, these two Hymns be not compositions of a later day, and foreign to the earliest purport of the Vedas. The same may be suspected of the Sākta that records the dialogue between Agastya and Lopamudrā (p. 174), although that has more of an air of antiquity, though somewhat out of place. As to the two last verses of the second of the Swarnaya Sāktas (p. 18), they are manifest incongruities, although they also may be old. The Hymn to Pitu (p. 192), nutrition or food, is merely fanciful. The Hymn to Water, Grass, and the Sun (p. 201), as antidotes to the venom of poisonous creatures, is somewhat dark and mystical, and offers various terms for the import of which there is no other authority than that of the scholiast. The general intention of it is, however, positively specified by competent authority with which the text offers nothing incompatible, and it expresses notions that are familiar still in popular credence. The same may be said of the two hymns to the Kapinjala, or partridge, as a bird of good omen (p. 316).

A Sākta, remarkable for its unusual extent of fifty-two stanzas, and for the indeterminate application of the greater part of them, is conceived by Śāyāna to convey the principal dogmas of the Vedānta philosophy, or the unity and universality of spirit, or Brahma: according to the Index, these stanzas are addressed to the Viśwadevas; but their general bearing, though sometimes darkly denoted, is the glorification of the Sun, as identical with the divisions of time, or with time itself, and with the universe, as mentioned in the note (p. 126): all the verses of this Sākta occur also in the Atharva- Veda, with the style of which it agrees better than with that of the Rich, at least in general.

The most peculiar and remarkable, however, of the hymns contained in this Ashtaka, are the two of which the Aśwamedha, or sacrifice of a horse, is the subject: the rite as described in the Purāṇas has been introduced to English poetry in the Curse of Kehama, correctly enough according to the authorities followed by Southey; but the main object of the ceremony,—the deposal of Indra from the throne of Svarga, and the elevation of the sacrificer, after a hundred celebrations, to that rank, are fictions of a later date, uncountenanced by the Veda: even the doctrine of the Brāhmaṇas, that the Aśwamedha is to be celebrated by a monarch desirous of universal dominion, is not supported by these Hymns, any more than it is in the Rāmāyana, where it is nothing more than the means of obtaining a son by the childless Daśaratha: as enjoined by the Rig-Veda, the object of the rite seems to be no more than as usual with other rites, the acquiring of wealth and posterity; but as it is detailed in the Yajur-Veda, 22, 26, and more particularly in the Sūtras of Kātyāyana (Āśvamedha i.—210), the object is the same as that of the Rámáyana, or posterity, as one step towards which the principal queen, Kausalya, in the poem, is directed to lie all night in closest contact with the dead steed: in the morning, when the queen is released from this disgusting, and in fact impossible, contiguity, a dialogue, as given in the Yajush, and in the Āśvamedha section of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, and as explained in the Sūtras, takes place between the queen and the females accompanying or attendant upon her, and the principal priests, which, though brief, is in the highest degree both silly and obscene. We find no vestige, however, of these revolting impurities in the Rig-Veda, although it is authority for practices sufficiently coarse, and such as respectable Hindus of the present generation will find it difficult to credit as forming a part of the uncreated revelations of Brāhmaṇa; other particulars which are found in the Sūtras, and in the Rámáyana and Mahābhārata, as the infinite multiplication of victims, have no warrant from our text. That the horse is to be actually immolated admits of no question; that the body was cut up into fragments is also clear (pp. 116, 119); that these fragments were dressed, partly boiled, and partly roasted, is also indisputable (p. 117); and although the expressions may be differently understood, yet there is little reason to doubt that part of the flesh was eaten by the assistants (p. 117), part presented as a burnt-offering to the gods: the second of the two Súktas relating to the same sacrifice, deals less in matters of fact than the first, and is more or less mystical, but there is nothing in it that is incompatible with an actual immolation, and no reasonable doubt can be entertained that the early ritual of the Hindus did authorize the sacrifice of a horse, the details and objects of which were very soon grossly amplified and distorted: at the same time it is to be remarked that these two hymns are the only ones in the Rīch that relate especially to the subject; from which it might be inferred that they belong to a different period, and that the rite was falling or had fallen into disuse, although it may have been revived subsequently in the time of the Sútras and of the heroic poems, in which the Áswamedha of the Mahábhárata takes a middle place, being in various essentials, particularly the part played by Draupadí, the same ceremony as that of the Rámá-yana, whilst in others, as in the guardianship of the horse by Arjuna, it is that of the Padma and other Puráñas (Mahábh. Áswamedha Parva). As the solemnity appears in the Rīch, it bears a less poetical, a more barbaric character, and it may have been a relic of an ante-Vaidik period, imported from some foreign region, possibly from Scythia, where animal victims, and especially horses, were commonly sacrificed (Herod. IV. 71); the latter were also offered by the Massagétæ to the Sun (Ibid. I. 216); and in the second Abhamedhik Hymn of the Rig there are several indications that the victim was especially consecrated to the solar deity: however this may be, the rite, as it appears in the Rig-Veda, can scarcely be considered as constituting an integral element of the archaic system of Hindu worship, although its recognition at all is significant of extant barbarism.

That this was not the condition of the Hindus at the date of the composition of the greater portion of the Vedas, as formerly inferred, is corroborated by the various scattered and incidental notices which are dispersed through this Ashtaka also: the question of the institution of caste is still left undecided, although the five classes of beings who are frequently mentioned, is invariably explained by the commentators to denote the four castes, and the barbarians as the fifth. We have also something very like a specification of Brahmans, as those acquainted with the forms of speech or as the (p. 142) appropriate repeaters of hymns. The expressions, however, do not indicate any exclusive privilege. The term Kshatriya does not occur in this book, and there are indications of Rajas hostile to the ritual who would not, therefore, have belonged to the recognized military order. No such word as Sudra is used, although, as in the first book, the Aryan and Dasyus are contrasted. It looks, also, as if it was intended to designate the latter as especially black-complexioned (pp. 35, 258). They were not, however, so barbarous but that they were assembled in towns or cities, of which, as well as of the cities of the Asuras, Indra is repeatedly represented as the destroyer (pp. 167, 258): if that was the case, the A'ryas were still more likely to be similarly located, of which we have also mention (p. 61). In their towns or cities we find existing the arts, sciences, institutes, and vices of civilized life, golden ornaments, coats of mail, weapons of offence, the use of the precious metals (p. 17), of musical instruments, the fabrication of cars, and the employment of the needle (p. 283); and although we have not the allusions to traders by sea that occur in the first Ashtaka, yet the unequivocal notices and mention of the ocean, are so frequent and precise as to prove beyond doubt its being familiarly known and occasionally navigated; we have also the knowledge of drugs and antidotes, the practice of medicine, and computation of the divisions of time to a minute extent, including repeated allusions to the seventh season, or intercalary month (pp. 8, 131). We have mention, not only of Rájás, but of envoys and heralds, of travellers, and of Sarais, or places provided for their refreshment: it is true that in the passage in which they are named (p. 151), the refreshments are said to be provided for the Maruts, or the winds; but in this, as in the case of the cities of the Asuras, the notion must have been derived from what really existed: Prapathas, or choltris, were not likely to be pure mythological inventions; those for the Maruts must have had their prototypes on earth. Then with regard to the laws of property, it appears, although not very perspicuously described, that daughters had claims to a share of the paternal inheritance (p. 12): that women took part in sacrifices, we have already seen, and it seems that they appeared abroad in public (pp. 150—153): of some of the vices of the civilized state, we have proofs in the notice of common women (p. 153), of secret births, and by inference of the abandonment of new-born children (p. 281); thieves are frequently mentioned: debts and debtors are adverted to more than once, and although the idea is complicated with that of moral obligations, yet debt must originate in fact before it becomes a figure: reverses of fortune and being reduced to poverty from a state of opulence, form the burden of more than one Śūkta (pp. 278—281); all these particulars, although they are only briefly and incidentally thrown out, chiefly by way of comparison or illustration, render it indisputable that the Hindus of the Vaidik era even had attained to an advanced stage of civilization, little if at all differing from that in which they were found by the Greeks at Alexander’s invasion, although no doubt they had not spread so far to the east, and were located chiefly in the Punjab and along the Indus: the same advanced state of civilization may be inferred from the degree of perfection to which the grammatical construction of the language had been brought, and still more from the elaborate system of metrical composition of which so many examples occur, and of which the Śūktas attributed to the Rishi Paruchchepa (pp. 19—58) afford such remarkable instances.
In translating the text of the second Ashlaka, the same principle has been adhered to that was adopted for the translation of the first, and as close a conformity to the text as possible has been aimed at, without any attempt to give the translation a poetical or rhetorical turn: to me the verses of the Veda, except in their rhythm, and in a few rare passages, appear singularly prosaic for so early an era as that of their probable composition, and at any rate their chief value lies not in their fancy but in their facts, social and religious: in translating the text, the gloss of Sáyana A'chárya has been invariably consulted and almost as invariably faithfully followed, as furnishing the safest guide through the intricacies and obscurities of the text: occasionally, but upon the strongest grounds only, has the interpretation of this very able scholiast been questioned, and where his assistance even has failed to remove all uncertainty, the passage has been ordinarily cited in the annotations, to enable the student to form an independent conclusion: although I cannot always concur in M. Langlois' version of the text, yet I have thought it my duty to refer to his translation, and I have also adverted to Professor Benfey's translation of those passages of the Rich, which are repeated in the Sáma-Veda, as well as to Mahidhara's commentary on similar parallel verses in the Vájasaneyá Sanhíta of the Yajush, edited by Professor Weber; an easy reference to such passages being now placed within our reach by the excellent comparative Index of the Hymns of the four Vedas, compiled by Mr. Whitney, and published in the second volume of the Indische Studien of Dr. Weber. With these and other appliances, the task of translation has been in some degree facilitated, although I cannot pretend to have always contended successfully with the inherent difficulties of the original; a brief notice of which may possibly contribute to a candid appreciation of the arduousness of the undertaking, and may be of some service to students of the text.

It may be doubted if the impediments to a right understanding of the text of the Veda have been accurately conceived of, especially when they are confined to peculiarities of grammatical construction, or the use of words not found in other works, or employed in an unusual acceptation. The far greater portion of Vaidik grammar is as systematic as that of the laws of Manu, and the exceptions, when regular, as specified in the sketch of the grammar of the Vedas, which I have given in the second edition of the Sanscrit grammar, soon become familiar; the only real difficulty on this head arises from the disregard of all grammar, and the arbitrary substitution of one case or number of a noun, or person and tense of a verb for another, as specified by Pāṇini, and instances of which are frequent, as occasionally pointed out in the notes of the following pages. With respect to unusual words, there are no doubt a great number employed in the Veda, and it is possible that the lexicographic significations given by the commentators may be sometimes questionable, sometimes contradictory; but from what other authority can a satisfactory interpretation be derived? It has been supposed that a careful collation of all the passages in which such words occur might lead to a consistent and indisputable interpretation, but this assumes that they have always been employed with precision and uniformity by the original authors, a conclusion that would scarcely be tenable even if the author were one individual, and utterly untenable, when, as is the case with the Saktas, the authors are indefinitely numerous: it is very improbable, therefore, that even such collation would remove all perplexity on this account, although it might occasionally do so; at any rate, such a concordance has still to be established, and until it is effected, we may be satisfied with the interpretations given us by the most distinguished native scholars, availing themselves of all the Vaidik learning that had preceded them, or that was contemporary with them, and inheriting no inconsiderable assistance from traditional explanation, preserved by the professional teachers of the Vedas.

Admitting, however, that the correct understanding of single terms may be very much promoted by the comparison of all the passages in which they are met with, a very small advance will have been effected towards surmounting the difficulty of translation even as respects words alone. The Sanscrit scholar, with or without such help, meeting with the words in their proper places, and in connection with others, may readily comprehend their purport, but he will not therefore be able to render it equally comprehensible to others, from the want of equivalents in his own language, or from those which are available failing to convey the same ideas: kavi, vipra, vidvat, medhāvin, chikitvah, and many others, mean wise, intelligent, knowing; but we cannot make use of these adjectives in the way in which the original terms are employed, more frequently without substantives than with them; becoming appellative titles, or names: still more difficult is it to devise equivalents for compound terms, and especially those which it is sometimes doubtful how to deal with, and whether to consider them as epithets or proper names, more particularly when they may, in the opinion of the Scholiasts, be variously explained: thus, Satakratu is an appellative epithet of Indra, implying either, one to whom many sacrifices are offered; one who is the instigator of many sacred rites; or one by whom many great actions have been performed. Again, Jātavedas is sometimes a name, sometimes an epithet of Agni; it may mean, according to the commentators, he by whom knowledge was acquired at his birth; he by whom all that has been born is known; he who is known to be one with all beings; or he from or by whom all wealth is generated: these are awkward terms to encounter, not because they cannot be comprehended, but because, unless given untranslated as proper names, they can only be parenthetically rendered, at least in English and in French; the facility of forming compounds in

VOL. II.
German, and the hardihood of German translators, give that language an advantage in these respects.

Still, however, these are but slight obstacles, and will be overcome in proportion to the skill of the translator, and his command of his own language, as well as of that from which he translates: it may not be always possible to devise unexceptionable and felicitous equivalents for such expressions, but they may be so rendered as to convey with some degree of accuracy the substance of the text: the more unmanageable difficulties are those which are utterly insuperable except by guess: they are not the perplexities of commission, but of omission: not the words or phrases that are given, but those that are left out: the constant recurrence of the abuse of ellipsis and metonymy, requiring not only words, but sometimes sentences, to be supplied by comment or conjecture, before any definite meaning can be given to the expressions that occur:—thus, as already observed, the substantive is very often omitted and the adjective does double duty: the first verse of the second Ashtaka offers an example: it begins—\textit{raghu-manyavah}—"Oh ye of little wrath;" "Ye who are gentle, mild-tempered;" but who they are that are so saluted, does not appear. The Scholiast says, mild-tempered \textit{priests}, and it would not be easy to suggest a preferable application of the epithet, although if not traditional it is only conjectural. It may not always require extraordinary ingenuity to hit upon what is intended by such elliptical expressions from correlative terms or context; but such a mode of interpretation by European scholars, whose ordinary train of thinking runs in a very different channel from that of Indian scholarship, can scarcely claim equal authority with the latter: it may be happier; it may be more rational:—still it is not that which has been accepted for centuries by critics of indisputable learning in their own department of knowledge.

As many instances of this elliptical construction have been given in the notes of both this and the former volume, a few additional instances will here be sufficient:—thus, (p. 301, v. 9) we have “the grandson of the waters has ascended above the crooked ——;” “the broad and golden —— spread around.” What would the European scholar do here without the Scholiast? He might, perhaps, suspect that the term crooked, curved, or bent, or, as here explained, crooked-going, tortuous, might apply to the clouds, but he would hesitate as to what he should attach the other epithets to, and the original author alone could say with confidence that he meant ‘rivers,’ which thenceforward became the traditional and admitted explanation, and is, accordingly, so supplied by the Scholiast.

The object as well as the subject is very frequently omitted. Thus we have (p. 29, v. 5), “thou removest all —— of men;” according to the Scholiast, “the sin of men:” again (p. 33, v. 4), “thou cuttest —— to pieces;” where something like ‘enemies’ has to be supplied: and (in p. 2, v. 3) Indra and Parvata are solicited “to whet or sharpen our ——;” a European commentator would most probably fill up the blank with ‘spears or swords;’ we are indebted to the native Scholiast for the mooe appropriate accusative, ‘intellects.’

An equally frequent ellipse is that of the verb, as (p. 6, v. 14) “may our offerings be acceptable to the gods, and —— with both,”—that is, according to Sāyaña, “may they be pleased or propitiated” by both “our offerings and praises.” Again (p. 20, v. 2), “with prayers —— by the priests —— thee” requires something like ‘recited’ and ‘adore’ to make any sense at all: again (p. 25, v. 3), “Agni having his abode on high places —— to pious rites,” obviously requires ‘comes;’ and “those, who, desiring his friendship —— the lord of a city —— with good government” (p. 165, v. 10), is made intelligible by the commentator’s adding, ‘conciliate’ the lord of a city who ‘administers’ good government; instances of this kind are innumerable.

Another source of perplexity which is not uncommon, and which is also a sort of ellipse, is the abuse of metonymy: thus, we have (p. 303, v. 1) “This libation consists of the cow, and has been filtered by the sheep.” A European translator might suspect that for cow, we should read, the products of the cow—milk and butter, but he ought to be thankful to the commentator for explaining to him that the Soma juice was cleansed by being passed through a filter made of the wool of the sheep, the animal being here put for his skin.

To these sources of difficulty others less peculiar, but for the elucidation of which an authentic gloss is no less desirable, are to be added; such as those of involved and complex construction, such as is common in all metrical compositions; and the use of terms of a figurative and allegorical import. In this class of words, the cow makes a great figure, and we have typified by her a variety of persons and things bestowing benefits, in like manner as she yields milk; as the earth, the institutor of a sacrifice with his wife, and especially the clouds, that shed rain: withholding which, they are fabled, as the cows of the saintly Angirasas, to have been stolen by an Asura and rescued by Indra. These, however, are nothing more than usual in mythological writings, and are by no means so embarrassing as the elliptical omission of words indispensable to a complete sentence and perfect signification, originating, no doubt, in the method by which the hymn of the Veda were first communicated to the disciples of the teacher, and were afterwards transmitted, —oral communication; it being easy for the author himself to supply the deficient words or sentences, and convey to his auditors all that he would have them understand. How far his lecture and amplification may have been preserved uncorrupted through successive generations until they reached Yáska, and eventually Sáyaña, may be reasonably liable to question, but that the explanations of these Scholiasts were not arbitrary, but were such as had been established by the practice of preceding schools and were generally current at their several eras, can admit of no doubt. Even if it were not so, their undeniable learning and their sympathy with the views and feelings of their countrymen, amongst whom were the original authors and expounders of the Sáktas, must give a weight to their authority which no European scholar, however profound his knowledge of Sanscrit or of the Vedas, can, in my opinion, be entitled to claim.

As a concluding specimen of some of the difficulties of our task, I subjoin the version of a stanza in which we have an opportunity of comparing the interpretation given by different translators of an easy passage,—it forms the burden of several Sáktas (p. 236, v. 11): “Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation, the earth, the bestower of cattle, the (means) of many (pious) rites, such that it may be perpetual: may there be sons and grandsons born in our race, and may thy good-will ever be upon us.” M. Langlois renders it—“O Agni, en échange de nos invocations, fais que la terre soit à jamais libérée pour nous, et féconde en troupeaux: que nous ayons une belle lignée, d’enfants et de petits enfants: O Agni, que ta bonté soit avec nous” (vol. i. p. 542). Mr. Stevenson’s translation of the same stanza repeated in the Sáma-Veda (p. 16) has—“O Agni, grant to us, the performers of sacrifice, those supplies by which many sacred rites can be performed, and cows which remain always profitable. O Agni, may we have sons and grandsons, the fathers of a numerous race, and may thy favourable regards be ever towards us.” Professor Benfey translates the same stanza thus:— "The food, O Agni, the much-effecting gift of the cow, make everlasting to him who implores you. To us may there be a son—may there be a wide-branching name to us. May this be, O Agni, the fruit of thy kindness to us" (p. 217, 3rd decade, 4th v.). The original is, "Die Speis', o Agni, der Kuh viel-werk'ge Spende mach ewigdauernd dem, der zu dir flehet: uns sei ein Sohn, ein weitverzweigter Name uns: diess sei, o Agni, deiner Gnade Frucht uns."

The first word, Ilá, is the subject of a different explanation. M. Langlois and myself render it 'earth,' following Sáyaña, who explains it here bhúmi. Mr. Stevenson renders it 'supplies,' and Professor Benfey 'food,' a meaning which the word sometimes bears: a more doubtful term is purudansam, explained, many-acting, bahu-carmánam, or puru, much, many, and dansas, act, usually implying an act of worship. Mr. Stevenson understands it in this sense, 'by which many sacred rites can be performed.' M. Langlois translates it more directly, 'liberal,' 'bountiful.' Professor Benfey apparently detaches it from Ilá, and applies it to sanim, gift, distribution, whilst Sáyaña considers sanim an epithet also of Ilá, pradátri, the liberal donor, i. e., of cattle, as he also has it, gavám pradátrim Ilám. The sense of the French version is to the same purport; whilst Stevenson puts goh into the ac-cusive, 'grant to us cows.' Benfey seems to put the two nouns in apposition: 'food, the gift of the cow:' the meaning of the next word, śākwattamam, most lasting, is concurred in by all, but its connection varies; I have taken it adverbially after Śāyaṇa, chirakālam yathā bhavati tathā sūdha, 'so grant that it (the gift of the earth) endure for a long time.' M. Langlois à jamais, is not far from the same, although he puts it in relation to the earth. Stevenson treats it as an epithet of goh, 'cows always profitable,' which it can scarcely be, as it is in the singular accusative, and either masculine or neuter, whilst goh is the feminine genitive. It seems somewhat doubtful whether Benfey's ewigungdauern d applies to Speise or to Spende: it might be the adjective of the latter, sanim; but the Sanscrit could not agree with Ilám. Havamānāya may signify, 'to the offerer of the oblation,' or 'to the invoker of Agni;' scarcely, 'en échange de nos invocations,' nor 'him who prays to or implores,' although in substance not very different.

In the second half of the verse the term tanaya may admit of some difference of meaning, although when associated with putra or sünuh, a son, it is commonly explained, grandson: Śāyaṇa's explanation is somewhat equivocal; he has santānasya vistārayita, 'an extender of offspring,' which may be an epithet of sünuh; at the same time it is not an incompatible synonyme of grandson, and that has been adopted in three of the translations; Benfey apparently understands it somewhat differently, or ‘wide-branching,’ as an epithet of the next word, \( \text{vijāvā} \), an unusual term, but scarcely equivalent to ‘name’: the commentator expounds it here, \( \text{putra paurāṇi rápeṣṭa svayam jáyate} \), ‘he who is born himself, in the form of sons and grandsons,’ that is, a continuer of the race, an epithet of \( \text{tanayah} \). In a repetition of the same stanza at the end of the seventh \( \text{Śākta} \) of the next book, \( \text{Śāyaña} \) alters his exposition, and attaches \( \text{vijāvā} \) to \( \text{sumatiḥ} \), ‘good-will, favour,’ considering it as synonymous with \( \text{abandhyā} \), not barren—may thy good-will ever be productive (of benefits) to us; but the construction of the sentence is somewhat opposed to this interpretation. The several translators agree tolerably well in the close; but their discrepancies in a passage of less than ordinary perplexity may be considered as bearing witness to the utility or even to the necessity of a competent interpreter, such as we have in \( \text{Śāyaña Achárya} \), although he may not be infallible: at any rate I gratefully acknowledge the value of his assistance, and without it I should not have ventured to attempt a translation of the \( \text{Rig-Veda} \).

The accents are occasionally omitted or misplaced, but the Sanskrit scholar will have no difficulty in rectifying them.
The deities are the Viśwadevas; the Rishi is Kakśhīvat; the metre is Trishtubh.

4. Whenever I, the son of Usi, worship with my offerings (of food) those two (Aśvinś) who eat and drink (of oblations and libations) at (the season) of the world-whitening (dawn); do you, Priests, glorify the grandson of the waters (Agni), and render (the divinities of the day and night) the a Starth na: the former, which properly means what covers or expands, occurs in lexicons as a synonyme of ‘smoke,’ but it is said by the Scholiast here to mean, the Sun invested or clothed with light, or destructive of foes,—bhrandam hinsakas tejaschhanno ud Aditya.

b Agni, here called Vasarhas, as assuming various vestures (vasa), or forms, in the Gṛhapatya and other fires; or, as destroying the vesture of the earth,—the trees; or as causing the revolutions of day and night: the sense of the appellative seems rather doubtful.

c Another name of Indra, as regulating the Parvas, the joints or periods of the day or year.

d The trees and shrubs spring up from moisture or the waters, and fire proceeds from timber; hence Agni may be called the grandson of the waters, or it may mean son of the waters, as in Manu, ix. 321: a different etymology has been given in a former place (vol. i. p. 31, note).

5. I, the son of Usī, address to you (Aświns) audible praises, in like manner as Ghoshā praised you for the removal of her white-tinted (skin): I glorify (gods) the bountiful Pūshan (associated) with you, and I proclaim the munificence of Agni.

6. Mitra and Varuṇa, hear these my invocations, and moreover listen to those (that are) everywhere (uttered) in the chamber of sacrifice; and may Sindhu, the renowned bestower of wealth, hear us, (fertilizing our) broad fields with water.

7. I praise you, Mitra and Varuṇa, for your gift of numerous cattle to the Pajra, and (from those praises) may abundant food (proceed). May (the gods), bestowing nourishment on me, come quickly unimpeded, (each) in his famous and favourite car.

8. I laud the treasures of that opulent (assembly of the gods); may we, men who (are blessed) with excellent descendants, partake of them together:

epithet to imply deva sangha, the assembly or company of the gods.

a The text has jano yah, the man who—: the Scholiast explains it yadcha devasanghah, 'the assembly of the gods which—:'

b Akshayad dhruk is explained, chakrena, marge na dhrayati, offends by a wheel, or a way; equivalent to anyathd prakdrena, in another manner.

c Yaksham hridaye nidhatte, he places or deposits consumption in the heart; but yaksha is said here to mean vyddhi, sickness in general: the expression is understood to imply something like our phrase of sick at heart, meaning, it is said, the sense of mortification experienced by those who neglect the gods on observing the blessings which recompense devotion.

d Amritasya nakhsho kavan sureh is explained, dhvnam amaraskasya stotrdiprerakasya manushyasya mama, the invocation of me, a mortal, instigating praises and the like, not dying. It would pitiated by the greatness of the (sacrificial) wealth a Dasataya, a decade, meaning according to Sāyaśa, food, by which the vigour of the ten senses is augmented, or Soma juice offered in ten ladles.

b A different interpretation may be given to the latter half of the stanza.— "May all the gods partake of the abundant food (or Soma) at those sacrifices in which the priests are the distributors of the riches of copious libations."

c Here we again have dasataya: dasatayasya dhāse, which the Scholiast explains by the ten indriyas, or organs of sense.

d The enumeration here may refer to the ten ladles by which the Soma juice is thrown on the fire; or to the ten articles offered in sacrifices, as honey, butter, curds, milk, water, grain, &c., offered to fire at the abhamedhu.

May all the gods favour us with a person decorated with golden earrings and jewel necklace: may the venerable (company of the deities) be propitiated by the praises issuing (from the mouth of the worshipper): may our offerings be acceptable to them, and (may they be pleased) with both (our praises and offerings).

15. The four (silly) sons of Masarsāra, the three of the victorious monarch Ayavasa, (annoy) me. Let your spacious and bright-rayed chariot, Mitra and Varuṇa, blaze (before them) like the sun, (filling them with fear).

Sūkta III. (CXXIII.)

The deity is Ushas, or the Dawn; the Rishi Kashiṣṭvat; the metre Trishṭubh.

or any other princes, do against those who enjoy the protection of Mitra and Varuṇa: the construction, however, is obscure, and the names, which are said to be those of Rājā, are new and unusual.

a Arnas, synonyme of rūpa, form: the Scholiast understands it to mean 'a son;' but this does not seem indispensable.

b Or it may mean, according to Sāyaṇa, 'may they reward us in both worlds;' the text has only ubhayesu, in both.

c Sīswah, for Sīswah, infants; that is, infantile, childish.

d Of the two princes named, no particulars are given in the commentary, nor have they been met with elsewhere: the whole hymn is very elliptical and obscure.

e Dakshināydh, of the clever one: there is no substantive; the appellative means, according to Sāyaṇa, she who is skilled in her own function,—svavyāpda kuśala.
has been harnessed; the immortal gods have ascended it; the noble and all-pervading Ushas has risen up from the darkness, bringing health to human habitations.

2. First of all the world is she awake, triumphing over transitory (darkness): the mighty, the giver (of light) from on high, she beholds (all things): ever youthful, ever reviving, she comes first to the invocation.

3. Well-born and divine Ushas, who art the protectress of mortals; whatever share (of light) thou apportionest to-day to men, may the radiant Savitri be disposed (to confirm) the gift, and declare us free from sin; so that (he) the sun (may come to our sacrificial hall).

4. Ahana, charged with downward-bending (light), goes daily from house to house; she comes, perpetually diffusing light, and desirous of b  Jayanti vājam: Sādaya explains vāja as moving, motive; the darkness that goes away with the dawn; or, in its more usual meaning of 'food,' it may mean 'producing food,' as the reward of the morning sacrifice.

c  Bhāgams, a share: the comment supplies prakṣasasya, of light; but he admits that it may mean a share of the offerings to the gods; for, as the sacrifice is offered at dawn, the dawn may be said to be its distributor.

d  The text has only Suryāya, for, or on account of, or for the sake of, the sun: the amplification necessary to render the word intelligible, is the work of the Scholiast.

• Ahānt is enumerated by Yiska among the synonyms of Ushas, but no explanation of it is given.
bestowing (benefits), and accepts the choicest portions of (the sacrificial) treasures.

5. Usha{s, endowed with truth, who art the sister of Bhaga, the sister of Varuna, be thou hymned first (of the gods): then let the worker of iniquity depart, for we shall overcome him with our chariot, through thy assistance.

6. Let words of truth be spoken: let works of wisdom (be performed): let the blazing fires rise up, so that the many radiant Ushas may make manifest the desirable treasures hidden by the darkness.

7. The twofold day proceeds unseparated; one (part going) forward, one backward; one of these two alternating (periods) effects the concealment (of things); the Dawn illumines them with her radiant chariot.

8. The same to-day, the same to-morrow, the irreproachable (Dawns) precede the distant course of Varuna by thirty yojanas, and each in succession revolves in its (appointed) office.

\[a\] Day and night.

[\(Varuna\)] is here identified with the sun, as the remover of darkness, who, according to the Scholiast, revolves daily round Mount Meru, the centre of the earth, performing a diurnal circuit of 5,059 yojanas; the dawn being always 30 yojanas in advance of his rising, or first appearance from behind the mountain in the east. Sadyaha adds, that the period called dawn is reckoned from the disappearance of the stars to the appearance of the sun, and is measured, as to the duration, by 21 ghatikas and 26 pards. Taking the ghatika at its lowest valuation of half a mukhrita, or 24 minutes, and a pard as \(1/9\)th of a ghatika, we
9. The self-illumined Dawn, announcing the declination of the first (portion) of the day, is born white-shining out of the gloom: cleansing (with the radiance) of the sun, she impairs not his splendour, but daily adds embellishment (to his lustre).

10. Goddess, manifest in person like a maiden, thou goest to the resplendent and munificent (sun); and, like a youthful bride (before her husband), thou uncoverest, smiling, thy bosom in his presence.

11. Radiant as a bride decorated by her mother, thou willingly displayest thy person to the view. Do thou, auspicious Ushas, remove the investing (gloom), for other dawns than thou do not disperse it.

12. Possessed of horses, possessed of cows, exist—should have in a day of 60 ghatikās more than one-third allotted to the dawn, which is evidently erroneous. Again, if the sun travels 5,059 yojanas in 24 hours, he travels at the rate of about 84 yojanas in one ghatikā; and as the dawn is in advance only 30 yojanas, it is in time less than half a ghatikā before the sun; a more correct estimate than the 22 ghatikās of the commentary. There is some inaccuracy, therefore, in the statement. According to the Purāṇas, the sun travels, in a day of 30 muhūrttas, or 60 ghatikās, 94,500,000 yojanas, or 1,575,000 yojanas in 1 ghatikā. The same authorities assign 1 ghatikā to the Sandhyā, the morning twilight or dawn, and 3 muhūrttas, or 2 hours 24 minutes, to the Pradāra, or early morning. The reckoning of the sun's daily journey, cited by Śāyāna, perhaps from some text of the Vedas, is much nearer the truth than that of the Purāṇas, being something more than 20,000 miles, and being in fact the equatorial circumference of the earth.—Bentley, Hindu Astronomy, p. 185.

ing through all time, vying with the rays of the sun (in dissipating darkness), auspicious Dawns, sending down benefits (on mankind), pass away and again return.

13. Co-operating with the rays of the true (sun), confirm in us every propitious act: earnestly invoked by us to-day, disperse, Ushas, (the darkness), that wealth may devolve upon us, (already) affluent (in sacrificial treasures).

Sūkta IV. (CXXIV.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre are the same.

Varga VII.

1. When the (sacred) fire is kindled, Ushas sheds abundant light, dispersing (the darkness) like the rising sun: may the divine Savitrī bestow upon us for our use,* wealth of both bipeds and quadrupeds.

2. Unimpedingb divine rites, although wearing away the ages of mankind, the Dawn shines the similitude of the (mornings) that have passed, or that are to be for ever, the first of those that are to come.

3. She, the daughter of heaven, is beheld in the east, gracious and arrayed in light: she travels steadily along the path of the sun, as if cognizant (of his pleasure), and damages not the quarters (of the horizon).

*a Ityai, lit. 'for going;' that is, according to the commentary, 'for carrying on our own affairs.'

b Animati ahinsānti, not injuring, not opposing, not unsuited to; being, in fact, the fit season of their performance.

5. Born in the eastern quarter of the spacious firmament, she displays a banner of rays of light. Placed on the lap of both parents (heaven and earth), filling them (with radiance), she enjoys vast and wide-spread renown.

6. Verily she, the wide-expanded Ushas, neglects not (to give) the joy of sight to those of her own or of a different nature: visible in her faultless person,

Sūndhyavo na vakhas: according to the Scholiast, Sūndhyu is a name of the sun, and the expression is to be understood as implying the collective solar rays. Sūndhyu also means a water-bird of a white colour, to whose white plumage the morning light may be compared. Sūndhyuvah in the plur. may also mean waters.—Nir. 4, 16.

b In the same manner as the Rishi Nodhas displays his wishes by his prayers and praises, so the dawn puts forth the light that is accessible to all the world: we have no further notice of Nodhas than that he was a Rishi.

* Narascha pituhājhem-anārthikah, seeking for food.
Sūkta V. (CXXV.)

The hymn is supposed to be recited by Kakshívat, in acknowledgment of the liberality of Rájá Swānaya, whose gift is therefore considered as the divinity of the hymn, or the object addressed; Kakshívat is of course the Rishi; the metre of the 4th and 5th stanzas is Jagati; that of the rest, Trishtubh.

1. Having come in the early morning, (Swānaya) presents precious (wealth), knowing it (to be worthy of acceptance); and having, (therefore), accepted it, (Kakshívat) brings it (to his father): wherewith the parent of excellent sons, maintaining his progeny, passes his life in the enjoyment of affluence.

2. May he (the Rájá) be rich in kine, in gold, in horses: may Indra grant abundant food to him a The legend which is cited by Sāyana, and which is told to the like purport in the Niti-manjari, relates that Kakshívat, having finished his course of study, and taken leave of his preceptor, was journeying homewards, when night came on, and he fell asleep by the road-side: early in the morning, Rájá Swānaya, the son of Bhāvoyaya, attended by his retinue, came to the spot, and disturbed the Brahman's slumbers: upon his starting up, the Rájá accosted him with great cordiality, and being struck by his personal appearance, determined, if he was of suitable rank and birth, to give him his daughters in marriage. After ascertaining his fitness, he took Kakshívat home with him, and there married him to his ten daughters, presenting him at the same time with a hundred nishkas of gold, a hundred horses, a hundred bulls, one thousand and sixty cows, and eleven chariots, one for each of his wives and one for himself, each drawn by four horses. With these presents Kakshívat returned home, and placed them at the disposal of his father, Dīrqhatamasya, reciting this hymn in praise of the munificence of Swānaya.

who delays thee, returning home in the early morning, by costly gifts, as (a hunter arrests the) wandering (animals) by his snares.

3. Desirous (of again beholding thee), I have this day obtained thee, who hast done in the morning a good deed; the performer of a sacrifice with a wealth-laden car, refresh thyself with the effused juice of the exhilarating (Soma) creeper, and augment with sincere prayers (the prosperity) of the chief of a flourishing race.

4. The copiously-yielding and joy-conferring kine, distil (their milk) for the celebration of the (Soma) sacrifice, and for him who has undertaken its celebration: the nutritious streams of butter converge from every quarter towards him, who both propitiates (his progenitors), and benefits (mankind).

5. He who propitiates (the gods), gives to the gods, and sits at ease upon the summit of heaven: to him the flowing waters bear their essence; to him this fertile (earth) ever yields abundance.

a This and the following verses are supposed to be repeated by Dirghatamas, the father of Kakshvat.
b Ishtha putram, lit. the son of sacrifice; but the Scholiast explains putram, upon the authority of Ydaka, to signify puruvratdram, the much-protecting, or, simply, kartaram, performer.
c Prinayantam papurin-cha are both attributives of an agent, and therefore the agent who gives pleasure, or who gives repletion or satisfaction: the Scholiast applies the first to the Pitrn, or progenitors, pitrrn prinayantam; the second to all living beings, práninah sarvadā prinayantam purusham.
d Iyam dakshind, the Scholiast interprets by, this capable
6. These wonderful (rewards) verily are for those who give (pious) donations: for the donors of (pious) gifts the suns shine in heaven: the givers of (pious) donations attain immortality: the givers of (pious) gifts prolong their (worldly) existence.

7. May those who propitiate (the gods), never commit degrading sin: may those who praise the gods and observe holy vows, never experience decay: may some (honourable) individual ever be their defence: and may afflictions fall upon him who does not propitiate (the gods).

c Anyās tesham paridhir astu kaśchit, may some other one be their surrounding defence, or, as the Scholiast says, kavacha-sthānīya, in the place of armour: he seems rather uncertain as to the sense of anyah kaśchit: some other, whether it mean a man, or the divinity presiding over sin, or to some countervailing merit, dharma-viśeṣhāt: it probably alludes to Svānaya as the type of a patron or protector.
Sūkta VI. (CXXVI.)

Of the first five verses, the Rishi is Kakshivat, and as they are in commendation of the Rājā Brāvakarcya, he is considered to be in the place of the deity; the sixth stanza is ascribed to the Rājā, and the seventh to his wife Lomāšā, the daughter of Brihaspati. The first five stanzas are in the Trishtubh metre; that of the two last is Anushubh.

1. I repeat with a (willing) mind, the reluctant praises of Brāvyā, dwelling on the banks of the Sindhu: a prince of unequalled (might), desirous of renown, who has enabled me to celebrate a thousand sacrifices.

2. From which generous prince, soliciting (my acceptance), I, Kakshivat, unhesitatingly accepted a hundred nishkas, a hundred vigorous steeds, and a hundred bulls, whereby he has spread his imperishable fame through heaven.

3. Ten chariots drawn by bay steeds, and carrying my wives, stood near me, given me by Swanaya; and a thousand and sixty cows followed: these, after a short interval of time, did Kashiya deliver (to his father).

4. Forty bay horses, (harnessed) to the chariots, lead the procession in front of a thousand (followers).

*a Bhāva is here identified evidently with Swanaya, his son.
*b Sindhan adhi, upon the Sindhu, either the river Indus or the sea-shore; most probably the former.
*c A nishka is a weight of gold. By Manu it is said to be equal to four suvarnas (viii. 134). In the Amara kosa it is rated at 108 suvarnas.

VOL. II.
The Pajras, the kinsmen of Kakshivat, rub down the high-spirited steeds, decorated with golden trappings.

5. I have accepted a prior grant, (kinsmen), for you:* three and eight harnessed chariots and cattle of incalculable value: may the kindred Pajras, like well-disposed relations, be desirous of acquiring renown by their abundant offerings.

6. "She, who, when her desires are assented to, clings as tenaciously as a female weasel, and who is ripe for enjoyment, yields me infinite delight.

7. Approach me, (husband); deem me not immature: I am covered with down like a ewe of the Gandháris."

a The Scholiast is at a loss to understand how this should be, as in the former hymn the whole of the gifts were placed at the disposal of his father by Kakshivat; and again, the ten cars conveyed his wives, who could not be given away; he suggests, therefore, that a different sense of eleven is intended.

b Ardhíyasa yathä is explained arihíkír-ísoarír-dháramíyá, to be held or attained by rich men; i.e. bhumíyá, of great price.

c Vigyá iva urdá is a rather doubtful phrase: the Scholiast explains it visámd urdá yathá parásparam amurúdavantah, like troops of people having mutual affection.

d The text has, having carts or barrows, anáswantah; the term aná implying a small cart or truck, in which the Soma plants are brought to the place where the sacrifice is to be offered.

f Káriká, which is explained súvattá呐uh, the female nául or viverra, having brought forth young.

g This is Lomaki’s reply; but the verse, as well as the preceding, is brought in very abruptly, and has no connection with

SÚKTA I. (CXXVII.)

The hymn is addressed to Agni; the Rishi is called Paruchchēpa, the son of Divodāsa; the metre is Atyashī.

1. I venerate Agni, the invoker (of the gods), the munificent, the giver of dwellings, the son of strength: he who knows all that exists, like a sage who is endowed with knowledge: who, the divine what precedes: it is also in a different metre, and is probably a fragment of some old popular song: another meaning is also assigned to gandhāri.

According to Mr. Colebrooke (Sanskrit and Prakrit Prosody, Misc. Essays, ii. 162), the Atyashī metre is a stanza of four lines, containing 68 syllables, each arranged in different feet, constituting varieties of the class; and the Scholiast quotes the chhandas, or metrical system of the Vedas, for a graduated series of metres, beginning with Utkriti, containing 104 syllables, and descending by a diminution of four through eight classes to Atyashī, the ninth, which gives it the same number. In this hymn and the twelve following, however, the stanza is arranged in three lines, and the number of syllables varies from 57 to 70, being in most of the lines 65, 66, 67: the distribution of the feet does not seem to follow any definite rule.

It is a peculiarity of this and the twelve succeeding Sūktas, to reiterate a leading word which occurs the third or fourth from the end of the first line, and sometimes also of the third, and to repeat it as the last word of the line; thus, we have here sunum-sahaso jātavedásam, vipram na jātavedásam; this is little else than a kind of verbal alliterative jingle, but the Scholiast thinks it necessary to assign to the repeated word a distinct signification, agreeably indeed to the rule that prevails in respect to the various regenerator of sacrifices, through his lofty and reverential devotion, covets for the gods the blaze of the liquefied butter which is offered in oblation with his flames.

2. We, the institutors of the ceremony, invoke thee, Agni, who are most deserving of worship, and are the eldest of the Angirasas, with (acceptable) prayers; and with prayers (recited) by the priests, (we adore) thee, who, like the traverser of the sky, (the sun), are the invoker (of the gods on behalf) of men, and whom, the bright-haired showerer (of blessings), many people approaching propitiate for the attainment of felicity.

3. Verily, that Agni, far shining with brilliant vigour, is the destroyer of foes, like a hatchet that cuts down trees: whatever is most solid and stable dissolves like water at his contact: unsparing, he sports (amidst enemies), nor desists (from their destruction), like an archer who retreats not (from battle).

species of alliteration, termed by writers on Alankāra, or ornamental composition, Yamaka; illustrated by several celebrated writings, especially by the Nalodaya, attributed to Kālidāsa, translated by the late Rev. Mr. Yates, who has also published a learned dissertation on the subject in the Bengal Asiatic Researches, vol. xix.: the employment of this artifice, and in a still greater degree the complex construction of the stanza, render the whole series of the Pāruchchhepa hymns exceedingly obscure and unintelligible: it is not pretended that their translation is free from exception, but the text has been adhered to as nearly as possible with the aid of the Scholiast.
4. They have presented substantial donations to him, as (they give riches) to a sage, and by resplendent means he grants us (grace) for our preservation: (the worshipper) presents (gifts) to Agni for preservation: he who pervades the (many offerings made to him) consumes them (as rapidly) as (he consumes) forests: he matures the standing corn by his potency; he destroys whatever (things) are stationary by his potency.

5. We place near the altar the (sacrificial) food of him who is more conspicuous by night than by day: (we offer it) to him who is scarcely alive by day: hence his (sacrificial) food finds prompt acceptance, like a dwelling (given by a father) to a son: these undecaying fires, (although) discriminating between the devout and the undevout, grant (both) protection, and accepting (the offerings of the pious), they are exempt from decay.

6. He roars aloud, like the roaring of the winds, amidst the sanctified and selected (rites of sacred) solemnities; he who is to be worshipped, who is to be adored (for victory) over hosts (of enemies); he, the receiver (of oblations), the manifestor of the sacrifice; he, who is deserving of veneration, de-

b Aprayushe divatardt, to him who has not prominent or vigorous life through the day, being dimmed or enfeebled by the superior effulgence of the sun.
vours the oblations: hence, all men for their good pursue the path of Agni, who gives pleasure (to his worshippers), being pleased (himself), in like manner as men follow a path (that leads) to happiness.

7. The descendants of Bhrigu, celebrating him (Agni) in both his forms,° glorifying him, and paying him homage, proclaim his praises; the descendants of Bhrigu,° rubbing (the sticks to kindle flame) for the oblation. For the radiant Agni, who is the guardian of all these treasures, has power (to distribute them). May he, the receiver of sacrifices, partake of the agreeable (offerings) given to satiety; may he, the receiver of sacrifices, partake (of the oblations).

8. We invoke thee, the protector of all people, the same alike to all, the preserver of the house, to enjoy (the oblation); thee, who art the wafter of our infallible prayer; to enjoy (the oblation): we invoke thee, who art the guest of men, to whom all these immortals apply for their sustenance, as (a son) to a father; thee, to whom the priests offer oblations amongst the gods.

° Dwifā yad im kātásah, celebrating him as twofold; that is, according to Sāyana, either as recognised in both the Sūtri and Smrīti, the books of religion and law; or as the giver of happiness in both this world and the next; or as manifold in the Āhavanīya and other fires, two being put for many.
° The Scholiast would explain Bhrigavah in this second place, the roasters (bhrashtārah, from bhraj, to fry) or consumers, either of the oblation or of iniquity.
9. Thou, Agni, the destroyer (of enemies) by thy strength, the possessor of great splendour, art born for the sake of sacrificing to the gods, as riches (are generated) for the sake of sacrificing to the gods: verily thy exhaltation is most brilliant, thy worship is most productive of renown; hence, undecaying Agni, (sacritizers) wait upon thee, like envoys (upon a prince; upon thee), who preservest (thy votaries) from decay.\textsuperscript{a}

10. May your praise, (oh priests), become grateful to Agni, who is deserving of laudation, who is of strength to overcome the strong, who is awakened at the dawn; to Agni, as if to a giver of cattle. Inasmuch as the presenter of the oblation repairs assiduously to every altar, the invoking priest, well skilled in (pious) praise, glorifies him (Agni) as the first of the attaining (divinitities), as a herald (recites the praises) of illustrious (men).\textsuperscript{b}

11. Agni, do thou becoming visible close to us, and partaking with benignant intent of (the sacrificial) food along with the gods, bestow upon us abundant riches, with benignant intent. Most mighty Agni, render us illustrious, that we may behold and enjoy (this earth); and grant greatness with excellent progeny to those who praise thee, possessor of wealth, destroyer of foes, like a fierce (giant) in strength.

\textsuperscript{a} Ajara, undecaying; but here explained, not causing decay; or else one who does not praise others; one to whom alone praise is due.

\textsuperscript{b} The last line of this stanza is very elliptical and inverted; it is literally, "in front, a herald, like praisers of the comers (rishusadmi), the skilled in praise, invoker of the wealthy (rishusadmi)."

Sūkta II. (CXXVIII.)
The deity, Rishi, and metre are the same as in the preceding Sūkta.

Varga XIV. 1. This Agni, the invoker of the gods, the assiduous offerer of sacrifices, is generated of man, (for the fulfilment of the) duty of those who desire (the fruit of) pious rites, as well as for (the discharge of) his own duty: he is the bestower of all blessings on him who desires his friendship, and is wealth to (such a one) seeking for food: the unobstructed offerer of oblations, he sits down, surrounded (by ministering priests), on the most sacred spot of earth, upon the footprint of Ilá.

a Like an ugra, an ogre, ugro na savasā; Sāyaṇa explains it merely by kaschit kṛūra, some one cruel or fierce.

b Nishadad-īlaspade parivita īlaspade: the first term is interpreted by Sāyaṇa, bhumyād pade, on a spot or site of ground, on the earth, to which the epithet dharāmani, occurring in the first stanza, is said to apply, meaning that spot which contains the essence of the earth, that is to say, the altar; for different texts affirm the altar to be not only the essence of the earth, but the whole earth; as, vēdim dhuh paramantam prithipyāḥ, 'they call the altar the utmost end of the earth'; and again, etavat vai prithipyāvāt vedirīti, 'so much, verily, as is the earth so much is the altar.' In the repetition, Ilā, according to the Scholiast, refers to Ilā, the daughter of Manu (see vol. i. p. 82), and pada to the spot where in the form of a cow, gorūpā, she placed her feet, pādanyasau pradeśe, alluding to the legendary account of Manu's daughter being the first institutor of sacrificial rites, and referring to some
2. We propitiate that instrument of sacrifice by the path of sacrifice, by reverential salutation, and by oblations of clarified butter; by oblations (offered) to the gods: and he accepts our offerings, and through his benignity quits not (the rite until its close), the divinity whom the wind brought from afar for the service of Manu: (may he come) from afar (to our sacrifice).\footnote{a}

3. Agni, who is ever to be hymned, the giver of food, the showerer (of benefits), comes immediately (upon our invocation), in approach to (the altar of) earth, loud-sounding, vigorous, and loud-sounding: the rapid and divine (Agni, incited by praise), manifests himself a hundred-fold by his flames; Agni, having his abode in high places, comes quickly\footnote{b} to pious rites.

4. That Agni, who is (the performer of) holy acts, the priest of the family, thinks in every dwelling of the imperishable sacrifice; he thinks of the sacrifice (reminded) by (its) celebration: for through such pious rite, he, the bestower of (fit) rewards, \footnote{a} Bhūḥ parāvata-abhāṣit, shone or made to shine; according to Śāyuṣa, placed suitably upon earth, having been brought from the distant sun; atidūram gatavata ādityaḥ abhāṣit aukhyena bhunau sthāpitavān.

\footnote{b} There is no copulative in the text: the verb is supplied by the commentator.
accepts all the offered oblations for (the good of) the worshipper; whence he has become as a guest, fed abundantly with butter; and the offerer (of the oblations) has become the realizer of the rewards (of the worship).

5. Inasmuch as (all men) offer in holy rite (food) for his satisfaction in the blazing (flames) of Agni, like (the grains that) are to be enjoyed by the winds, and like the viands that are to be given to him who solicits them; therefore the worshipper presents gifts to him, according to the extent of his opulence; and he preserves us, when oppressed (by sin), from wickedness; from overpowering malevolence and sin.

Varga XV.

6. The universal, mighty and imperious (Agni) holds riches in his right hand; but, like the sun, he loosen his grasp (in favour of his worshipper), although he relaxes not from his desire of the (sacrificial) food. Verily, Agni, thou bearest the oblation to every one of the gods who desires it; Agni grants blessings to every pious (worshipper), and opens for him the gates (of heaven).

7. Agni is a most amiable friend in human infirmity through the means of sacrifices; the beloved protector of all in sacrifices, like a victorious prince, he slights upon the oblations of men when placed upon the altar: he preserves us from the malignity of Varuṇa; from the malignity of the mighty deity (of sin).*

8. They, (the devout), praise Agni, the invoker (of the gods), the possessor of wealth, the beloved, the thoughtful; they have recourse to him as to a sovereign; they have recourse to him as the bearer of oblations: to him, who is the life (of all living beings), who knows all things, the offerer of oblations, the object of worship, the sage: the sacred (priests), desirous of affluence, murmur (his praises) to obtain his protection; desirous of affluence, they murmur (his praises) in their hymns.

Sūkta III. (CXXIX.)

The deity is Indra; the Rishi and metre are unchanged.

1. Indra, frequenter of sacrifices, quickly enable him to attain his desires, to whom thou repairest in thy car to receive the oblation; and for whom, as he is mature (in understanding) and devout, thou who art without fault, entertainest regard. Accept his offering, for thou who art without fault, art

* The expressions are rather ambiguous, trāsate Varuhasya dhāirtter maho devasya dhāirtteḥ, and the commentator seems to prefer rendering them 'preserves us from the malevolence of the obstructor of religious rites' (Varuha being explained by Vārāha, the impeder)—from the malevolence of the mighty deity presiding over sin, pāpa devadā.
prompt to favour us (among) the pious (offerers of oblations), as (thou acceptest) this our praise.

2. Hear our invocation, Indra: thou who in various battles (associated) with the Maruts, art animated through their encouragement; (and art able), with the Maruts, to destroy (thy foes): (for thou art) he, who, (aided) by heroes, art of thyself the giver (of victory); or, (when praised) by the pious, the giver of food, and whom the lords (of prayer) celebrate, as swift-moving and eager (for sacrificial food), like a fleet courser (eager for forage).

3. Thou, the subduer (of adversaries), piercest every rain (confining) skin; thou overtakest, hero, every flying mortal (cloud), and abandonest (it) when exhausted (of its water). for such glorious deed, Indra, I offer praise to thee; to heaven; to the self-glorifying Rudra; to Mitra; (to each)

a Nribhiṣ is the term of the text in both this and the preceding phrase, and is rendered by the Scholiast Maruts, or it may mean, he adds, by men, i.e. by the worshippers.

b As in the other stanzas of this hymn, the language of this is obscure; we have ydvē aruram martyrām, pairvīnākṣi martyrām, 'thou mixest with the departing mortal, thou abandonest the mortal;' the Scholiast explains the first martyrām by 'cloud,' the skin that contains the rain, urisham, tvacham, trying to escape, like an enemy, from the hero Śura; the second martyrām he also renders cloud, but it is after it has parted with its water, like an enemy who has been killed, and whom the victor abandons.

c Rudrāya svayaśase to Rudra, i.e. Agni, posseseed of his own fame, svakiyayaśo-yuktyā agnaye.
the benefactor (of mankind) for such glorious deed).

4. We desire, (priests), INDRA to be present at your sacrifice, (he who is) our friend, the frequenter of all (ceremonies), the endurer (of enemies), the ally (of his worshippers), the patient expecter of (sacrificial) viands, associated (with the Maruts): do thou, INDRA, guard our holy rite for our preservation, for in whatsoever contests (thou mayest engage), no enemy, whom thou opposest, prevails against thee; thou prevalest over every enemy whom (thou opposest).

5. Humble the adversary of every one (thy worshipper), fierce (INDRA), by thy aids, like radiant paths, (to glory); by thy powerful aids, guide us, hero, as thou hast guided our forefathers, for thou art honoured (by all). Thou, (INDRA), who art the sustainer (of the world), removest all (the (sins) of man: present at our sacrifice, thou art the bearer (of good things).

6. May I be competent to utter (praise) for the (Soma) libation, sustaining existence, which, like the (deity) to be invoked, (INDRA), goes abounding with food to (each) venerable (rite); the destroyer of Rakshusas at (each) venerable (rite). May that (libation) of itself repress with chastisement the malevolence of him who reviles us: let the thief fall downwards (and perish), like a little (water) running down (a declivity).

7. We praise thee, INDRA, with praises, making known (thy glory): we solicit, giver of riches, the wealth that bestows vigour, that is agreeable, durable, and the support of progeny. May we (ever) be possessed of (abundant) food, through the praises of thee, whom it is difficult adequately to honour: may we attain the adorable (Indra) by true and earnest invocations; by invocations, (offering sacrificial) food.

8. Indra is powerful in the discomfiture of the malevolent by his self-glorifying aids, (granted) unto you and unto us: (he is) the tearer of the malevolent (to pieces): the impetuous host that was sent against us by devouring (foes) to destroy us, has been itself destroyed: it will not reach us; it will not do us harm.

9. Do thou, Indra, come to us with abundant riches by a path free from evil; (by a path) unobstructed by Rakshasas: be with us when afar; be with us when nigh; favour us, whether afar or nigh, with the objects of our desires; ever favour us with the objects of our desires.

10. Do thou, Indra, (sustain us) with wealth that transports (man beyond calamity); for, (enhanced) greatness accrues to thee, however mighty, (from our thanks) for (thy) protection, as it does to Mitra for his powerful protection,* most potent and immortal (Indra), our defender and preserver, (ascend) some chariot, (and come hither): devourer (of foes), repel any one assailing us; any one assailing us, devourer* (of foes).

* Tvo mahimá sakshid avase mahe mitram na avase, lit. greatness is present to thee for protection as to mitra for great protection; or mitra may be rendered 'friend,' as praises animate a friend with great attachment, tamo sakhyam yathá mahatyai pritaye sambhajante.

11. Deservedly-lauded Indra, preserve us from suffering; for thou art always verily the chastiser of the malevolent: thou, being divine, (art the chastiser) of the malevolent: (thou art) the slayer of the wicked Rakshas, the preserver of a pious (worshipper), such as I am: for, asylum (of all men), the progenitor has begotten thee (for this purpose); has begotten thee, asylum (of all men), the destroyer of the Rakshasas.

Sūkta IV. (CXXX.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are continued; in the last stanza the metre is changed to Trishtubh.

1. Come to us, Indra, from afar; not as this (fire) which is before us, (but) like the pious insti- tutor of sacrifices, or like the royal lord of the constellations (when going) to his setting. Bearing *a In both places the term is Adivas, voc. of Adivat, which usually means wielder of the thunderbolt (adri); but Sêyaka here derives it from ad, to eat, and explains it battrádam atihyena bhaksaka, the eater in excess of enemies: this is upon the authority of Yëska.—Nir. iv. 4.

*b Tad janita jyâmad-vaso: Vasu may be used as a name of Indra; but as an attributive it implies one who is the abode of all, sarvesham niyâsabhûtah, according to the Scholiast. By Janitá, genitor, Sêyaka understands the first maker of the universe, the supreme being, sarvasya Adikarttad Parametwarah.

*c The passage is obscure; there is no verbal copulative; it oblations, we, along with (the priests), invoke thee to accept the effused (juices), as sons (invite) a father to partake of food: (we invoke) thee, who art most entitled to reverence, to (accept of) the sacrificial viands.

2. Drink, Indra, the Soma juice, that has been expressed by the stones, and sprinkled with the sacred grass, as a thirsty ox or a thirsty man hastens to a well. (Drink) for thy exhilaration, for thy invigoration, for thy exceedingly great augmentation: let thy horses bring thee hither, as his steeds convey the sun; as they carry him (through heaven) day by day.

3. He (Indra) found the (Soma) treasure (that had been brought) from heaven, and hidden like the nestlings of a bird in a rock; amidst (a pile of) ruins, vidathānāva satpatir astam rājeva satpatih: the first part is explained by Sāyaka the cherisher (pati quasi pdaka) of the good (sātām), or of those who are present, the priests, or of the extant (sātām) rewards of holy rites: that is, either as the Yajamāna, or in the last place, Agni, comes to or exhibits the knowledge of what is to be performed, vidathāni anuśhitēyajṇānāni; or is present in the apartments of sacrifice, vidathāni yajna-grihāni. In the reiteration of the phrase, satpati is rendered the lord of the constellations, the moon, nakṣatrāṇām pati-chandramāh; who comes to his own abode at the time of setting, sa yathā swa dhamas-thānam āgachchhati; and in like manner Indra is invited to come to the sacrifice.

* Avatam na vanasaga-tatrishāh na vanasakah: in the repetition, vanasaga is explained vananiyagamanā, sīghra gāmī, purushaḥ, a man going swiftly; but it is probably a mere reiteration, like a thirsty ox to a well—like an ox.
vast rocks inclosed (by bushes): desiring to partake (of the beverage), the thunderer (found it), as the chief of the Angirases (discovered), the hiding-place of the cows: he opened the doors of (the waters, the sources of) food, when shut up (in the clouds; the sources of) food, that were spread (over the earth).

4. Grasping his sharp thunderbolt with both hands, Indra whetted it to hurl it (on his foes), like the water (of an imprecation): he whetted it for the destruction of Åhi. Indra, who art fully endowed with strength, with energy, with might, thou cuttest (our enemies) to pieces, as a woodcutter the trees of a forest; thou cuttest them to pieces as if with a hatchet.

5. Thou hast without effort created the rivers (that are) to flow to the sea, like chariots (bearing thee to sacrifices), as those (construct) chariots who a The Soma plant, it is usually affirmed, is brought from mountainous tracts; according to the Taittirīyas it was brought from heaven by Gāyatrī,—Divi Soma āśaṁ tām Gāyatrī dharat, 'the Soma was in heaven; Gāyatrī brought it away.'

b Ishah parvīrītah is the reiterated phrase, alluding in the first place, according to Sāyāha, to the rains shut up in the clouds, and in the second to the seeds shut up in the earth, germinating on the fall of the rain, and affording, in either case, 'food,' ishah.

c That is, like water which is poured out for the destruction of enemies, rendered fatal by the formulæ of imprecation, udakam yathā katvān nirāsāndya abhimantranddisanskārena tākshahlīryate.

d Vṛthā, which usually means fruitlessly, in vain, is here explained by sprayatmena, without effort.

VOL. II.
are desirous of (going to) battle: (the streams) flowing hither have gathered together their water for a common purpose, like the cows that yielded all things to Manu; that yield all things to man.

Varga XIX.

6. Men who are desirous of wealth have recited this thy praise, as a resolute and provident man (prepares) a chariot (for a journey): they have propitiated thee for their good: glorifying thee, sage Indra, as impetuous in conflicts, they have praised thee (as men praise) a conqueror. We praise thee for (the acquirement of) strength, wealth, and every kind of affluence; as (they commend) a courser (for his good qualities) in battle.

7. For Puru, the giver of offerings, for the mighty Divodása, thou, Indra, the dancer (with delight in battle), hast destroyed ninety cities; dancer (in battle), thou hast destroyed them with (thy thunderbolt), for (the sake of) the giver of offerings. For (the sake of) Atithigwá, the fierce (Indra) hurled Sambara from off the mountain, a Nṛito, voc. of Nṛitu, a dancer; rahe narttanaktha, dancing in war.

b We have had Indra's exploits in defence of these princes before; see vol. i. pp. 137, 147, 292: it may be added that the Sambara of the Puráñas is an Asura who was engaged in hostilities with Krishña, and finally destroyed, together with his six hundred sons, by Pradyumna, the grandson of Krishña. (See Harivamsa, Langlois, vol. iii. p. 169.) The text of the Mahábhárata, however, agrees with the Veda in representing him as the adversary of Indra.—Drođa-vijaya, v. 39. Selections Mahábh. p. 39.
bestowing (upon the prince) immense treasure, (acquired) by (his) prowess; all kinds of wealth (acquired) by (his) prowess.

8. Indra, the manifold protector (of his votaries) in battles, defends his Aśīya worshipper in all conflicts; in conflicts that confer heaven: he punished for (the benefit of) man the neglecters of religious rites: he tore off the black skin (of the aggressor): as if burning (with flame), he consumes the malignant; he utterly consumes him who delights in cruelty.

9. Endowed with augmented vigour, he hurled (against the foes) the wheel (of the chariot) of the sun; and, ruddy of hue, deprived them of existence; he, the sovereign lord, deprived them of

* So Pardsara; 'two descriptions of men attain the sphere of the sun, the vagrant practiser of the Yoga, and the hero who falls in battle.'

b According to the legend, an Asura, named Krishna the black, advanced with ten thousand followers to the banks of the Ansumati river, where he committed fearful devastation, until Indra, with the Maruts, was sent against him by Brihaspati, when he was defeated by Indra, and stripped of his skin.

c Sūrashakram pravarihadr, he threw the sun's wheel; for Sūryasya rathasya chakram, the wheel of the chariot of the sun, according to the Scholiast, who cites a legend that the Asuras obtained a boon from Brahmā, that they should not be destroyed by the thunderbolt of Indra, and having in consequence defied him, he cast at them the wheel of the sun's car, which was equally fatal: this has more the character of a Paurāṇik than a Vaidik legend: another explanation is also proposed: the Sun (or Indra in that capacity) having risen, urges on his car, and existence. As thou, sage Indra, comest from afar to the succour of Usanas, so do thou come quickly, bearing all good things (to us), as thou bearest to (other) men; come quickly (to us) every day.

10. Showerer of benefits, destroyer of cities, propitiated by our new songs, reward us with gratifying blessings: glorified, Indra, by the descendants of Divodasa, increase (in power), like the sun in (revolving) days.

Sūkta V. (CXXXI.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre are unchanged; the hymn is divided into three Trichas, or triplets, according to the different occasions on which the several portions are recited, and the priests to whom the portions are respectively assigned; the first Tricha being repeated by the Maitravarsaka; the second, commencing with the third stanza, by the Brachchchhawati; and the third, beginning with the fifth verse, by the Achchhavaka.

Varga XX.

1. To Indra heaven, that excludes the wicked, verily has bowed: to Indra the wide-spread earth (has offered homage) with acceptable (praises); with acceptable praises (the worshipper has propitiated Indra) for the sake of food: all the gods well pleased have given precedence to Indra: let all

Aruha (his charioteer) silences the clamour (of his enemies); the lord (of day) dissipates the gloom.

Vācham mushtyati, lit. 'steals or takes away speech;' the latter, it is said, put by metonymy for breath, i.e. life; or it may mean silences clamour, or suppresses his own exclamations: the Scholiast is evidently puzzled by the phrase.

Divodāsebhī, by us, the Pāruchkhepas, or me, Paruchchhepa, the plur. being used honorifically.
the sacrifices of men (be appropriated) to Indra; let all the offerings of men be (presented to him).

2. Hoping to partake of thy bounties, (thy worshippers) hasten severally in every rite to (adore) thee, who ask one and all; each severally seeking heaven. We meditate on thee, the sustainer of our strength, like a boat that bears (passengers) across (a stream): mortals, indeed, knowing Indra, propitiate him with sacrifices; mortals (propitiate him) with hymns.

3. The (married) couples, anxious to satisfy

Mithandā, 'the pairs;' according to the Scholiast, couples, consisting of husband and wife; the right of the wife, which is here intimated, to take an active part in religious ceremonies is contrary to the precepts of the law, which prohibit her sharing in the celebration of any solemnity except that of marriage, and she is on no occasion to repeat mantras, sacred or Vaidik texts, The Mīndasā, however, is cited by the commentator to show that she may be associated with her husband in oblations to fire, as by the text, ṇydpati agnim adhyādām, 'let wife and husband place the fire;' and she may be instructed in the mantras for the special occasion, although not authorized to engage in a course of study of the Vedas; adhyāyanābhāve api vedam patnyai pradāya udchayet, 'since there is no regular reading (of the Veda), he (the husband), having imparted the Veda to his wife, may cause her to recite it;' and she joins in the mantra or prayer, suprabhdas tvad vayam, &c., we, having good progeny, praise thee: the prohibition, then, according to Sūrya, does not preclude a wife from taking part in sacred rites with her husband, or from joining in prayers which he has taught her, but is intended to exclude her from a course of independent study, of the Vedas and the celebration of sacrifices by herself alone.
thee, and presenting (oblations) together, celebrate (thy worship), for the sake of (obtaining) herds of cattle; presenting (thee), Indra (oblations): thou well knowest that these two persons are desirous of cattle, are desirous of heaven, and (thou abidest), displaying thy thunderbolt, the showerer (of benefits), thy constant companion, ever, Indra, associated (with thee).

4. The ancients have known of that thy prowess, by which, Indra, thou destroyest the perennial cities (of the Asuras): thou hast destroyed them, humiliating (their defenders). Thou hast chastised, Lord of Strength, the mortal who offers not sacrifice: thou hast rescued this spacious earth and these waters; exulting, (thou hast recovered) these waters.

5. Thenceforth have thy worshippers scattered (libations) for the augmentation of thy vigour, that in thy exhilaration, showerer (of benefits), thou mayst defend those who are solicitous (of thy favour); that thou mayst defend those who are desirous of (thy) friendship: for them thou hast uttered a shout to encourage them in combats; from thee they obtain many and many an enjoyment; anxious for food, they obtain it (from thee).

b Chakartha kāram. The commentator explains kāra by sābda, sound; sinkandāda lakṣhānam, meaning war-cry; or the words might be rendered, 'thou hast done a deed,' i.e. performed a service.
6. Will (Indra) be present at this our morning rite: be apprized, (Indra), of the oblation offered with (due) observances; offered with (due) observances for the sake of (obtaining) heaven: and since, wielder of the thunderbolt, showerer (of benefits), thou knowest how to destroy the malevolent, do thou, therefore, listen to the acceptable (praise) of me, intelligent, though a novice; (hear it from me) a novice.\(^a\)

7. Indra, endowed with many (excellences), do thou, who art exalted (by our praises), and art well disposed towards us, (slay) the man who is unfriendly to us; (slay) such a man, hero, with thy thunderbolt: kill him who sins against us; ever most prompt to hear, hear (us): let every ill intent (towards us, such as alarms) a wearied (traveller) on the road,\(^b\) be counteracted; let every ill intent be counteracted.

Súkta VI. (CXXXII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same; but in the last stanza Indra is associated with Parvata.

1. (Possessed of) former opulence, Maghavan, (through thy bounty); protected, Indra, by thee, may we overcome those who are arrayed in (hostile) hosts: may we anticipate (our) assailants. (The sacrifice) of to-day being nigh, speak encouragingly

\(^a\) Me navíyasa, of me most new.

\(^b\) Rishíman na yáman, like one wearied on the road; towards whom evil designs may be entertained by robbers, durmatís-chaurádivishayá.
to the presenter of the libation: May we bring together at this rite (suitable offerings and praises) to thee, the victor in war; worshipping thee, the victor in war.  a

2. In the combat which secures heaven, Indra, (treading) in the appropriate and straight path of the active (combatant), as well as in his own appropriate and straight (path), b destroys (the adversary) of him who wakes at dawn and celebrates (pious rites): he is therefore to be adored with the head (bowed down), as reverence is paid by prostration to a holy sage. May thy treasures, (Indra), be accumulated upon us; may the treasures of thee who art auspicious be auspicious (to us).

3. Indra, in whatsoever rite (the priests) from of old have placed the brilliant (sacrificial) food for thee upon the altar, in that place of sacrifice thou abidest: c do thou declare that (rite), that men may a Bhara kritam is explained in both places sangrame jayasya karttaram.

b Svasminnanjasi, are the words reiterated; epithets in both places of vakman for vakmani, marge, in the road or path; the first is as usual, own, peculiar; the latter is explained honest, straight, free from fraud, kapaiddirahite; or open, unconcealed, aprachchame.

c Ritasya varasi kshayam—yajnasya nivrasastham sambhaktosi, thou art possessed of the place of the abode of the sacrifice, termed Rita, or the true, as giving unfailing reward; or Rita may mean water, when the expression, thou abidest in the dwelling of the water, is equivalent to the sender of rain, thence behold the intermediate (firmament bright) with the rays (of the sun); for this, Indra, the searcher (of rain, is) the searcher after cattle, for (the benefit of) his kindred (worshippers), and knows in due course (the season of the rain).

4. Thy exploits, Indra, are worthy to be glorified; now, verily, as well as in former times, when thou didst open the cloud for the Angirasas, restoring to them their cattle—a—conquer for us, fight for us, as thou didst for them; humble in behalf of those who present libations, him who offers no worship; him who rages against us, and offers no worship.

vrishtisprado asi; or another interpretation is proposed, Rīta meaning the sun, and the verb having a causal power; thou causest (the sacrificer) to go to the region of the sun.

This part of the stanza requires even more than the usually necessary amplification to be rendered at all intelligible. It is sa gha vide anwinda gaveshana bandhukshidbhyo gaveshanah, literally, he verily knows in order, Indra, the searcher, for those who have the quality of kindred, the searcher; gaveshana is explained, in the first place, by the Scholiast, udakasyāvēṣhaka īlah, possessed of or practising the seeking after water, the sender of rain; in the second, it is rendered gavdm ēshanaakarita, the maker of search after the cows, alluding to the old legend; or it may mean, it is said, the seeker for the reward of the worshipper, yajamāna phalasya mārgayādā: the object of vide or anuvide, he knows in order, is filled up by udakaprapāpiprayāsam, he understands the manifestation of the attainment or arrival, in due season, of the rains.

Vrajam is the word of repetition, implying, in the first instance, according to Sāyāka, a cloud; in the second, the cattle of the Angirasas, stolen by Pāthi; the word properly meaning a cow-pen or pasture.
5. Inasmuch as the hero, (Indra), rightly judges men by their deeds, therefore do the (pious), sacrificing (to him) for sustenance, become enabled, by the wealth that has been attained, to overcome (their foes): desirous of food,* they diligently worship (him): the (sacrificial) food offered to him is the source of progeny (to the worshipper), and (men) worship him, that by their own strength they may overcome (their foes): pious sacrificers enjoy residence in the heaven of Indra;" pious sacrificers are, as it were, in the presence of the gods.

6. Indra and Parvata, who are foremost in battles, slay every one who is arrayed against us; slay every such (adversary) with the thunderbolt—(the shaft that) bent upon his destruction pursues him, however far, or to whatever hiding-place he may have fled. Thou, hero, (tallest) our enemies entirely to pieces; the tearer (of foes, the thunderbolt), rends them entirely asunder.

*a Srvasyawah, plur. of Sravasyu, derived from a nominal verb, Sravasya, from Sravas, food or fame, implying a wish or desire for either: the Scholiast proposes to render it, the first time, by 'they, desirous of food,—' and the second, by 'desirous of offering food—' oblations to Indra; but the variation does not seem to be necessary.

b The text has only Indre, in Indra; that is to say, in the abode or vicinity of Indra, agreeably to the well-known metonymy, gangayām ghoshah, a village in or on the Ganges, i.e. on the banks of the Ganges.

c Parvata is said to mean a cloud; or the deity presiding over clouds, another form of Indra.
Súkta VII. (CXXXIII.)

Indra is the deity, and the Rishi is still Paruchchhepa, but the metre is diversified: that of the first stanza is Trishtubh; of the next three stanzas, Amashtubh; of the fifth, Gâyatri; the sixth and seventh return to the long and complex measures of Dhriti and Atyashchi.

1. By sacrifice I purify both the heaven and the earth: I burn the wide (realms of earth) that are without Indra, and are (the haunts) of the wicked: wherever the enemies have congregated they have been slain: and, utterly destroyed, they sleep in a deep pit.\(^a\)

2. Devourer (of foes), having trampled on the heads of the malignant (hosts),\(^b\) crush them with thy wide-spreading foot; thy vast wide-spreading foot.

\(^a\) Vailasthánam aśera, 'they have slept,' or irregularly 'they sleep,' in a place which is of the nature of a vila, a hole, a cavern, a pit: the Scholiast considers the expression in this and in the third stanza to be equivalent to smaśána, a place where dead bodies are burned, or, as it would here seem to imply, a place where they were buried; as if it was the practice to bury the dead when this hymn was composed. Sáyaña also suggests, as an alternative, the translation of vailasthánam by nágaloka, the Serpent-world; Pátála, the regions below the earth; but this is rather Parvášik, perhaps, than Vaidik.

\(^b\) In this and the next verse the term is yádumatiänám; which may be rendered, according to the Scholiast, hiisávatáinám semánám, of injury-inflicting armies, or áyudha vatánám, of those possessing weapons; or yátu may mean Rakshasas; of hosts composed of Rakshasas.
3. Annihilate, Maghavan, the might of malignant (hosts), hurl them into the vile pit; the vast and vile pit.

4. That thou hast destroyed, by thy assaults, thrice fifty of such (hosts), is a deed that well becomes thee, although thought by thee of little moment.

5. Destroy, Indra, the tawny-coloured, fearfully-roaring, Pibâchî;\(^a\) annihilate all the Rakshasas.

6. Hurl headlong, Indra, the vast (cloud): hear our supplications: verily the heaven is in sorrow like the earth, through fear, wielder of the thunderbolt, (of famine),\(^b\) as (formerly through fear of) Twashtri:\(^c\) most powerful with mighty energies, thou assailest, Indra, (the clouds) with terrible blows; and, doing no injury to man, (thou marchest) invincible, hero, by (thine) enemies; attended, hero, by three or by seven followers.\(^d\)

\(^a\) A kind of Pibâcha; or, according to some, 'decay.'

\(^b\) From the absence of rain.

\(^c\) Ghrîndâ-ns bhisā: ghrîda is said to be a name of Twashtri, or of blazing fire personified: according to the legend, the world being enveloped by thick darkness, the gods prayed to Agni, on which he burst forth suddenly from heaven and earth, in the shape of Twashtri, to the dismay of both regions, as by the text, sa chobbe Twashtur bibhyatuh.

\(^d\) Trisaptaih śrasatwabhîh; the Scholiast explains it tribhiḥ saptahibhir ud. anucharaih, but gives no further interpretation: Indra's followers, the Maruts, are forty-nine, so that they cannot be intended; and Satwabhîh must mean something else: perhaps an allusion is intended to the seven platters offered to the Maruts repeated at the three daily rites; or, attended by the beings, i.e.
7. Offering libations, (the worshipper) obtains a (safe) asylum: offering libations, he destroys his prostrate foes; (he destroys) the enemies of the gods: abounding with food, and unsubdued (by adversaries), he hopes to attain, when offering libations, infinite (riches), for Indra grants to him who offers libations whatever there is (that he desires); he grants (him) accumulated wealth.

ANUVÁKA XX.

Súkta I. (CXXXIV.)

The deity is Váyu; the Rishi Paruchchhepa; the metre Aśvatsñi, except in the last stanza, in which it is Aṣñi.

1. Let thy swift coursers, Váyu, bring thee quickly hither, that thou mayst be the first to drink; the first (of the gods) to drink* of the Soma libation. May our upraised, discriminating, and sincere (praise) be acceptable to thy mind: come with thy steed-yoked car* for (the libation) to be presented to thee; come, Váyu, for granting* (the objects of our worship).

Varga XXIII.

the Maruts, to whom the thrice seven offerings are presented. See vol. i. 191, note.

* In both places the phrase is 'púrvavataye,' for the first drinking; Sāyana supplies, in the second, itaradevabhyah prá, before other gods.

b Níyutwata rathena, with the car having the Níyuts; the horses of Váyu so denominated.

c Dvame is the expression in both places, from ddev, a vaidik verb, to give; the Scholiast explains it as in the text; in the first instance in a passive sense, or 'come for that which is to be
2. May the exhilarating drops (of the libation) exhilarate thee, VĀYU, being fitly prepared, doing their office, administered opportuneiy, rendered efficacious by (our) praises, and flowing (in due season): for which purpose, thy docile and active steeds, the Niyus; attending (thy presence, bring thee) to the sacrificial hall to accept the offering; to the sacrifice in which the pious (priests) represent their desires.

3. VĀYU yokes to his car his two red horses; VĀYU (yokes) his purple steeds: VĀYU (yokes) his two unwearied (coursers) to his car to bear their burthen; for most able are they to bear the burthen. Arouse, VĀYU, the intelligent (sacrificer), as a gallant (awakens) his sleeping mistress: summon heaven and earth; light up the dawn; light up the dawn, (to receive) thy sacrificial food.

4. For thee, the brilliant dawns, (rising) from afar, spread abroad their auspicious raiment in inviting rays; in variegated and glorious rays: for given by us; dātavyāya; in the second, in an active sense, or 'for giving to us that which we solicit.'

b The first term is rohitā, the second Aruhā; the latter usually denotes purple.

c Dansu rākmishu: the meaning of the first seems rather doubtful; dansu, the commentator says, may be used for danseshu, karmavatsu, doing their work, or dansa may mean a house, in rays investing or covering the world like a house; or thee, the cow that yields ambrosia\textsuperscript{*} milks all kinds of treasure: thou begettest the Maruts, of the firmament, for (the purpose of) showering rain; (for the purpose of replenishing) the rivers.

5. For thee, the bright, pure, quick-flowing (Soma juices), potent for exhilaration, are eager for the (fire of) oblation; are eager for the cloud (showering) waters.\textsuperscript{b} The timid and anxious (worshipper) praises thee, who art auspicious, for (driving away) thieves;\textsuperscript{c} for thou defendest (us) from all beings, (as the reward) of our righteousness: thou protectest us from the fear of evil spirits, (as the reward) of our righteousness.

6. Thou, \textit{Vāyu}, who art preceded by none, art: entitled to drink first of these our libations: thou art entitled to drink of the effused (juices), moreover, (of all) oblations and sin-offerings of men: for

\textsuperscript{b} The oblations that are offered to fire are the remote cause of the rain; the text has \textit{ishananta bhurvan yapâm ishantah bhurvani}: in the first place, \textit{bhurvan} is explained by \textit{yajña}, a sacrifice; in the second, a cloud; the passage is rather obscure.

\textsuperscript{c} \textit{Twām bhagam takkaviye}: the second is considered to imply \textit{bhajanīyam}, for which a precise equivalent is not easily found; that which is to be enjoyed; that which is agreeable or acceptable; the last is explained \textit{taskardnam}, \textit{yajña vighdtindm anyatra gamandya}, for causing to go elsewhere thieves, \textit{i.e.} the obstructers of sacrifices.
thee, their cattle yield milk; (for thee) they yield butter.

Só̮̄kta II. (CXXXV.)

The Rishi is the same; the three first stanzas are addressed to Váyu; the next five to Indra also; and the last to Váyu alone; the metre is the same, except in the seventh and eighth stanzas, in which it is Ashvi.

Varga XXIV.

1. Approach our strewn grass, Váyu, with (thy) thousand steeds, to partake of the (offered) food, (prepared) for the lord of the steeds; (approach) with hundreds (to the sacrifice prepared) for the lord of the steeds: the gods hold back for thee as the deity (entitled) first to drink (the libation): sweet effused juices are ready for thy exhilaration; are ready for their function.

2. For thee this Soma juice, purified by the stones (that bruise the plant), and clothed with a Áśāram, in the first place, is explained by kshāram; in the second, by ghrita; being in either dhrayana dhrayam, an article which is the material of oblations and the like.

b Pariśūta adribhīt, which the Scholiast explains by abhiśava-bodhanaiv apagatarijātāt vena bōdhitaḥ, 'purified by the impurity which has been removed by the purifying means of the effusion; the sense of Rūpaḥ is doubtful; in Mahādhara's commentary on a text of the Yajur, iii. 25, it is explained gatastrāḥ Soma; Soma that has lost its strength; and Sūrya similarly explains it in a subsequent passage—Asht. iii. Adhy. ii. S. vii. v. 10; but that could scarcely be restored by mechanical means: again, it is explained dasāpavitra-bodhanena grahanena vā bōdhita, purified by straining through kṣaṇa grass, or by taking hold of; but the last must have some technical application.
enviable (splendour), flows to its (appropriate) receptacle; clothed with brilliant (splendour), this Soma is offered as thy portion amongst men and amongst gods; (having received it), harness thy horses, and depart well affected towards us; gratified, and well disposed towards us, depart.

3. Come with hundreds and thousands of thy steeds to our sacrifice to partake of (the sacrificial) food; (come), Vāyu, to partake of the oblations: this is thy reasonable portion, and it is radiant along with the sun; the juices borne by the priests are prepared; the pure juices, Vāyu, are prepared.

4. Let the chariot drawn by the Niyuts convey you both, (Indra and Vāyu, to the sacrifice), for our preservation, and to partake of the consecrated viands; to partake, Vāyu, of the oblations: drink of the sweet beverage; for the first draught is your (joint) due. Vāyu (and Indra), come with joy-

\[a\] Spartha vasánah, explained sprihanásyám tejásai pidhánah, putting on desirable or enviable splendours.

\[b\] Pari kośam arśhati-kosa sthánīyam graham prāpnoti, it goes to the ladle, as it were, in place of a receptacle.

\[c\] Sarasmīḥ sūrye sacht may also be understood, according to Sāyadā, to imply that the offering is simultaneous with sunrise: the first part of the verse occurs in the Yajur, xxvii. 28; the latter is different, or “Vāyu, delight in this sacrifice, and do you, (priests), preserve us ever by auspicious rites.”

\[d\] Sāyadā seems rather perplexed how to adjust precedence between Vāyu and Indra; but, upon the authority of other texts, assigns it to Vāyu, which concurs with the order of the text in this place; in which, as well as in some others, we have the bestowing wealth; Indra (and Vāyu), come with wealth.

5. The pious acts (addressed) to you have given augmented (efficacy) to our sacrifices: for you, (the priests) strain this quick-dropping juice, as (the grooms rub down)\(^a\) a fleet, quick-running courser: \(^b\) drink of their (libations), and come hither, well disposed towards us, for our protection: do you both drink of the juices that have been expressed by the stones, for you are both givers of food.

\(^{Varga\ XXV.}\)

6. These Soma juices, poured out in our rites, and borne by the priests, are prepared for you both: the pure juices, Vāyu (and Indra), are prepared: these pervading (juices) have passed through the oblique filter\(^c\) for you both; the Soma juices intended for you both, pass through the woolly fleece; the inexhaustible Soma juices.\(^d\) nominative in the singular, with the verb in the dual, thus: Vāyavedgatam; Indrascha-dgatam; implying, therefore, that one of the two is understood; or, in the first instance, it should be Vāyu and Indra; in the second, Indra and Vāyu.

\(^a\) The text has no verb here; but the comparison intends the preceding verb, marmrijanta, have strained or cleaned, or rubbed.

\(^b\) Vājinam, dūmatyam na vājinam, lit. going quick, like a quick horse going quick.

\(^c\) Abhyasrikshata tirah pavitraṃ: the latter term is usually applied to a bundle of kūsa grass, which is supposed to purify the Soma or the butter poured upon it; it is here explained the receiver of the Soma juice placed slopingly or obliquely, or a filter or strainer made of wool.

\(^d\) Atiromāhyayayād Somaso atyayayād: in the first place, the
7. Pass, (VĀYU), by the many sleeping (worshippers), and go (with INDRA) to the house where the stone resounds: INDRA (and VĀYU), go to that dwelling; (go where) the (word of) truth is manifest; (go where) the butter flows; go both with well-fed horses to the sacrifice; INDRA (and VĀYU), repair to the sacrifice.

8. Then, accept the libations of the sweet juice at the sacrifice in which the triumphant priests stand round the rock-born (plant):* may they ever be victorious for us: (for you) together the cows distil (their milk); the (offering of) barley is dressed; and never for thee, (VĀYU), will the cows grow meagre; never will the kine be carried off (by thieves).b

9. These thy horses, excellent VĀYU, strong of limb, youthful and full of vigour, bear thee through the space between heaven and earth: growing (are they) in bulk, and strong as oxen: they are not lost

*Soma juices having gone through (ati) the unclipped (avayādhi for achchinnādi) hairs; or avayād may be intended for avimayādhi, made from the sheep, sheep's wool; fall into the vessel that receives them; in the second place, avayās is said to bear its ordinary meaning, unexpended, unexhausted.

*a Abhavatham upatishtanti: Abhavtha is, in common use, the Religious figtree; but Sāyaka explains it here as the Soma found spread through mountains and the like, parvatádi vyóptipradeśe sthitam.

b Na upadasyanti dhenavah-ndpa dasyanti dhenavah: upadas is explained to mean infirm, or wasted by sickness; apadas, to be carried off by thieves.
in the firmament, but hold on their speed, unretarded by reviling; difficult are they to be arrested as the beams of the sun; difficult are they to be arrested by force.

Sūkta III. (CXXXVI.)

The Rishi is the same; the deities are Mitra and Varuna; the metre is Atyashā, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

Varga XXVI.

1. Offer most excellent and ample adoration, and reverential oblation, to those two deities who have existed from of old; who confer happiness (on their worshippers), and delight in most sweet (libations); for they are both imperial (sovereigns, in whose honour) oblations of butter are poured out, and who are glorified at every sacrifice, whence their might is not in any way to be opposed; their divinity is not to be resisted.

2. The most excellent Dawn has been seen proceeding to the comprehensive (rite): the path of the revolving (sun) has been lighted up by (his) rays: the eyes of men (have been opened) by the

\[a\] Agirnukasaḥ, lit. having no dwelling by speech; according to the Scholiast, they are not brought to a stop by abusive speech or the like, bhartsanddind sthitim alabhamanāḥ.

\[b\] Hastayor dur-niyantavah, difficult to be checked by both hands, or by physical force: they are not to be deterred by words, such as woḥ woḥ; or by pulling up the reins, from coming to the sacrifice.

\[c\] Tā samrajāḥ: or samrajāḥ, may be rendered greatly or thoroughly shining, samyak-rājamanau.
rays of Bhaga: the brilliant mansion of Mitra, of Aryaman, of Varuna, (has been lighted up by his rays), and therefore do you two accept the commendable and copious oblation; the praiseworthy and copious oblation.

3. (Your worshipper) has prepared ground (for the altar), free from defect, radiant (with sacrificial fire), and conferring heaven: come to it together every day, you who are vigilant; every day (at sacrifices) receive invigorated energy (by coming hither), sons of Aditi, lords of munificence: of those two, Mitra is the animator of mankind, and so is Varuna; Aryaman (likewise) is the animator of mankind.

4. May this Soma libation be gratifying to Mitra and Varuna, to be enjoyed by them as they drink of it, inclining downwards; a divine (beverage), fit to be enjoyed by the gods: may all the gods, well pleased, to-day accept it; therefore, royal (deities), do as we request: you, who are ever truthful, do as we request.

a Nothing more is meant by all this, according to the Scholiast, than that the firmament is lighted by the sun; the several names being designations or forms of the sun, specified severally by way of multiplying his praises.

b Ydstayaj-janah, by whom men are being impelled to exertion, or incited to the discharge of their respective functions: as applied to Aryaman, in the repetition, the Scholiast says it may imply one by whom the irreligious, or those not performing religious worship, may be cast into the infernal regions, ydtyamdnah-nipdtyamdnah-narake.
5. Whatever individual offers adoration to Mitra and Varuna, do you preserve him entirely unharmed from sin; (preserve) from sin the mortal who presents you (with oblations): may Aryaman protect him who is sincere in his devotion, who offers worship addressed to both (Mitra and Varuna) with prayers; who offers worship with praises.

6. I proclaim veneration to the mighty Sun, to heaven and earth, to Mitra, to the benevolent Varuna, to the conferrer of happiness, the showerer of benefits. Praise Indra, Agni, the brilliant Aryaman, and Bhaga, so that, enjoying long life, we may be blessed with progeny; we may be happy through the protecting virtues of the Soma.

7. Worshipping Indra, and favoured by the Maruts, may we rely upon the protection of the gods; and may we, affluent (through their bounty), enjoy the felicity which Agni, Mitra, and Varuna are bestowing (upon us).

* Varuhkaṃ mithushe sumrīṣādya mithushe: the Scholiast separates the first attributive from Varuna, and considers it to be an epithet of Rudra, the showerer of desired benefits, abhimataphalasektire; the two next words he applies equally to Mitra, Varuna, and Rudra; but it does not seem to be necessary to associate Rudra with the other two, especially as it is not so directed in the Anukramanī.
SECOND ADHYÁYA.

SÚKTA IV. (CXXXVII.)

The deities are Mitra and Varuṇa; the Rishi Paruchchhēpa; the metre Atiśākkara.

1. Come, (Mitra and Varuṇa, to our sacrifice); where we express (the Soma juice) with stones: these juices mixed with milk are exhilarating; these (juices) are exhilarating: come to us, royal divinities, dwellers in heaven, and our protectors; these juices are mixed with milk for you, Mitra and Varuṇa; they are pure, mixed with milk.

2. Come, for these dripping Soma juices are mixed with curds; they are expressed and mixed with curds; whether they be prepared for you at the awaking of the dawn, or (be associated) with the rays of the sun: the juice is effused for Mitra and for Varuṇa, for their drinking the grateful (libation); for their drinking at the sacrifice.

3. They milk for you two with stones, that succulent creeper, like a productive milch cow; they milk the Soma plant with stones: come to us as our protectors; be present with us to drink the Soma juice: this Soma juice has been effused, Mitra and Varuṇa, for you both; effused for your drinking.

*Matsarrdh: in the repetition Śdyaṇa suggests also the usual sense of 'envious; the Soma juices offered on this occasion being envious or emulous of those presented at other ceremonies.
Śakta V. (CXXXVIII.)

Varga II.

1. The greatness of the strength of the many-worshipped Pūshan is universally lauded; no one detracts (from his praise); his praise displeases no one. Desirous of happiness, I adore him, whose protection is ever nigh; who is the source of felicity; who, when devoutly worshipped, blends with the thoughts of all (his worshippers): who, (though) a deity, is united with the sacrifice.

2. I exalt thee, Pūshan, with praises, that thou mayest hasten (to the sacrifice), like a rapid (courser) to the battle: that thou mayest bear us across the combat, like a camel: therefore do I, a mortal, invoke thee, the divine bestower of happiness, for thy friendship; and do thou render our invocations a Mana āryave mako, deva āryuve makhah are the words of the text, intending, no doubt, although obscurely, to identify Pūshan, spiritually or mystically, with the performer and the performance of the worship: the Scholiast gives a rather different interpretation: in the first instance, makhah is rendered yajna-vāṁ, having or receiving sacrifice, who thereupon confers the boon the sacrificer solicits, thus 'mixing with' or assenting to his thoughts or mind (mana āryuve samantād miśrayati-śighra vara pradānti); in the reiteration makha is considered to be put for makham, objective case, the sacrifice, with which Pūshan mixes, or is present at, until completed, sampurtiparyantam miśrayati. Another rendering is also proposed, but it is not more satisfactory.

b Ushtro na, like a camel; as a camel bears a burthen, is the explanation of the commentary.
productive (of benefit); render them productive (of success) in battles.

3. Through thy friendship, Púshan, they who are diligent in thy praise and assiduous in thy worship enjoy (abundance), through thy protection; by (assiduous) worship they enjoy (abundance); as consequent upon thy recent favour, we solicit infinite riches. Free from anger, and entitled to ample praise, be ever accessible to us; be our leader in every encounter.

4. Free from anger, and liberal of gifts, be nigh to us, Ajáswa, for the acceptance of this our (offering); be nigh to those, Ajáswa, who solicit food: we have recourse to thee, destroyer of enemies, with pious hymns. I never cease, Púshan, accepter of offerings, to think of thee; I never disregard thy friendship.

a Dyumninaskridhi, make them possessed of wealth; dyumna having that meaning: the commentator renders it in the first instance brilliant, dyotanavatah; or having fame or food, yasovatah or annavatah; in the reiteration he proposes the latter as the result of conquests.

b He who is drawn by goats, or has goats for horses, according to Yáska.
Sūkta VI. (CXXXIX.)

The Ṛishi is the same; the deities are various, under the collective designation of Viśwa-devas. The first verse is addressed to Agni, Indra, and Vāyu; the second to Mitra and Varuṇa; the three next to the Aświns; in the sixth, Indra is again addressed, Agni in the seventh, and the Maruts in the eighth; Indra and Agni are associated in the ninth; Brīhaspati is hymned in the tenth, and all together in the eleventh. The metre also varies; that of the fifth verse is Brīhati, and of the eleventh Trishtubh; in the rest it is Atyashī; after which we take leave for the present of this long, complicated, and embarrassing construction.

Varga III.

1. May our prayers be heard. a I place before (me) Agni with reverence; we have recourse to his celestial might; we have recourse to Indra and to Vāyu: which doing, a new (hymn) has been addressed (by us) to the radiant navel (of the earth); b a Astu Śravaḥat, which the Scholiast explains asydh siter kṛvaṇam bhavatu, may there be a hearing of this hymn; or srotā bhavatu, may Agni or other deity be a hearer. In ordinary use Śravaḥat is an exclamation uttered when the butter is poured upon the fire, on the altar, as an offering to the gods, and it is not impossible that it may have some such signification here.

b We have had occasion to notice the expression before, as intending the altar; or it may mean, according to Śāyāna, the sacrifice, agreeably to the text, yajnam abh bhuvanaśya nābhim, they have called the sacrifice the navel of the world; the text adds vivasvat, explained by the commentator dīptamati, shining; the stanza occurs in the Śāma, i. 461, where Professor Benfey considers that Vivasvat, the Sun-god, is intended as identified with Vāyu and Indra.
and thereupon may our pious rites attain the gods; may our pious rites attain the presence of the gods.

2. Mitra and Varuna, bestow (upon us) abundantly that unenduring water which you obtain from the sun, through your own energy; through the inherent energy of the vigorous: may we thus behold your golden (forms) in our halls of sacrifice, (brought thither) by our sacred rites, and by our thoughts and senses (intent upon you); by our senses (intent upon offering) the Soma libation.

3. Aswins, men who desire to glorify you with (their) hymns, cause, as it were, their praises to be heard, propitiating you with oblations; for, from you, who are possessed of all opulence, (they obtain) every kind of wealth and abundant food. Dasräs, the fellows (of the wheels) of your honey-laden car drop honey, (carried) in your golden (car).*

4. Dasräs, your purpose is known: you would repair to heaven: your charioteers harness (your steeds) for your heavenward journey; the horses that injure not (the car) on your journey to heaven.

* Hiranyaye rathe Dasrā hiranyaye: the epithet usually means 'golden:' but Sāyāka interprets it, in the first place, by madhu-pūrṇa, and consistently with that interpretation explains prusyante pavayaḥ, the circumferences of the wheels distil (kṣaṇi, sravanti), or scatter honey, as they revolve: in the reiteration he proposes to render it by 'pleasing, heart-delighting:' hridaya-rāmaṇa; and to supply a supposed ellipse, by haṁr-vahatam, 'convey the oblation in your delightful chariot,' but this does not seem to be necessary.
We have placed you, Dases, in your golden three-shafted chariot, going by an (easy) road to heaven, humiliators (of enemies), and principal regulators of the rain.

5. Enriched by holy rites, grant us, by day and night, (all good things), on account of our pious acts: never may your donations, never may our (donations), be withheld.

Varga IV.

6. Indra, showerer (of blessings), these effused juices, (expressed) by stones, and which have sprung (from mountain plants), are for thy drinking; these libations have burst forth for thee: may they satisfy thee as an offering presented (in the hope of receiving) great and wonderful riches. Acceptor of laudations, come to us, glorified by our hymns; come to us well pleased.

7. Agni, listen attentively when thou art praised by us, and repeat (those praises) to the gods who are entitled to worship; to the royal (deities) entitled to worship: on which account the gods gave to the Angirasas the milch cow which Aryaman milked for (thee), b the maker (of all), together with the gods; that cow (the nature of a Anjasd bajas rajas: the latter Sāyaka interprets by udākam, water; vṛṣṭi-lakshadam, metonymy for rain.

b The Scholiast quotes a legend, stating that the Angirasas, having propitiated the gods, solicited the gift of a cow; the gods gave them the cow of plenty, but they were unable to milk her, and applied to Aryaman, who drew from the cow milk convertible to butter for oblations to fire.
which thou hast said), he, along with me, comprehends.

8. Never, Maruts, may your glorious energies be exerted against us; may our (riches) never diminish: never may our towns decay: and may whatever is wonderful, admirable, immortal, or (whatever is recognized to be living), from its sound, that has been yours from age to age, (devolve) upon us; whatever is most difficult (of attainment) bestow upon us; whatever is most difficult (to be attained).

9. The ancient Dadhyanch, Angiras, Priyamedha, Kauwa, Atri, Manu; have known my birth: they who were of old and Manu have known (my progenitors); for of them is long life a Esha tām vedā me sachā, he knows her along with me; explained by the Scholiast Aryamāham api jānāmi, either I, Aryamā, or I and Aryamā know her: in what way or to what effect is not specified: the addition to the text is conjectural.

b The text has only ghoshāt, put for ghoshāh, plur. sounds, noises: according to the comment and by metonymy, those who utter them, either cattle or people.

c These ancient Rishis have all been named before. See index to the first Ashṭāka.

d The birth of me, Paruchchhepas, the Rishi of the hymn; he is subsequent to them, or of more recent date.

e Te me pūrve manor viduh: the Scholiast supplies pitṛdēn, fathers, &c.; he also proposes Manavah in the plur. for Manu, but that is scarcely necessary, unless pūrve be considered as the adjective of Manavah, implying former Manus, and involving a recognition of the system of Manwantaras, the vaidik origin of which is yet to be determined: Sāyāha, however, disconnects the amongst the gods, and in them is our existence: a for the sake of their high station, I adore (the gods) with praise; I worship INDRA and AGNI with praise.

10. Let the invoker (of the gods) offer sacrifice, and may they, desirous of the offering, (partake of) the acceptable (libation): BṛHASPATI himself, desiring (the libation), celebrates worship with libations; with copious and excellent libations. We catch from a distant quarter the sound of the stones, whereby the performer of pious acts has of himself secured the waters (of the clouds): b the performer of pious acts c (has secured) many habitations.

11. Gods who are eleven in heaven; who are terms, and applies pūrve to those previously named, Dadhyanche and the rest; manavās-cha and the Manus.

a Asmākam tiṣṭhau nābhayaḥ, in them are our 'navels,' a rather unintelligible phrase; Sāyāka would explain it by vital airs, in connection with life, jīvona saha sambandhavataḥ prāṇaḥ; or by sacrifices in relation to their rewards, phalenā sambaddhāḥ ydgāḥ. There are various readings of the commentary on this verse, of which none are quite satisfactory: they are specified by Prof. Müller, vol. ii. p. xx., and he proposes a version somewhat differing from that above given: it is not easy to say which is most correct.

b Tman śadhrayad avarindaṇḍi, explained vrīḍhi iṣṭakāmyavidakāṇḍi ātmana śādhrayati, he sustains by himself the waters, that is, the rains; or it may be rendered, he produces such waters by his sacrifices, tāḍrīkāmyudakāṇṭi yāgena utpādayati, rain being the result of worship.

c Sukratuḥ, which is repeated, may indicate either the Yajamāna or Bṛhhaspati, as the ādhwaryu, or ministering priest.
eleven on earth; and who are eleven dwelling with glory in mid-air;* may ye be pleased with this our sacrifice.

ANUVÁKA XXI.

SÚKTA I. (CXL.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi is Dārghata, the son of Uchathya; the metre is Jāgati, except in the two last stanzas, in which it is Trishtubh.

1. Prepare a (fit) place, as it were an offering, for the radiant Agni, who is seated on the altar, and fond of his station: strew the sacred, light-bearing, bright and gloom-dispelling (spot), with agreeable (kuśa grass), as with a garment.

2. (Agni), the two-fold generated, devours the triple (sacrificial) food,* and when the year expires renovates what has been eaten: the showerer (of benefits) is invigorated (in one form), by eating

*a See vol. i. p. 97, and note, p. 121. The verse is repeated in the Yajush, vii. 19. No explanation is given of the powers of these three classes, nor are their names specified: they seem to be something different from the thirty-three deities of the Purdhás.

*b The reading of the Purdhás is invariably Uttathya, but this is the reading of the several MSS. of the text and of the Anukramanikā.

*c Either as produced by attrition from the two sticks, or in the first instance by attrition, and in the second from consecration for sacrificial use.

*d Triyutid-annam. 1. Clarified butter; 2. Purodāsa, butter, with other articles or cakes fried in butter; and 3. Soma juice.

*e That is, the same articles are offered annually.
with the tongue of another; in a different form the restrainer (of all) consumes the forest trees.*

3. Both his associated mothers, blackened (by combustion), are in movement, and give birth to an infant, whose tongue (of flame glows) in the east: (who) dissipates darkness; (who) rapidly issues forth; (who) is readily developed; (who) is (ever) to be cherished, and is the augmenter (of the prosperity) of his parent, (the institutor of the rite).

4. The (flames of Agni),b light-moving, dark-tracked, quick (consuming), capricious, restless, lambent, fanned by the wind, wide-spreading, and ensuring liberation (to the devout), are kindled for (the benefit of) the pious reverencer of (holy) priests.

*a Some of this is obscure; anyasya-ḍāḥ jihvayād jenyo vrishtananyayena-mrīshita, lit. the victorious showerer by the mouth-tongue of another; by another consumes. Sāyāha explains ḍāḥ by ḍasyena, with the mouth; anyasya, of the oblation; or with the mouth in one form (or sacrificial fire) he receives the oblation through the tongue of another; that is, the ladle of the ministering priests; in another form, that is, the fire that burns forests, dāvāgni, he consumes the trees.

b This is inserted by the Scholiast, for the stanza is made up of epithets only; they are not easily provided with equivalents, as raghu-dravah, going lightly; kṛishnaudcvasah, black-pathed; juvah, quick; asamantr, not same minded,—some going east, some west; or it may mean of different colours; ajirprava, moving; raghuṣkpudah, light-gliding; vṛttajūṭd, wind-impelled; dāvah, pervading; munukshswah, giving liberation.
5. Thereupon those (flames of Agni) extend together in all directions, dispersing gloom, and spreading great light along the path of darkness; when (Agni) illumines repeatedly the whole earth, and proceeds panting, thundering, and roaring aloud.

6. He stoops down among the bushes as if embellishing them (with his lustre), and rushes roaring like a bull amongst (a herd of) cows: thence increasing in intensity, he enhances (the fierceness) of his form, and is difficult to be arrested as a formidable (animal), when he brandishes his horns.

7. Now hidden, now displayed, he seizes (on the fuel), as if understanding (the purpose of the worshipper), and even reposes amidst the conscious (flames): again they break forth, and repair to the divine (fire of sacrifice), blending with which they give a different (luminous) form to their parents, (heaven and earth).

8. The curving tresses (of the flames) embrace him, (Agni), and when expiring spring aloft again to (greet) their coming (lord); rescuing them from

*Vrisheva patnir abhyeti: Sāyaka renders patnīḥ, by pālayitrīḥ, those who cherish him, Agni, that is, bushes, timber; but this would not be a comparison, as is implied by īva; patnī is ordinarily a wife, and may here be applicable to a cow; the translation, however, is in some respects conjectural.

b Agratah keśinah: agruvaḥ usually means ‘fingers;’ here it is an attributive, implying, according to the Scholiast, either those that are in front, agratah sthitdh, or crooked or curved like fingers.

VOL. II. F
decrepitude, he comes sounding aloud, generating (in them) intenser animation and unimpaired vitality.

9. Licking up the (verdant) vesture of the mother (of all things, earth), the rapid (Agni) proceeds with resounding existences: grants sustenance to (every) footed (creature); ever consuming (fuel), so that a blackened track follows (his path).

10. Shine, Agni, in our opulent (abodes), vivifying, showering (blessings), bounteous, casting off infantine (glimmerings); blaze (fiercely), repelling repeatedly, like a coat of mail, (our enemies) in combats.

11. May this oblation, Agni, carefully placed upon the rugged but agreeable (pile of fuel), be most acceptable to thee, so that the pure radiance of thy person may shine brightly, and thou mayst grant us wealth.

12. Bestow, Agni, upon our excellent patron a boat ever fitted with oars and feet, (one that may b Padvate, to that which has feet; either bipeds or quadrupeds.

c Rathāya na grihāya, lit. 'to our carriage-house;' according to the Scholiast the first word is an adjective for ranhādāya, agreeable; griha, a house, applies to the Yajamāna, as the asylum of the needy, or of the priests.

d Nāvam nitydritrām padvātām: the boat is explained by Yajna the sacrifice, the oars are the priests, the materials are the fuel and apparatus, and the feet are the divinities, the prayers, and offerings.
render) our posterity prosperous, and may bear mankind across (the ocean of life) to felicity.

18. Agni, be propitiated by this our earnest praise, and may heaven and earth, and the spontaneously-flowing (streams), provide for us the produce of the herd, and of the field; and may the purple coursers (of the dawn) bestow upon us abundant food through a length of days.

Sūkta II. (CXLI.)

1. Verily, that visible radiance of the divine (Agni) has been so apprehended (by all, that it may be) for (the support of) the body, for which end it has been generated by (bodily) strength: and that my mind may apprehend and apply (that radiance), they address the sacred prayers associated with oblations (to Agni).

2. First, he reposes (on the earth) as the digestive (faculty), the embodied, the accepter of food, the eternal: secondly, (he dwells) among the seven auspicious mothers (of fertility): thirdly, the associated (regions) generate him, delighting in the ten

b Vapuh, explained vapushmat, having body; but the Scholiast interprets it saritābhīvyāddhi ketuh, the cause of the growth of the body.

c Saptasivādu maṣṭrisu, the rains fertilizing the seven lokas, or worlds.
(quarters) of space, for the sake of milking this showerer (of rain)."a

3. As powerful priests extract by the force (of prayer),b this Agni from his primitive seat, (for the evolvement) of his mighty form; as the wind arouses him lurking in the hiding-place (of the altar), for the sake of offering oblations now as of old:

4. As from the excellence of the nutritious (offering), he, (Agni), is brought forth, and the consumable branches rise amidst (the flames);c and *a Asya vriisha-bha-sya dohase is the vague phrase of the text: according to Sāyaṇa, allusion is intended to the rays of the sun: in the preceding sentence, Agni is said to be represented as the terrestrial, maturative, or digestive fire, and as the electrical or ethereal element, or lightning in the antariksha, or firmament; here he is identified with solar fire, or the sun in heaven, or as the solar rays, which in the hot season milk, as it were, the earth by the evaporation of its moisture, which is thus conveyed to the solar region, whence it is transferred to the clouds, and in due season descends again in rain.

b Or by bodily strength, applied to attrition as producing fire.

c Pra yat pituh paramān-nyaye paryā prikshudho virudho dānsa rohati is a very unintelligible line; pituh paramīt, from the excellence of the sacrificial or other nutriment or food, is comprehensible; but it is also proposed to explain pituh as the genitive of pītṛ, a father or progenitor, that is, figuratively, the gṛha-patya Agni, from which fire is taken, nyaye, to the dhavanīya: prikṣhudha may mean, it is said, that which is to be consumed amongst the offerings, or what expects or desires to be consumed; virudh is unexplained; in its ordinary acceptation of shrub or creeper, it may be put for fuel; dānsa is put for danteshu, teeth; which, as applicable to Agni, will be flames; dārohati, the Scholiast affirms, is used for dārohanī, the sing. for the plur.
as both (the institutor of the rite and the priest) combine for his generation, therefore has he been generated, pure, youthful, and radiant.

5. Therefore has the brilliant Agni entered the maternal (quarters of space), amidst which, pure and unharmed, he had evolved into magnitude, so that he mounted (the bushes) placed before him, as he had (consumed others) prior to them, and runs rapidly among the more recent and inferior branches.

6. Pious worshippers then adore the invoker (of the gods), for (the propitiation of) the dwellers in heaven, as (such men) adore a powerful prince, since the many-lauded, and all-upholding (Agni) knows how by (holy) act and (bodily) strength to bring together the gods and their mortal worshipper for the sake of obtaining (mutual) sustenance.

7. Since the adorable (Agni), impelled by the wind, spreads in various directions, like an insincere and unrestrained chatterer, (who utters indiscriminate) praises, therefore the world is assiduous in the worship of him, the consumer of all, whose way is dark, who is pure of birth, and follows various paths.

8. Like a chariot drawn by ropes, Agni, set in movement by his own revolving members (his flames); proceeds to the heavens; the paths he traverses are blackened by smoke, as he consumes (the fuel), and (beasts and) birds fly from his radiance as (enemies fly from the prowess) of a hero.

9. By thee, Agni; Varuna, observant of his duties, and Mitra and Aryaman, bountiful divinities, are animated, so that thou hast been born comprehending them all universally in all (their) functions, and encompassing (them all) as the circumference (encompasses) the spokes (of a wheel).

10. Most youthful Agni, for the good of him who praises thee and offers thee libations, thou makest the precious (offering) acceptable to the gods: newborn of strength, we glorify thee who art to be lauded: to whom rich offerings (are to be presented): (we glorify thee) in (our) hymn as (men eulogize) a powerful prince.

11. In like manner as thou conferrest upon us riches, (so thou bestowest upon us) a well-disposed, docile, and energetic (son); the receptacle (of learning and other merits), one who is the performer of holy rites, Agni, who regulates as it were his own rays, (and the condition of) both (his) births, (or heaven and earth), he regulates at (our) sacrifice the adoration of the gods.

12. May he who is one with light, who has fleet horses, the invoker (of the gods), full of joy, and borne in a golden chariot, listen to us: may that irresistible, yet placable Agni, conduct us, by the most efficacious (means), to that desirable and accessible (heaven).

13. Agni, possessing eminent (fitness) for supreme sovereignty, has been glorified by us with holy rites, and with hymns: Let all who are present, as well as we ourselves, enriched (by his favour), shout aloud (the praise of Agni), as (loudly as) the sun (causes) the rain-cloud (to thunder).

SŪKTA III. (CXLII.)

The Rishi is Dīrghatamas; the hymn is addressed to the Āprī or Agni in their personifications, being the same as those specified in the 13th Sūkta; many of the expressions are identical, and the differences arise chiefly from the difference of metre, which in the earlier hymn is Gāyatri, and in the present Anushṭubh.

1. Agni, who art Samiddha, bring the gods to-day (to the worshipper), whose ladle is uplifted; extend (the merit of) former sacrifice to the giver approved of by all; dharnasāṁ is explained vidyāder dhāraśa kuśalam, skilful in containing knowledge, &c.

* See vol. i. p. 31.
(of the offering), by whom the Soma libation is poured forth.

2. Tanúnapat, be present at this well-flavoured and butter-fed sacrifice, (the offering) of a pious offerer (of oblations); glorifying thee.

3. The pure, purifying, wonderful Narásaansa, an adorable god among gods, (having come) from heaven, thrice mixes the sacrifice with the sweet (juice of the Soma).

4. Agni, who art Ilita, bring hither Indra, the wonderful, the beloved: this my praise is recited, bright-tongued, before thee.

5. The priests, bearing ladles, are strewing the sacred grass in this holy sacrifice, to prepare a god-frequented and well-spread abode for Indra.

6. Let the bright, separable doors, the augmenters of sacrifice, the purifiers of rites, the desired of many, be set open for the gods to enter.

b He comes thrice, or he thrice bestows rewards, is all the explanation given in the commentary: probably allusion is intended to the three daily sacrifices.

c According to the Scholiast, the verse is addressed to the divinities presiding over the doors of the chamber of sacrifice: the phraseology is much the same as in the former hymn, vol. i. p. 32, with some additional epithets; asaśchata, there explained unentered, is here interpreted not adhering together, mutually separable; asajyamāna-paraspara viprakrśhitā, as if intending folding-doors, but perhaps nothing more is meant than 'wide' or 'open.'
7. Beautiful night and morning, ever hymned, ever associated, progeny (of time), parents of sacrifice, sit down of your own good will on the sacred grass.

8. May the two pleasing-tongued receivers of praise, the divine and sage invokers (of the gods), officiate to-day at this our sacrifice, which confers (rewards) and attains heaven.\(^a\)

9. May the pure Hotrā,\(^b\) placed among the gods, and Bhāratī, among the Maruts, and may the adorable Ilā, Sarasvatī, and Mahī,\(^c\) sit down upon the sacred grass.

10. May Twashṭrī, favourably disposed towards us, send to us, for our nourishment and prosperity, the quick (falling), wonderful, abundant (water),\(^d\) in

\(^a\) See note on the corresponding stanza, Hymn XIII, v. 8. The Scholiast here adds nothing to his former imperfect explanation: the epithet mandra-jihvā he applies to Agni, the two flames that give delight to the gods.

\(^b\) Hotrā is explained homa-nishpaddikā, the presenter of the oblation; devēshu arpitā, delivered amongst the gods; or the praisers or priests: the latter being expressed by Maruts, with which, however, Bhāratī seems more naturally connected,—marutsu-bhāratī; the term is explained by vāch, situated in heaven, dyuṣṭhānā, and connected with Bharata, an Aditya, or name of the sun.

the centre* (of the cloud, effecting) of itself much (good).

11. Vanaspati, here present of your own accord, convey our offerings to the gods; the divine and intelligent Agni accepts (the oblations) for the deities.

12. (Priests), present the oblation with Swáhá to Indra, in the form of the Gáyatra, along with Púshán and the Maruts; also to the assembled gods, and to Váyu.

13. *Approach, Indra, to partake of the oblations consecrated with Swáhá; approach and hear the invocation, as they invoke thee to the sacrifice.

a Nádhá-nábhau meghasya avosthitam udakam, that is, rain; Twasfrí is here said to be the personified electric fire, or lightning, in which capacity he is the sender of rain, vrishtyddhe karttá.

b The fire, or Agni of the sacrificial post, or yípa, from its being of timber.

c Gáyatra-vepase: gáyatra is said to be put for the Itara-sáma: vepas is the same as rípa; gáyatram-rípam yasya; is Gáyatronvepas, a name or form of Indra.

d It is literally having or possessed of Púshán or the Maruts,— Púshanvate-marutvate: viswadeváya in the sing; is explained by the commentator viswadeva sangháyá, the assemblage of all the gods; but it may be intended, like the other epithets, to identify Indra with all the deities; the personification of Agni, however, is Swáhá, as one of the Apris.

c This stanza is one in addition to the former hymn, and seems superfluous.
Súkta IV. (CXLIII.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi Dīrghātamanas; the metre is Jagati, except in the last stanza, in which it is Trishtubh.

1. I offer devoutly to Agni, the son of strength, an invigorating and most new sacrifice, with words of adoration; (that Agni), the grandson of the waters, who, (present) in due season, the friend and ministering priest (of the sacrificer), sits upon the altar with (many) good things.

2. As soon as born, was that (Agni) manifested to Mātāriswān in the highest atmosphere, and his radiance, kindled by vigorous effort, spread through heaven and earth.

3. His radiance is undecaying: the rays of him who is of pleasing aspect, are everywhere visible and bright: the intensely shining, all-pervading, unceasing, undecaying (rays) of Agni, desist not (from their functions).

a Apām-napāt is here explained as in the text; vegetable substances, it is said, are the progeny of rain, and fire is the progeny of vegetable substances, timber, or fuel.

b Prthivyāṁ, literally on the earth, on the mound of earth constituting the altar.

c To the wind, to be fanned into flame; according to another text, twam Agne prathamā mātārisvan evārīhava, be first manifest, Agni, to the wind; or mātārisvan may imply the Yajamāna, or sacrificer.

d Na rejante, do not tremble; they do not move, or are moved in burning, maturing, and the like; dāhapatādīṣhu na chalanta na chālyante va ānayaḥ, or na may imply comparison, when bhātwak-šasor-na sindhavah will mean, like the rays of the sun.
4. Bring to his own abode with hymns that Agni, the possessor of all riches, whom the descendants of Bhrigu placed by the strength of all beings upon the navel of the earth: for, like Varuna, he reigns sole (monarch) over (all) treasure.

5. Agni, who, like the roaring of the winds, like a victorious host, like the thunderbolt in heaven, is not to be arrested, devours and destroys (our foes) with sharpened teeth, and, as a warrior (annihilates his enemies), he, (Agni), lays waste the woods.

6. May Agni be ever desirous of our praise; may the giver of wealth satisfy our utmost expectation with riches; may the inspirer (of our devotion) hasten our rites to fruition. I glorify him, the radiant-limbed (Agni), with this laudation.

7. The kindler (of the sacrificial fire) propitiates Agni, of glistening form; the upholder of your ceremony, like a friend; well kindled and well supplied (with fuel);* blazing brightly at holy rites, he illumines our pure and pious observances.

8. Agni, never heedless (of us), guard us with never heedless, auspicious, and joy-bestowing cares: do thou, who art desired (by all), protect us, and those born of us, with unobstructed, unovercome, and never-slumbering (vigilance).

*Akrarah, which is derived from kram, to go, and is explained by akranta or anukranta, surpassed, or exceeded by; jvala samiddhibhi, flame, fuel, and the like: the exact sense is not very obvious.
Súkta V. (CXLIV.)

1. The ministering priest, (qualified) by experience, and possessing exalted and graceful devotion, proceeds (to celebrate) his, (Agni's), worship, having circumambulated (the altar), he takes up the ladles which are first to present the oblations.¹

2. The drops of rain, enveloped (by the solar rays), are renewed in the dwelling of the divine (sun), their birth-place: when he, (Agni), abides cherished on the lap of the waters, then (the world) drinks the nectarous (rain), with which he, (as the lightening), associates.

3. The two⁵ (priests, the Hotri and Adhvaryu), of equal honour, and alike assiduous, labouring mutually for a common object, combine the form of Agni (with their respective functions); whereupon he to whom the oblation is to be offered, collects the drops (of clarified butter), as Bhaga (accepts the worship of all), or as a charioteer (gathers the reins of the horses) that draw (the car).⁶

4. He, whom the two, a pair of equal power,

dwelling in the same place, and engaged in the same ceremony, worship night and day: he, whether old or young, has been engendered for the sake of mortal couples, accepting many (oblations), and exempt from decay.

5. The ten fingers intertwined propitiate that divine (Agni), whom we mortals invoke for protection: he darts (his rays) like swift (arrows) from a bow, and accepts the new praises (uttered) by those who crowd round (the altar).

6. Thou, Agni, reignest over (the dwellers in) heaven, and over those of earth, according to thine own (will), as a herdsman over his (herd), and those two, (heaven and earth), bright, vast, adorable, beneficent, and sounding (agreeably), partake of the oblation.

7. Agni, who conferrest happiness, who acceptest oblations, who was born for sacrifice, and art the performer of good works, be pleased (with this rite), attend to this prayer: for thou art in presence of all (the world), art visible (to all), art pleasant in their sight, and art their refuge, like a (bountiful) distributor of food.

Sūkta VI. (CXLV.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

Varga XIV.

1. Ask (of Agni what you desire), for he goes (everywhere), he knows (all things): possessed of intelligence, he proceeds (to ascertain what is to be

---

* The text has only iyate and niviyate, he goes, and goes quickly, or is gone to or worshipped; sevyate; the verb, having done), and is had recourse to (by his worshipers); for in him is the power of restraining (unreasonable desires), in him (is the power of granting) enjoyment; he is the giver of food and of strength; the protector of the mighty.

2. They ask of Agni, but no one asks improperly; for a sensible man (replies to solicitation) as he has determined in his own mind; Agni tolerates not a speech that anticipates (his reply), nor endures a rejoinder: he who is devoid of arrogance is favoured by his protection.

3. To him the (sacrificial) ladles are directed; to him (our) praises are addressed: he alone hears all my prayers; he is the instigator of many, the transporter (across the world), the instrument of sacrifice, the unintermitting preserver (of mankind), and (gentle as) an infant: provided with the preparations (of sacrifice), he accepts the oblation.

4. When (the priest) proceeds to effect his development, he is (at once) manifested; and as soon a passive signification; the amplification in both cases is the Scholiast's.

*Tasmin-t-santi prāśishah tasminnishṭayah: prāśisha is explained by prāṣāsanāni or niyamāṇāsāmarthayādm, powers of restraining; that is, having restrained what is not to be accomplished, he is able to accomplish what may be effected; ishi is usually sacrifice; it is here put for bhogdh, enjoyments; or it may mean those acts of worship which confer rewards.

Na mrishyate prathamam nāparam vachas: literally, he does not bear a first or a subsequent speech: the explanation is from the comment.
as engendered is associated with his objects: he provides for the gratification (of his worshipper), placidly engaged in the agreeable (rite), when the (oblations) that desire (his acceptance) reach him present (at the sacrifice).

5. He, the searcher, the accessible, the dweller in woods, has been placed (amidst the fuel), as in the similitude of (an enveloping) skin: the wise Agni, the appreciater of sacrifice, the veracious, has declared to mortals (the knowledge of) their religious duties.

Sūkta VII. (CXLVI.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

Varga XV. 1. Glorify the three-headed, seven-rayed Agni; who is subject to no diminution, seated on the lap of his parents, (heaven and earth); and gratifying all (desires); as the universal radiance of the divine (Agni), whether moving or stationary, (spreads around).

Tutsdra yujyebhīh: the verb is tsara, to go; yujya is that which may be joined with; the expression is vague, and the Scholiast offers different explanations: as being joined with abilities, that may be associated with their objects, or with energies (tejōbhīh) fit to be connected with their consequences, or with his horses joined to his car.

The three heads may be the three daily sacrifices, or the three household fires, or the three regions, heaven, earth, and mid-air. The seven rays are the seven flames of fire; or rāhmat, ordinarily a ray, may be used in the sense of rein or rule, when it may allude to the seven metres of the Vedas.
SECOND ASHTĀKA—SECOND ADHYĀYA.

2. The great showerer (of benefits) has pervaded these two (worlds); undecaying and adorable, he is (ever) present, bestowing protection: he places his foot on the summit of the earth, and his radiant (flames) lick the udder (of the firmament).

3. (There are) two well-disposed milch cows together approaching their common progeny, and fully nourishing (him); pointing out the paths that are free from all that is to be avoided, and possessing more than the great intelligence (necessary for his development).\(^a\)

4. Experienced sages bring the invincible (Agni) to his station (on the altar); cherishing him in manifold (ways) in their hearts: desirous of propitiating him, they worship the (boon-) shedding (Agni); and to those men he is manifest as the Sun.

5. He is willing to be seen in the (ten) regions (of space); the victorious, the adorable, the source of life to great and small: inasmuch as in many places the opulent (possessor of sacrificial food), who is visible to all, is the parent of that (pious) progeny.\(^c\)

Sūkta VIII. (CXLVII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

Varga XVI.

1. How have thy shining and evaporating (rays) Agni, supported life (and supplied) food; so that, enjoying both, the devout (worshippers), possessing sons and grandsons, may repeat the hymns of the sacrifice.

2. Youthful (Agni), to whom oblations are due, appreciate this my reverential and earnest praise: one man reviles (thee), another propitiates (thee); I, thy worshipper, glorify thy person.

3. Thy fostering (rays), Agni, beholding the blind son of Mamatā, relieved him of the affliction: he who knows all things protects the pious, and (their) malevolent enemies are unable to do them harm.

4. When a wicked (man), with twofold (malignity of thought and speech), obstructing our offerings, and refraining from gifts (himself), reviles us, be considered as the offspring of Agni, as they derive their character from the performance of his worship.

The verse occurs in the Yajush, xii. 42, and is explained by the Scholiast much to the same purport.

The Scholiast repeats the Paūrnik legend of the birth of Dirghatamas from Mamatā, the wife of Utathya, but there is nothing in the text to warrant the application: the persons are obviously allegorical; Dirghatamas, long-darkness, being the blindness or ignorance which is the natural offspring of Mamatā, mine-ness, or selfishness.
may his prayer be heavy on him, and involve his person (in the consequences of) his evil words.
5. When, Son of Strength, a man skilful (in deception) assails another man with a doubly (malignant prayer), do thou, Agni, duly propitiated, protect him who worships thee (from its effects); consign us not to misfortune.

Śūkta IX. (CXLVIII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

1. The wind, penetrating (amidst the fuel), has excited (Agni), the invoker (of the gods), the multiform, the minister of all the deities, whom they have established amongst mortal worshippers for the accomplishment of sacrifice, like the wonderful and variously radiant sun.

2. Let not (my enemies) prevail against me, when presenting acceptable (oblations), for (Agni) is desirous of my so offered adoration, and all they (the gods) are gratified by the (pious) acts of me, the reciter of their praise, and the celebrator (of the sacrifice).

3. Him, whom the worshippers lay hold of in his

There is some indistinctness of construction in this stanza, and it is not very clear whether the epithets aghāyu, &c., should be referred to mantra, or to asmai, to him, the individual who utters it. Sāyaka leans to the latter, but the former seems most natural: in either case we have here an allusion to the use of maledictory prayers or imprecations.

Vapuṣhe is explained yajña siddhaye, for the fulfilment of the sacrifice, or of its object.
perpetual abode, they detain by their praises, and the holders convey him \(^a\) diligently to the sacrifice, as rapid coursers, harnessed to a car, (bear the rider to his destination).

4. The destroyer, (Agni), consumes numerous (trees) by his flames, and shines with manifold radiance in the forest: the favouring wind blows (the flames) onwards day by day, like the swift arrows of an archer.

5. The blind (of intellect), or those who see not (physically), detract not from his glory, whom no enemies, no malevolent adversaries, harm, even whilst yet in (his) embryo (condition); for his constant encouragers defend him.

Sûkta X. (CXLIX.)

Varga XVIII.

1. Agni, the lord of great wealth, the granter (of desires), comes (to the place of sacrifice); he, the lord of lords, comes to the place of affluence, (the altar); the stones prepare (the libation for him) as he approaches.

2. He, who is, as it were, the generator of men as well as of heaven and earth, of whom creation has imbibed life, abides with his glories: he it is who, entering into the womb (of being), procreates (all living creatures).\(^b\)

\(^a\) Prahâyânta alludes to an especial part of the usual ceremony; the solemn conveyance of fire from the Gdrhapatya, or household, to the Ahavantya, or sacrificial fire.

\(^b\) This is also another version of a familiar notion. Agni
3. He who is wise, and goes (wheresoever he will), like the rapid ethereal (wind), has lighted up the delightful spot, (the altar), and, identical with many forms, is radiant as the sun.

4. He, the twofold-born,\(^a\) illuminating the three bright (regions),\(^b\) and shining over all the lustrous spheres, the adorable invoker of the gods, is present at the place where the waters are collected.\(^c\)

5. He is the offerer of oblations, who is of twofold birth; and, through desire for (sacrificial) food, has in his keeping all good things: the man who presents to the Sun the oblations offered with fire, and thence, becoming identified with the solar rays, engenders rain, on which the food and consequent existence of all living beings depends; of whom, therefore, Agni may be said to be the begetter.

\(^a\) Dwi-jamna, as born either from the two pieces of stick, or, in the first instance, from attrition; and in the second, from oblation: or it may be, born of earth and heaven, commonly termed the parents of Agni.

\(^b\) Trīḥ rochāndni, either heaven, earth, and mid-air, or the three fires.

\(^c\) Apām sadasthē, according to Sāyana, is the place of sacrifice where water is collected for the different purificatory sprinklings required: or it might be thought to refer to the antarikṣa, or firmament, in which Agni exists as lightning: this and the preceding verse occur in the Sāma Veda, Benfey's edition, p. 152, l. 4. Professor Benfey's version differs, in some respects, from that of the text. "He, who illumines the place, the cheerful, (who is) the wise, the swift, like a horse, springing in the air like a bright sun full of life;"—"The twofold-born abides, illumining with his radiance the three bright regions, all the world, the most sacred priest in the realm of the waters."
presents offerings to him is the parent of excellent offspring.

Súkta XI. (CL.)

Varga XIX.

1. Presenting many offerings, I address thee, Agni, ever coming into thy presence (like a servant) in the dwelling of a mighty master.

2. (I ask thee also to withhold thy favour) from (those) two godless (persons), from the rich man, who, acknowledging thee not as his lord, is chary of gifts at sacred rites, and from him who rarely praises (the gods).

3. Sage Agni, the mortal (who propitiates thee) becomes a moon in heaven, the most eminent of

The verse occurs in the Sāma, p. 11, l. 6. Benfey renders ori by Bestürmer, an assailant.

c Sa chandro martyah: the commentator explains it, he becomes like the moon, the rejeicer of all, dhilādakah sarveshāṃ; or becomes even the moon, chandra eva bhavati, according to the Chhandogas; chandratvapōptām chhandoga damananti; the Chhandogas are authority for the obtaining of the condition of the moon:
the great (deities): may we, therefore, ever be in an especial manner thy worshippers.

Súkta XII. (CLI.)

The deities are Mitra and Varuṇa; the Ṛishi is the same; the metre Jagati.

1. Heaven and earth have been terrified by the strength and the noise (of him), whom pious worshippers, desirous of acquiring cattle, have generated by their (sacred) acts, amidst the waters (of the firmament), at the sacrifice, as a friend for the preservation of living beings, the benefactor (of man), and entitled to adoration.

2. Since they, (the priests), like friends, have prepared for you both, (Mitra and Varuṇa, a libation) of the abundantly-flowing and spontaneous Soma juices, therefore do you consent to come to the rite of the worshipper, and listen, showerers (of blessings), to the (prayers of the) householder.

3. For the sake (of obtaining) great vigour, showerers (of benefits), men glorify your birth from heaven and earth,* which is to be extolled, inasmuch as you bestow (his desires) upon the worshipper (as the reward) of his sacrifice, and accept the rite (that is solemnized) with praise and oblation.

4. Powerful divinities, most acceptable to you both is that spot, (where you are worshipped): accepters of sacrifice, proclaim the great ceremony (as duly performed); for you two connect the efficacious and comprehensive rite with the vast heaven, like a cow with a burthen.\(^b\)

5. You bring the cattle upon the earth to their favourite (pasture, whence), protected from harm by your power, the milch kine, yielders of milk, return to their stalls: they cry aloud to the sun (in heaven) above.

6. You bring (the cattle) to their acceptable (pasture) upon earth, whence the milk-yielding cows, protected by your power, return unharmed to their stalls: they cry to the sun (in heaven) above, both at evening and at dawn, as one (cries aloud) who detects a thief.

7. The tresses of Agni minister, Mitra and Varuna, to your sacrifice, when you honour (with your presence) the sacrificial chamber: send down of your own accord (the rain), and prosper our offerings, for you have command over the praises of the pious men.

8. Come to the devout (worshipper), who, glorifying you, and providing (all that is) acceptable, presents you with oblations; (to him), the sage, the invoker, who offers you worship: accept his sacrifice; favourably disposed towards us, (accept) our praises.

Accepters of sacrifices, you are the first whom (worshippers) propitiate with offerings, the produce of the cow; like (the application) of the mind (in the first instance) to the results (of the senses): hymns (prompted) by thoughts wholly intent upon you, celebrate (your praise): do you, with humble minds, bestow upon us wealth.

4. We behold the lover of the maiden (dawns), ever in movement, never resting for an instant, wearing inseparable and diffusive (radiance), the beloved abode of Mitra and Varuna.

5. Without steeds, without stay, (he is nevertheless) borne swift-moving and loud-sounding; he travels, ascending higher and higher, connecting the inconceivable mystery (of sacred rites) with the

* Mitra and Varuna are respectively the divinities presiding over day and night, consequently the break of day, and the course of the sun, may be considered as their work: the dawn is termed apād, or footless, or not moving by its own feet or steps, but as depending upon the motion of the sun.

Divinities, Rishi, and metre, the same.

Varga XXIII. 1. Mighty Mitra and Varuṇa, dispensers of butter, we worship you, rejoicing, with oblations; with reverential homage, and with (offerings of) water; so that our ministrant priests may propitiate you by (our) devotions.

but, according to Sāyaṇa, prithūVi is used here in the sense of the three worlds,—atra tryo loka api prithivi sabdavāChyā; as in the text, in which Indra and Agni are said to abide in the lower, middle, and upper prithivi, or world,—yad-Indraṁ avamasydṛ prithivyāṁ madhmayasyaṁ paramasyaṁ uṣa stha; the stanza occurs in the Yajush, v. 18, where Mahādhara explains prithivi in a similar manner; he also suggests that pārthivam rajānī may mean atoms of earth,—pārthiva paramāṇān; Sāyaṇa also proposes to extend the meaning still farther, and include the seven lower lokas; or to limit it to the three regions addressed in prayer, Bhūth Bhuvah Swar; but these alternatives are superfluous.

* Uttaram sadhastham askabhāyat: Sadhastha, according to Sāyaṇa, is the firmament, as the asylum of the three regions,—lokātrayākhyābhitam antarikṣham: or it may be, the seven regions above the earth; or the highest region of all, whence there is no return; or the abode of the righteous, the Satya-loka. Mahādhara makes it heaven, the region where the gods dwell together. Askabhāyat Sāyaṇa considers equivalent to nirmitavān, created; Mahādhara explains it, propped it up so that it should not fall. Some of these notions of the commentator are rather purāṇik than vaidik.

* Vichakramānās tredhā: traversing in various ways his own created worlds is Sāyaṇa’s explanation; Mahādhara says, going in the three regions, as Agni, Vāyu, and Aditya, or fire in the earth, air in the firmament, and the Sun in heaven.

* Trīḍhaṭu, the aggregate of the three elements, earth, water, light: prthiṣṭiyaptajoripadhaṭuutrayaviṣṭham; or it may imply the three periods of time, or the three qualities; the first seems preferable, although the enumeration differs from that of the philosophical schools.

* The firmament.—patha antariksham.—Yāska Ni, vi. 7.

* The sacrificer and his wife. This stanza occurs in the Yajush, vi. 3, with some difference of reading and of sense: instead of tā vām vāstuṇyāśmasi gamadhyaṁ, it begins yā te dhāmāṇyāśmasi gamadhyaṁ: those places to which we desire your going; the hymn being addressed, it is said, to the Yēpa, or post of sacrifice, at the time of trimming it into shape; the rest of the verse is the same, except at the end, where we have

Súkta XVI. (CLV.)

The deities are Viṣṇu and Indra, the first triplet being addressed to the latter; the Rishi is the same; the metre is Jagati.

Varga XXV.

1. Offer your nutritious viands to the great hero, the two invincible deities who ride upon the radiant summit of the clouds, as upon a well-trained steed.

2. Indra and Viṣṇu, the devout worshipper glorifies the radiant approach of you two, who are the granter of desires, and who bestow upon the mortal who worships you an immediately-receivable is the scatterer (of desired blessings).

3. These (oblations) augment his, (Indra’s), mighty manhood, by which he fits the parents (of all creatures, heaven and earth), for generation and enjoyment; whereby, in the upper region of the sky, the son has an inferior and superior appellation, and a third (name) of father.

avabhāri for avabhāti; r, it is said, being sometimes substituted is very obscure; Sāyāna explains it, the son of the father has an inferior name, or that of grandson; a superior, or that of son; and a third, which, with respect to them, is that of father: the meaning is, that oblations, ascending to the solar region, nourish Indra and Vishṇu, as two of the Adityas, or forms of the Sun; who thereupon sends down rain, whereby the earth is rendered fruitful, and the generations of man are sustained; whence fathers, sons, and grandsons, are successively engendered.

* His path on earth and in the firmament is within mortal observation; not so that in heaven.

b Vayaśchana patayanta patatrikah: Sāyāna distinguishes these, making the two first, the everywhere-going Maruts; Patatrika may mean Garuḍa, and other birds, or the winds.

c Vishṇu is here identified with Time, comprising ninety-four periods: the year, two solstices, five seasons, twelve months, twenty-four half-months, thirty days, eight watches, and twelve zodiacal signs.

d Yuvā akumārah, young, not a boy. Sāyāna renders the latter analpaḥ, not little.

VOL. II. H
Sôkta XVII. (CLVI.)

The deity is Vishnû; the Rishi and metre are as before.

Varga XXVI.

1. Be (to us), Vishnû, like a friend, the giver of happiness, the accepter of oblations, abounding with food, the granter of protection, and every way accessible; on which account thy praise is to be repeatedly recited by the wise, and thy worship to be celebrated by the offerer of oblations.

2. He who presents (offerings) to Vishnû, the ancient, the creator, the recent, the self-born; he who celebrates the great birth of that mighty one; he verily possessed of abundance, attains (the station) that is to be sought (by all).\(^a\)

3. Hymners, propitiate of your own accord\(^b\) that ancient Vishnû, since you know him as the germ of sacrifice;\(^c\) cognizant of his greatness, celebrate his name: may we, Vishnû, enjoy thy favour.

\(^a\) Sravobhir yujyam chidabhyasat, by food, or by fame, he attains whatsoever is to be joined with. Sâyaña does not make the meaning much clearer, although he supplies what he thinks necessary for completing the ellipse; anâir-yuktah sam sarvair gantavyam tat padam gachchhati.

\(^b\) Janushâ piparttana; literally, please or propitiate (him) by your birth, is explained svata eva, of yourself, or spontaneously, not, as Sâyaña adds, from any interested motive; na kenachid-varalabhádina.

\(^c\) Ritasya garbham, born as one with sacrifice; agreeably to the text, yajno vai Vishnûh, sacrifice, verily (is) Vishnû; or if rîta keep the sense of water, then the phrase applies to Vishnû as the cause or creator of water, according to the Smriti, Apa eva sasarja ádau, in the beginning he created water.
4. The royal Varuna associates (himself) with the sacrifice of the pious worshipper, assisted by the company of the priests: \(^a\) the Aswins (unite with it); Vishnu, with his friend (Indra), possesses supreme heaven-conferring power, \(^b\) and sits upon the clouds. \(^c\)

5. The divine Vishnu, the best of the doers of good deeds, who came to the pious institutor of the rite, \(^d\) to assist (at its celebration), knowing (the desires of the worshipper), and present at the three connected periods (of worship), \(^e\) shows favour to the Aryan, and admits the author of the ceremony to a share of the sacrifice. \(^f\)

\(^a\) Kratum sanchanta marutasya vedhasah, explained as in the text; but maruta may also mean the troop of the Maruts, and Vedhas the creator, or Vishnu; the sacrifice offered to Vishnu, attended by the Maruts; or maruta may be a synonyme of Indra.

\(^b\) Dūdhra daksham uttamam aharvidam, he has the best power cognizant of day: Sāyaka explains the last, generative of Swarga, Swargotpādakam.

\(^c\) Or sends down rain.

\(^d\) Sāchathdyā Indrāya: the first is explained, for giving assistance at the ceremony; the second, to the Yajamāna, or sacrificer: upon the strength of one of Vāska’s various etymologies of Indra, īrām drāvayati, who pours out the sacrificial food or oblation.—Ni. x. 8.

\(^e\) Trisadhastham may allude to the three daily celebrations of worship, or to the three worlds.

\(^f\) Ritasya bhāge may also mean the share that follows the rite; the blessings granted as a reward.
ANUVÁKA XXII.

SÓKTA I. (CLVII.)

The deities are the Aświns; the Rishi is Dīrghatamas; the metre of the first four stanzas, Jagati; of the two last, Trishtubh.

Varga XXVII. 1. Agni is awakened upon earth: the Sun rises: the spreading dawn, exhilarating (all) by her radiance, has dispersed (the darkness); harness, (therefore), Aświns, your chariot, to come (to the sacrifice), that the divine Savitri may animate all beings to (the performance of) their several (duties).

2. When, Aświns, you harness your bounty-shedding chariot, refresh our strength with trickling honey: a bestow (abundant) food upon our people: b may we acquire riches in the strife of heroes.

3. May the three-wheeled car of the Aświns, drawn by swift horses, laden with honey, three-canopied, filled with treasure, and every way auspi-

a Madhunā ghrītena is variously explained: madhu may be an adjective for madhura, sweet, with sweet water; or it may be a substantive for Amṛtā, ambrosia, with trickling nectar; or it may have the usual meaning of honey, especially with reference to the next verse, where the chariot of the Aświns is termed Madhuvāhana, honey-bearining.

b Asmākam brahma pritamāsu: Pritamā is a synonyme of Manushya, in the Nighantu of Vāsaka; that is, according to Sayaka, children and dependants. Brahma is, amongst other senses, a synonyme of anna, food, which is the interpretation here preferred by the commentator.
cious, come to our presence, and bring prosperity to our people and our cattle.

4. Bring us, Aświns, vigour: animate us with your honied speech: prolong our existence; wipe away our sins; destroy our foes; be ever our associates.

5. You, Aświns, sustain the germ in all moving creatures: you are in the interior of all beings: do you, showerers of benefits, supply (for our own use) fire and water and the trees of the forest.

6. You two are physicians, (conversant) with (all) medicaments: you ride in a chariot (drawn by) well-trained steeds: therefore, mighty (divinities), resolutely uphold (the worshipper), who, with a mind (devoted to you), offers you oblations.

*a Dwipade-chaitushpade, literally, to our bipeds and quadrupeds: this and the two preceding stanzas occur in the second part of the Śāma, v. 1108-1110.

*b Madhumatyd sakayd mimikshatam, literally, mix us with your honied whip: but Śāyāka renders kasāt by udch, speech; and mimikshatam by prīkayatam: it seems a set phrase when applied to the Aświns, as we have it in a former hymn, with a somewhat different application. See vol. i. p. 50, and note.
THIRD ADHYÁYA.

SÚKTA II. (CLVIII.)

The deities are the Áświns; the Rishi Durgatamás; the metre Trishtubh, except in the last stanza, in which it is Jagati.

Varga I.

1. Dasras, showerers (of benefits), granters of dwellings, a dispellers of sin, b cognizant of many (things), increasing (through praise), and fullfillers (of desires), inasmuch as Aucharthyá offers you (sacrificial) wealth, and you protect (your worshippers) with unobjectionable aids, bestow upon us (our prayers).

2. Granters of dwellings, who may make you offerings so propitiatory of that your good will, that (invoked) by our adoration, to the site of the altar, c you may entertain (favourable intentions a Varus-vásayitárau prajánám, causers of the habitations of mankind; or it may mean possessors of varu, wealth.

b The term in the text is simply Rudras, from ruti, which may mean pain, or its cause, sin; and drv, what drives away; or if derived from ruti, to sound, it may import those who shout in battle; but in this, as in the case of Varus, it may be intended to apply them to the Áświns, as identical with the classes of demi-gods so denominated.

c Pade goh, lit. to the place of the earth, which, as has been already noticed, often designates the Vedi, or altar, as it is here explained to signify.
towards us), and grant us kine rich in milk,\(^a\) coming with minds made up to grant the desires (of the worshipper).

3. In like manner, Aświns, as your strong-drawn (car), able to cross (the sea), was placed, harnessed, in the middle of the water, for (the rescue of) the son of Tūgrā,\(^b\) so may I attain to your preserving protection (with the same alacrity) as a victorious hero (returns home) with bounding steeds.

4. May the praise addressed to you, Aświns, preserve the son of Uchatthya: let not these revolving (days and nights) exhaust me: let not the ten times kindled fire consume me: let it not be, that one who is your (dependant), bound (with bonds), should of himself bite the earth.\(^c\)

5. Let not the maternal waters swallow me, since the slaves hurled down this decrepit (old man),\(^d\) in like manner as Traitana wounded his head, so has the slave wounded his own, and has struck his breast and shoulders.\(^d\)

\(^b\) See vol. i. p. 306; the text here has Arhaso madhye, in the midst of the water.

\(^c\) Tmani khdāte khādm, lit. by himself he eats the earth: according to Sāyaka, being unable, from age and infirmity, to walk, he crawls or rolls on the ground.

\(^d\) This is the verse quoted in the Niti-manjari. See vol. i. p. 143, note: and is similarly explained, except that Sāyaka understands vītakshat in the sense of the imperative, takshatu,
6. Dīrghatamas, the son of Mamatā, has grown old after the tenth yuga (has passed): he is the Brahma of those who seek to obtain the object of their (pious) works: he is their charioteer.

Sūkta III. (CLIX.)

Varga II.

I glorify with sacred rites the mighty Heaven and Earth, the augmenters of sacrifice, who (are to be contemplated) with devotion at holy ceremonies; those two, who, cherishing their worshippers as tasmad sa ādak svayam svakhyam eva siras takhatu, therefore may that slave of his own accord wound his own head: I cannot acquiesce in the opinions of those scholars who imagine a connection between Traitana and Ferīdum: even admitting a forced similarity of name, there is nothing analogous in the legends relating to either. The silent repetition of the verse is said to be a sure protection against a murderer, a wolf, or a tiger; and a traveller who repeats it for three nights, each time until sunrise, becomes invisible to robbers, and is able to screen others from their attack.

The Scholiast understands Yuga in its ordinary acceptation; but the Yuga of five years is perhaps intended, a lustrum, which would be nothing marvellous.

Apām artham yatidm brahmā bhavati sārathiḥ: he is the Brahman, like Brahman, the great, the chief; parivṛddha; the progenitor, or creator of people. Apām is explained apākṛṣṭam, of those by whom offerings of water, obsequal libations to the Mānes are to be made; or it may be put for Apasām, of works, religious rites in general. Sārathi, lit. a charioteer, is explained a conveyer, i.e. to heaven, a deity.
children, are venerated by the devout, and therefore with favour bestow (upon us) desirable blessings.

2. Verily I propitiate, by my invocations, the mind of the benevolent father, and the great and spontaneous (affection) of the mother (of all beings): the parents, with kindness, have secured, by their excellent protections, the vast and manifold immortality of their progeny.

3. These, your children, the performers of good works, and of goodly appearance, recognize you as their great parents, through experience of former (kindness): preserve uninterrupted stability in the functions of your progeny, whether stationary or moving, (depending for existence) on none other than you.

4. Those provident and intelligent sisters, (the rays of light), conceived of the same womb, (ever) united (with each other), and dwelling in the same abode, mete out (all things): knowing (their functions), and bright-shining, they spread in ever new (directions) throughout the radiant firmament.

*a Devabhīr ye devaputra sudāṃsaḥ might be rendered, who, having the gods for children, are revered by the gods; but Sāyāda explains deve in both terms by yajāmāna.

*b Heaven, Dyuloka, is said here to be the father, and Earth, Pṛṣṭhivī, the mother, agreeably to the text,—Dyur voh pītā, pṛṣṭhivī mātā. Mātā is explained by Yāska to denote the Antarikṣa, the firmament.—Nir. 11. 8.

*c Ādauaydvinoḥ, having no second parent or protector, no other to depend upon for subsistence.

*d The construction of this stanza is very irregular: the epithets...
5. We solicit to-day of the divine sun, his favour being propitiated, that wealth which is desirable. Benignant Heaven and Earth, bestow upon us riches, (consisting of) habitations and hundreds (of cattle and the like).

Sūkta IV. (CLX.)

Varga III.

1. Those two, the divine Heaven and Earth, are the diffusers of happiness on all, encouragers of truth, able to sustain the water (of the rains), auspicious of birth, and energetic (in action): in the interval between whom proceeds the pure and divine Sun for (the discharge of his) duties.

2. Wide-spreading, vast, unconnected, the father and mother (of all beings), they two preserve the worlds. Resolute, as if (for the good) of embodied should agree with te, they two; but some are in the plural, not the dual, as te madjañah suprachetasah, kavayah, suditayah, along with others in the dual, sayont, samohasd: the Scholast seems to understand the plurals to imply another substantive understood, or raśmayah, rays of light, as he explains suprachetasah by prakarshēka cheṭitum baktā raśmayah, rays able distinctly to apprehend; and again, suditayah, avidotanaḥ, raśmayah, rising rays; but he does not show how they can be connected with the duals, which he refers consistently enough to 'heaven and earth'; as in his interpretation of samohasd, both dwelling together in the same space,—dypprithūyor-ekasminanevadavede karahīpe ākāse śvas-thānt. In this and the next stanzas there seems to have arisen some confusion of ideas, some relating to the Sun and others to the acknowledged objects of the hymn, Heaven and Earth.

(beings), are Heaven and Earth, and the father has invested every thing with (visible) forms.

3. The pure and the resolute son of (these) parents, the bearer (of rewards), sanctifies the worlds by his intelligence; as well as the milch cow (the earth), and the vigorous bull (the heaven), and daily milks the pellucid milk (of the sky).

4. He it is, amongst gods (the most divine), amongst (pious) works the most pious, who gave birth to the all-delighting heaven and earth: who measured them both, and, for the sake of holy rites, propped them up with undecaying pillars.

5. Glorified by us, grant to us, Heaven and Earth, abundant food and great strength; whereby we may daily multiply mankind: bestow upon us commendable vigour.

Sūkta V. (CLXI.)

The Rishus are the deities; Dirghatamas is still the Rishi; the metre is Jagati, except in the last stanza, in which it is Trishtubh.

1. Is this our senior or our junior who has come (to us); has he come upon a message (from the gods); what is it we should say? Agni, brother, we revile not the ladle which is of exalted race;

a vahni putrak pitroh; the term Vahni might suggest that Fire, or Agni, was here alluded to; but the affiliation intended in this and the preceding verse is that of Aditya, the Sun, and Vahni is an epithet only: the bearer of the rewards of pious rites, phalasya bodhi.
verily we assert the dignity of the wooden (implement).\(^a\)

2. Make fourfold the single ladle; so the gods command you; and for that purpose am I come, sons of Sudhanwan: if you accomplish this, you will be entitled to sacrifices along with the gods.

3. Then said they, in answer to Agni, the messenger (of the gods). Whatever is to be done, whether a horse is to be made, or a car is to be made, or a cow is to be made, or the two (old parents) are to be made young,\(^b\)—having done all these (acts), Brother Agni, we are then ready to do (what you desire) to be done.

4. So doing, Ribhus, you inquired, Where, indeed, is he who came to us as a messenger? when Tvashtri observed the one ladle become four, he was immediately lost amongst the women.\(^c\)

\(^a\) According to the legend cited by the commentator, the three Ribhus being engaged in a sacrifice, and about to drink the Soma juice, the gods sent Agni to see what they were doing: observing that they exactly resembled each other, Agni assumed the like form, and it is to this that the stanza refers in calling him brother, and questioning his comparative age; one purpose of Agni’s visit is stated in the next verse to be the order to convert the one spoon or ladle, Chamasa, used for drinking the Soma juice, or for libations, into four. See vol. i. p. 45, and notes.

\(^b\) These marvels have been related in the preceding hymns of the Ribhus. See Suktas xx. ox. cxi.

\(^c\) Gndsu antar nydnaje: Sāyāka explains the verb merely by nyakto abhīt; the combination of ni and anj is not common, and has not been given by Westergaard; but it is possibly the converse
5. When Twashṭṛi said, Let us slay those who have profaned the ladle, (designed) for the drinking of the gods; then they made use of other names for one another, as the libation was poured out; and the maiden (mother) propitiated them by different appellations.

6. Indra has caparisoned his horses: the Aświns have harnessed their car: Bṛhaspati has accepted the omniform (cow): therefore, Ribhu, Vībhva, and Vāja, go to the gods, doers of good deeds, enjoy your sacrificial portion.

7. Sons of Sudhanwan, from a hideless (cow) you have formed a living one: by your marvellous acts you have made your aged parents young: from one horse you have fabricated another: harness now your chariot, and repair unto the gods.

8. They, (the gods), have said, Sons of Sudhanwan, from a hideless (cow) you have formed a living one: by your marvellous acts you have made your aged parents young: from one horse you have fabricated another: harness now your chariot, and repair unto the gods.

of vyānja, to be manifest; to be concealed, indistinct, or invisible. Gud is a synonyme of Śrī, but in what sense it is here used is not very evident; Śṛyāha explains the phrase striyam atmānam ananyata, he, Twashṭṛi, fancied himself a woman, that is, he felt humbled, as feeble as a female.

According to the Scholiast, this legend accounts for the origin of the names of the chief officiating priests: in order to evade the indignation of Twashṭṛi, the Ribhus assumed the titles Aśhwaryu, Hotri, and Udgātri, by which an individual engaged in priestly functions at a sacrifice is to be always addressed, and never by his own name.

Anyair evāk kanyād nāmabhik sparut: the force of the term kanyād, a maiden, is not explained; Śṛyāha expounds it, a mother self-engendering, svatpadayātri mātā.
wan, drink of this water, (the Soma juice); or drink that which has been filtered through the Munja grass; or if you be pleased with neither of these, be exhilarated (by that which is drunk) at the third (daily) sacrifice.

9. Waters are the most excellent, said one (of them): Agni is the most excellent, said another: the third declared to many the Earth (to be the most excellent), and thus speaking true things the Ribhus divided the ladle.

10. One pours the red water, (the blood), upon the ground; one cuts the flesh, divided into fragments by the chopper; and a third separates the excrement from the other parts: in what manner may the parents (of the sacrifice) render assistance to their sons?

11. Ribhus, leaders (of the rains), you have a The two first alternatives intimate that the Ribhus may be participant of the libations offered at dawn or at noon; the third applies to the evening sacrifice; the right of the Ribhus to share in which is elsewhere acknowledged. See vol. i. p. 48, note.

b Varðhayantim is said by the Scholiast to mean either a line of clouds or the earth.

c The Ribhus are here identified with the priests employed in the sacrifice of a victim.

d The parents, pitarā, are here said to mean the institutor of the ceremony and his wife.

e Throughout the remaining stanzas the Ribhus are identified with the rays of the sun, as the instruments of the rain and the caused the grass to grow upon the high places; you have caused the waters to flow over the low places; for (the promotion of) good works: as you have reposed for a while in the dwelling of the unapprehensible (sun), so desist not to-day from (the discharge of) this (your function).

12. As you glide along enveloping the regions (in clouds); where, then, are the parents (of the world)? curse him who arrests your arm: reply sternly to him who speaks disrespectfully (to you).

13. Ribhus, reposing in the solar orb, you inquire, Who awakens us, unapprehensible (Sun), to this office (of sending rain). The Sun replies, The causes of fertility; Sāyāha quotes Yāska as his authority,—Adityarasmayo api Ribhava uchyante.—Nir. xi. 16.

* Agohyansya grihe: agohya is also, upon the authority of the Nirukta, a name of the sun; who is not to be hidden, agūhahiya; er, according to Sāyāha, agrahahiya, not to be apprehended; literally or metaphorically.

b Idam nāmāgachhatha: Sāyāha explains the compound verb, asusritya na gachhatha, having come forth, go not away without doing this, idam, your office of sending down rain for as long a period as you repose in the solar orb; Yāska's explanation, following Angirasa, appears to be a truism,—as long as you are there, you are not here; Yāvat tatra bhavatha na tāvadika bhavatha.

c The sun and the moon, the protectors of the world, which, during the rains, are hidden by the clouds.

d Yak prābravat pro tasmā abhavatana: pro prefixed to bra may mean, either to speak harshly or kindly, to censure or to praise.
awakener is the wind; and the year (being ended), you again to-day light up this (world).

14. Sons of Strength, the Maruts, desirous of your coming, advance from the sky: Agni comes (to meet you) from the earth: the wind traverses the firmament; and Varuṇa comes with undulating waters.

SÚKTA VI. (CLXII.)
The subject of this and the succeeding hymn being the śåvammedha, or sacrifice of the Horse, the victim, or horse, is considered to be the deity; the Rishi is Dīrgahatama; the metrical is Trishûbha, except in the third and sixth stanzas, in which it is Jagati.

Varga VII.

1. Let neither Mitra nor Varuṇa, Aryan, A'yu, Indra, Ribhuśhin, nor the Maruts, censure us; when we proclaim in the sacrifice the virtues of the swift horse sprung from the gods.

\[\text{Śvānam bodhayitāram might be rendered, the awakener is} the dog; but the commentator explains śvānam by antariksha swapantam vāyām, the reposer in the firmament, the wind.\]

\[\text{Samvatsare idam adyā vyakhyata, you have made this world} to-day luminous, after the year has expired; that is, the rainy season being passed, the rays of the sun and moon are again visible.}\]

\[\text{The whole of this hymn is given in the Yajush, xxv. 24, 25.}\]

\[\text{According to both the commentators, Śāyaḥ and Mahidhara,} this is a synonyme of Vāyu.}\]

\[\text{Usually a synonyme of Indra, but the commentators intimate} its meaning here, Prajāpati, he in whom the Ribhus, or the Devas, abide (kshiyanti).}\]

\[\text{Deva jātasya may also imply, according to Śāyaḥ, born as}\]
2. When they, (the priests), bring the prepared offering to the presence (of the horse), who has been bathed and decorated with rich (trappings), the various-coloured goat going before him, bleating, becomes an acceptable offering to Indra and Pūshan.

3. This goat, the portion of Pūshan, fit for all the gods, is brought first with the fleet courser, so the type of various divinities, who, according to some texts, are identified with different parts, as Ushas, the Dawn, his head, &c., as cited by Mr. Colebrooke from the Tattirīya Yajush, As. Res. viii. 423; or allusion is intended to a legend of his origin from the sun, either direct, or through the agency of the Vārūṇa, as in the second stanza of the next Sūkta, virād-abhām Vasavo niratashka.

Rātim-ribhūtam, lit. the seized wealth; the offering to be made for the horse: Mahiḍhara, after Kātyāyana, says, the remains of the burnt-offering made the night before are to be given to the horse.

Sāyaṇa considers Pūshan in this and the next passage, where he is named, synonymous with Agni; and this is consistent with the direction that enjoins the goat being tied to the front of the horse at the sacrificial post; such a goat, black-necked, krīṣha-grīva, being always regarded as an Āgni-pāśu, or victim sacred to Agni, and to be offered to him.—Kātyāyana Sūtra, 98, &c. A black goat is also dedicated to Pūshan, along with Soma—Yajush, xxix. 58; but he is to be attached to the nābhi, or middle of the horse—Yajush, xxiv. 1; and according to Mahiḍhara, both goats are to partake of the food given to the horse. In the Rich, however, only one goat, and that dedicated to Pūshan, is spoken of: the more complicated sacrifices of the Yajush and the Śūtras may be of later date.

* He is to be offered in sacrifice to Pūshan or Agni.
that Tvashtri⁴ may prepare him along with the horse, as an acceptable preliminary offering for the (sacrificial) food.⁵

4. When the priests at the season (of the ceremony) lead forth the horse, the offering devoted to the gods, thrice round (the sacrificial fire); then the goat,⁶ the portion of Pūshan, goes first, announcing the sacrifice to the gods.

5. The invoker of the gods, the minister of the rite, the offerer of the oblation, the kindler of the fire, the bruiser of the Soma plant, the director of the ceremony, the sage (superintendent of the whole);⁷ do you replenish the rivers⁸ by this well-ordered, well-conducted, sacrifice.

⁶ The goat is to be first immolated.

⁷ These designations are applied to eight of the sixteen priests employed at solemn rites; the two first, the Hotri and Adhvaryu, are familiar to us; the Avayaj may be the Pratiprasthātri, who brings and places the offering: Agnimindha is the Agnilah, the kindler of the fire; the next is termed Grāvagrābha, the praiser of the stones that bruise the Soma plant, or he who applies the stones to that purpose: the next is termed Śanstri, the same as the Prakāstri; and the last, the Swipra, is considered to be the Brahmad: these nouns have no direct government, as the verb passes all at once to the second person plural,—āpīṣadhwam.

⁸ Vakshanāpīṣadhwam, nadiḥ purayata; fill the rivers; the
6. Whether they be those who cut the (sacrificial) post,* or those who bear the post, or those who fasten the rings on the top of the post, to which the horse (is bound); or those who prepare the vessels in which the food of the horse is dressed; let the exertions of them all fulfill our expectations.

7. May my desire be of itself accomplished, such as it has been entertained, that the smooth-backed steed should come to (gratify) the expectations of the gods: we have made him well-secured for the nutriment of the gods; let the wise saints now rejoice.

8. May the halter and the heel-ropes of the fleet courser, b and the head-ropes, the girths, and any consequence of sacrifice being rain and fertility: or it may mean, offer rivers of butter, milk, curds, and the like.

* Twenty-one posts, of different kinds of wood, each twenty-one cubits long, are to be set up, to which the different animals are to be fastened, amounting to three hundred and forty-nine, besides two hundred and sixty wild animals, making altogether six hundred and nine, according to Kātyāyana: a similar enumeration occurs in the Rāmāyana, b. i. ch. xii. xiii.: but the text is no warrant for such a multiplication, and it would seem as if a single post was intended: when the word occurs uncompounded it is in the singular; chhashālam ye aswayupāya takshati: chashāla is given in the Amara Kosha, and is explained by most of the commentators a wooden ring, or bracelet, on the top of the sacrificial post: some notice also authority for its being an iron ring at the foot of the post.

b Dūma is explained, a rope fastened round the horse’s neck; sandhāsa, one that fastens his feet; the manner in which horses are commonly picketed in India.
other (part of the harness); and the grass that has been put into his mouth; may all these be with thee, (horse), amongst the gods.

9. Whatever the flies may eat of the raw flesh of the horse; whatever (grease) is smeared upon the brush or upon the axe; (what is smeared) upon the hands or the nails of the immolator, may all this be with thee, (horse), among the gods.

10. Whatever undigested grass fall from his belly; whatever particle of raw flesh may remain;

\[a\] Sirsahyad rasam\, rajuh: Sdyaha confines his explanation to the first, the rope that is fastened to the head, the reins: Mahidhara explains rasam by katisdhe, and rajju, anyopi yad rajuh, whatever other rope.

\[b\] Swarau swadhitau riptam, for liptam, smeared: the flesh that is smeared, according to Mahidhara; but Sdyaha rather intimates, in regard to the first term, unguent with which the animal is anointed: Swarua is the implement used in anointing; swardhā pātan anakti: from its connection with what follows, however, grease or fat were more likely to be intended: Swadhitii usually means axe; it is here elliptically explained, chhedana kāle, or avaddnakale, at the time of cutting up or dissecting; but it is elsewhere interpreted correctly, avaddna-sidhāna, the instrument of dissecting; or paśouchheda sidhāna asih, a sword or knife, the instrument of cutting up the victim. In the Niti Manjary's text is quoted, in which the sacrificers are termed Vaishnavas, Dhanyate Vaishnava deva yajante pātordanisham samiturnakha hastastham deveshdam makshikdsitam, Happy are the Vaishnavas, who worship the gods with the consecrated flesh of an animal, adhering to the nails and hands of the immolator, and eaten by flies.

let the immolators make the whole free from defect, and so cook the pure (offering) that it may be perfectly dressed.

11. Whatever (portion) of thy slaughtered (body) fall from thy carcase when it is being roasted by the fire, (escaping) from the spit; let it not be left on the ground, nor on the (sacred) grass, but let it (all) be given to the longing gods.

12. Let their exertions be for our good who watch the cooking of the horse; who say, It is fragrant; therefore give us some: who solicit the flesh of the horse as alms.

a Medham śritapākam pachantu, let them cook the pure flesh with perfect cooking; such as may make it fit for the gods, and not done too much or too little, as may be fit for pitrīs and men, is the explanation of both annotators.

b Gātrād aghinā pachyamānah-abhi śūlam: in the preceding verse, śritapākam implies boiling, and the specification of ukhā, a pot or caldron, in the 13th verse, is to the same purport: which is rather at variance with the use of the śūla, or spit: as the expressions, however, are unequivocal, we must conclude that part was boiled and part roasted: Sāyāha suggests, that the portion that falls may be the rāsa, the dripping, which is to be received upon darbhā grass, afterwards probably to be thrown on the fire.

c Ya im āduḥ suribhir-nirhareti is explained by Sāyāha, ye chainam sobhanagandho, atah kinchīd-asmabhīyam dehi: who say of it. It is fragrant, therefore, give us some; or it may mean, give it to the gods; nirhara, take off, or give, having no government. Mahādhara accordingly understands it to mean, the smell shows it is dressed sufficiently, remove it from the fire; or, he says, the gods, perceiving this, and impatient of the delay, may exclaim, 13. The stick that is dipped into the caldron in which the flesh is boiled; the vessels that distribute the broth; the covers of the dishes; the skewers; the knives; all do honour (to the horse).

14. May the place of going forth, of tarrying, of rolling on the ground; the foot-fastening of the horse, (the water) that he has drunk, the grass that he has eaten;—may all these be thine among the gods.

15. Let not smoke-smelling Agni cause thee,

Give us: the following phrase, however, ye chārvato mānsabhikshaṁ upāsate, they who ask the flesh of the horse as alms, leaves no doubt that mortals are intended, who feed upon horse-flesh when offered in sacrifice.

a Nikshaṁ māنسpachanyā tukhāyāḥ: the first is explained, pākā parikshaṁ dhanaṁ kāśhām, a piece of wood, an implement for trying if the cooking is effected.

b Pātrāṇi yūṣhāṁ dēchandni; the vessels that are sprinklers of the boiled juice, or broth, rasasya kvathitasya.

c Uṣaharyāpīdhāṇā, covers confining the heat; Mahādhara. Sāyaṁa separates them, making the first, vessels for confining the heat, uṣhmarādvadṛśrāhāḥ pātrāṇi; and the second, the covers of the dishes, āpīdhāṇā charuḥām.

d Ankā, slips of cane; vetasasākhā, for marking the members of the horse as they are to be dissected; according to Kātyāyana, Sūtra 155, this is to be done by the queens, or wives of the sacrificer, and their attendants, with one hundred and one needles or skewers, which may be of gold, silver, or iron, or other metal, so embellished; this is an evident refinement on the simple material originally used.

e Sūndh-avādānasāddhanda, implements of dissection, the Swadhiti, and others.
(horse), to utter sound;\textsuperscript{a} let not the glowing caldron, odoriferous (with its contents),\textsuperscript{b} be overturned: the gods accept a horse that has been selected (for sacrifice); that has been led (round the fire); that has been devoutly offered, and has been consecrated by (the exclamation), \textit{Vashat}.

16. The cloth which they spread as a covering for the horse;\textsuperscript{c} the golden (trappings with which they decorate him), the head-ropes, the foot-ropes,—all these they offer as acceptable to the gods.

17. Whoever has goaded thee in thy paces, either with heel or with whip, whilst snorting in thy strength,—all these (vexations) I pour out with holy prayer, as oblations with the ladle.

18. The axe penetrates the thirty-four ribs of the swift horse:\textsuperscript{d} the beloved of the gods, (the immolators), cut up (the horse) with skill, so that the \textsuperscript{a} This may be addressed to the horse before he is killed; as an expiatory ceremony is necessary if he neigh on approaching the fire: it may, however, be considered as addressed to his limbs in process of cooking, to desire them not to boil too loud, that is, too fast, lest the fire split the caldron.

\textsuperscript{c} At the time of putting him to death, according to Śāyāka: the \textit{adhibāsa} of the Sūtras, Kāt. 145, is apparently a curtain or screen, behind which the principal queen lies through the night by the side of the horse.

\textsuperscript{d} According to the commentators, the other animals have only twenty-six ribs.
limbs may be unperforated, and recapitulating joint by joint.

19. There is one immolator of the radiant horse, which is Time: there are two that hold him fast: such of thy limbs as I cut up in due season, I offer them, made into balls (of meat), upon the fire.

20. Let not thy precious body grieve thee, who art going verily (to the gods): let not the axe linger in thy body: let not the greedy and unskilful (immolator), missing the members, mangle thy limbs needlessly with his knife.

21. Verily at this moment thou dost not die; nor art thou harmed; for thou goest by auspicious paths to the gods. The horses of Indra, the steeds of the Maruts shall be yoked (to their cars), and a courser shall be placed in the shaft of the ass of the Aświns (to bear thee to heaven).

22. May this horse bring to us all-sustaining wealth, with abundance of cows, of excellent horses, and of male offspring: may the spirited stead bring us exemption from wickedness: may this horse, offered in oblation, procure for us bodily vigour. a

SÚKTA VII. (CLXIII.)

The subject of this hymn is the same as that of the last, the sacrifice of the horse: the Rishi and metre are the same. b

1. Thy great birth, O Horse, is to be glorified; whether first springing from the firmament c or from the water, inasmuch as thou hast neighed (auspiciously), for thou hast the wings of the falcon and the limbs of the deer.

2. TRITA d harnessed the horse which was given a Although some of the expressions are obscure, and perhaps contradictory, yet it is undeniable that the hymn describes the actual sacrifice of a horse, the subsequent dissection of his limbs, partly boiling and partly roasting of his flesh, the presentation of part, with fire, to the gods, and the eating of a part by the persons present: there is no obvious indication, however, of the same ceremonial that is described in the text of the Yajush, or the Sútras of Kátyáyana, or even in the Rámdyana, and which evidently belongs to a later and more corrupt state of manners: even as it occurs in the text, it seems worthier of barbarous Scythians than civilized Hindus, and may possibly have originated with the former.

b This hymn occurs in the Yajush, xxi. 12, 24.

c Samudrád-uta va purisháti; the commentator explains these by antariksha, the firmament, and udaka, water: purishá, Mahádhara states, may also mean pahu: according to Sáyana, samudra here may also mean the sun, as in the next stanza.

d According to both commentators, this is a synonyme of Váyu, as pervading the three regions: Yama is considered by Sáyana as in this place a name of Agni.
by Yama: Indra first mounted him, and Gandharba seized his reins. Vasus, you fabricated the horse from the sun.

3. Thou, horse, art Yama: thou art Aditya: thou art Trita by a mysterious act: thou art associated with Soma. The sages have said there are three bindings of thee in heaven.

4. They have said that three are thy bindings in heaven; three upon earth; and three in the firmament. Thou declarlest to me, Horse, who art (one with) Varuna, that which they have called thy most excellent birth.

5. I have beheld, Horse, these thy purifying

*a Soma, according to Sāyaṇa; Viśvavasu to Mahādhara.

*b The Vasus may be the divinities previously specified, or demi-gods so named, the personified solar rays: Mahādhara understands Sūra to be equivalent to Adityamahādāla, the solar sphere.

*c Guhyenavratena-gopanyena, durdina rūpena va karmanā sarvatra vyāptirūpena, by a secret of the nature of a cloudy day, or an act of a universally penetrating character: the explanations are not very obvious.

*d Bandhanāni triti; Sāyaṇa explains it utpatti karahāni, media of origin, that is, the Vasus, Aditya, and heaven: Mahādhara considers it as applicable to the horse in the form of the sun, and that as identical with the three Vedas, or in allusion to the three regions through which he diffuses warmth.

*e Trāyapsu, more properly, three in the waters; but here intending the habitable earth in which the three bindings of the horse, or rather of the sun, of which he is the type, are, according to Sāyaṇa, food, site, seed; according to Mahādhara, tillage, rain, seed: in the firmament, they are cloud, lightning, thunder.
(regions); these impressions of the feet of thee, who sharest in the sacrifice; and here thy auspicious reins, which are the protectors of the rite that preserve it.

6. I recognize in my mind thy form afar off, going from (the earth) below, by way of heaven, to the sun. I behold thy head soaring aloft, and mounting quickly by unobstructed paths, unsullied by dust.

7. I behold thy most excellent form coming eagerly to (receive) thy food in thy (holy) place of earth: when thy attendant brings thee nigh to the enjoyment (of the provender), therefore greedy, thou devourest the fodder.

8. The car follows thee, O Horse: men attend thee; cattle follow thee; the loveliness of maidens (waits) upon thee; troops of demigods following thee have sought thy friendship; the gods themselves have been admirers of thy vigour.

9. His mane is of gold; his feet are of iron;

Sāyaka proposes another explanation, understanding by svaṁdṛjāṅdī, the water with which the horse is sprinkled: Mahādhara, the cane, mat, and other things used in cleaning him; saphdāṃ nīdhāna, the place of sacrifice, or the field in which he is pastured; and by the raśanā ritaśya gopā, either the guards attending on the horse, or the priests.

As identical with the Sun, these expressions apply to his acceptance of the oblations offered in the ceremony.

Bhagah kānīnām is explained by both commentators, kanyādānṃ saubhdāyam, or saundaryam.

Hiranyāśringa, lit. golden-horned; but fig. maned.
and fleet as thought, Indra is his inferior (in speed). The gods have come to partake of his (being offered as) oblation: the first who mounted the horse was Indra.

10. The full-haunched, slender-waisted, high-spirited, and celestial coursers (of the sun), gallop along like swans in rows, when the horses spread along the heavenly path.

Varga XIII.

11. Thy body, horse, is made for motion: thy mind is rapid (in intention) as the wind: the hairs (of thy mane) are tossed in manifold directions; and spread beautiful in the forests.

12. The swift horse approaches the place of immolation, meditating with mind intent upon the gods: the goat bound to him is led before him; after him follow the priests and the singers.

* Írmántásah silikamadhyamásah are differently explained, and may also be rendered, thin-ended, or thin-haunched, and plump-waisted: according to Sáyasa, allusion is made here to a troop or herd of horses: Mahidhara refers them to the horses of the sun’s car; Yaska’s explanation apparently identifies the horses with the Adityas, but it is rather obscure.—Nir. iv. 13.

b The horse is here identified with Agni, whose flames consume the forests.

c Ajas, puro niyate nábhirasydnu paśchát kavuyo yanti rebhāh: Sáyasa connects nábhi with aja, as implying nahanam, a binding, being, as it were, or in place of a binding, as not detached from him: he also connects anus and paśchát, as meaning, following after: Mahidhara’s explanation would be more satisfactory, if we could be sure that the Yajush and Rich agree in the details: he makes it, the goat that is fastened to the horse’s head is led first; next, the goat fastened to his waist or navel, nábhirasydnu; after-
13. The horse proceeds to that assembly which is most excellent: to the presence of his father and his mother, (heaven and earth). Go, (Horse), today rejoicing to the gods, that (the sacrifice) may yield blessings to the donor.

Sūkta VIII. (CLXIV.)

This Sūkta is of the unprecedented extent of fifty-two stanzas: of these, the first forty-one are addressed to the Viśvadevas, or the usual divinities classed together under that appellation: the first half of stanza forty-two refers to Vāch, speech; the second half to the waters; the forty-sixth and forty-seventh to Sūrya; the forty-eighth to Kāla, or Time; the forty-ninth to Sārastvat; the fiftieth to the Sādhyas; the fifty-first to Sūrya, Pārjanyā, or Agni; the fifty-second to Sūrya, or Sārastvat; the Rishi is Dīrghatamas: the metre is, in the forty-second stanza, Paśčāt-pankti; in the rest, Trishtubh and Jagati.

1. I have beheld the Lord of Men with seven wards, paśchāt, go the priests, kavayāh, and the singers, rebhūḥ, or praisers, stotārak.

Although more mystical than the preceding hymn, especially in regard to the intimations of the identity of the horse with the sun, there is nothing in it incompatible with the more explicit description in the former Sūkta of the actual sacrifice of a horse.

According to Saṁyāka, however, the general purport of this Sūkta is the inculcation of the doctrines of the Vedānta, or the spiritual unity of Brahma and the universe: some passages occur that bear him out in this view, but the text, upon the whole, although often mystical and obscure, evidently proposes the glorification of Āditya, or the sun, especially as identifiable with all creation: according to Saṁyāka, the application of the Sūkta is of a much less exalted description: he says, If a Brahman have committed theft, he may expiate the offence by fasting three sons;* of which delightful and benevolent (deity), who is the object of our invocation, there is an all-pervading middle brother, and a third brother, b well fed with (oblations of) ghee.

2. They yoke the seven (horses) to the one-wheeled car:* one horse, named seven, bears it along; d the three-axed wheel* is undecaying, never ights, and repeating inaudibly this Súkta: agreeably to the Aitareya Bráhmaṇa, v. 12: as cited by Sáyana, the hymn should consist of but forty-one stanzas. Mr. Whitney's very useful comparative index shows that all the stanzas of the hymn occur in the Atharva Veda, with the general style of which, as far as we yet know of that Veda, it best agrees.—Indische Studien, vol. ii. part iii.

* The seven solar rays; or it may be rendered, seventh son, Aditya being the seventh son of Aditi.

b Váyu and Agni, the younger brothers of Aditya: Sáyana, substituting Paramēśvara for Aditya, considers the three sons to be his attributes of creating, preserving, and destroying: the phrase, I have beheld, is the consciousness of the identity of individual with supreme spirit.

c Either the orb of the sun, or time, or a year: the seven horses may be the seven solar rays, or the six seasons, with their aggregation and year; or the six double months, and the intercalary month; or the seven days of the week: the wheels of the car, as typical of time, past, present, and future, should be three, but they are identical in nature, and are therefore said to be but one.

d Eko abvo saptanánd may mean the Sun, or Aditya, either as the absorber of the seven flavours, or as praised by the seven Rishis: or it may be a sort of pun, sapta meaning a horse as well as seven.

* The day with its three Sandhyas; the year with three seasons, hot, wet, and cold; or time, past, present, and future.

Varga XV.

6. Ignorant, I inquire of the sages who know (the truth); not as one knowing (do I inquire), for the sake of (gaining) knowledge: what is that One alone, who has upheld these six spheres in the form of the unborn?\(^d\)

*Sāyāha, implies the *sthūla sarīra, gross body; *asukha, breath; the *sūkṣma sarīra, or subtile body; and *asṛjj, blood, the aggregate elements of which the body is formed: *ātmā, or *chetana, the thinking principle, although connected with gross and subtile form, is nowhere perceptible as a separate object, and not to be apprehended, either by pupil or teacher.

\(^a\) Pākaḥ, properly ripening, being or making mature; but it is here and elsewhere explained by *paktavyah, what is to be matured; *apakwanatiraham, I, of immature mind.

\(^b\) *Saptita tantūn, may be the seven forms of the *Soma sacrifice, or the seven metres of the *Vedas, by which the gods, or the Sun, are induced to be present.

\(^c\) *Vatase bashkaye adhi: the first is explained by the Scholiast, *sarvasya nivṛṣa bhūte: bashkaye is rendered *Aditye; but, as Sāyāha adds, the usual meaning of *bashkaya is a yearling calf: but as we have *vatase also, which likewise means a calf, *bashkaya must have some other sense;—such as time, or rather, the sun.

\(^d\) *Yas-tas'ambha shad-imā rajdviṣi ajasya riṣe kim api *swid-ekam: the one may be, according to the Scholiast, the orb of the ungenerated sun, on which the six seasons depend; or the *satyaloka, whence there is no return, and which may be considered as the stay of the other six worlds or regions; or,
7. Let him who knows this (truth) quickly declare it; the mysterious condition of the beautiful ever-moving (sun): the rays shed (their) milk from his (exalted) head, investing his form with radiance: they have drunk up the water by the paths (by which they were poured forth).\(^a\)

8. The mother (earth), worships the father, (sun), with holy rites, for the sake of water; but he has anticipated (her wants) in his mind: whereupon, desirous of progeny, she is penetrated by the dews of impregnation, and, (all) expectant of abundance, exchange words (of congratulation).\(^b\)

9. The mother, (sky), was associated in (sustaining) the burthen of the fuller of desires, (the earth): the embryo (water) rested within the (womb of the) clouds: thereupon the calf bellowed,\(^c\) and beheld the omniform cow in the three combinations.\(^d\)

10. The one sole (sun), having three mothers and three fathers,\(^e\) stood on high: none ever over-weary agreeably to his \textit{Vedāsta} views, 'the one' is the sole form of the unborn creator, which is the same with the universe.

\(^a\) The solar rays; although especial agents in sending down rain, are equally active in its re-absorption.

\(^b\) This is merely a metaphorical description of the agency of the sun in sending rain upon the earth, and its consequent fertility.

\(^c\) The cloud thundereed.

\(^d\) \textit{Viśvarūpyam gam trishū yajaneshu} is explained, the earth diversified by various crops, in consequence of the co-operation of the cloud, the wind, and the rays of the sun.

\(^e\) The three worlds; earth, sky, heaven, and the three deities presiding over them, \textit{Agni, Vāyu, Sūrya}.

VOL. II.

K
him: The (gods) on the summit of the sky take counsel respecting him in language all-comprehending, (but) not extending to all.

Varga XVI.

11. The twelve-spoked wheel\(^b\) of the true (sun) revolves round the heavens, and never (tends) to decay: seven hundred and twenty children in pairs;\(^c\) Agni, abide in it.

12. They have termed the five-footed, twelveformed parent, Purishin,\(^d\) when in the further hemisphere of the sky: and others have termed him
Arpita,\(^e\) when in the hither (portion of the sky);\(^f\)

\(^a\) Vishvavidam vācham avishvanivām, speech or discourse, knowing all, or which may be known by all; or that which does not extend to all, a-sarva-vydpinām: speech here, according to Śāyaka, means thunder,—vācham gajjitalakshanām.

\(^b\) According to Śāyaka, the twelve signs of the Zodiac; but the expression may mean the twelve months. At the same time, M. Mollien has shown, that there is no reason to suppose the Zodiacal divisions were unknown to the Hindus at the probable date of the Vedas.—Mémoires de l'Académie des Inscriptions, première série, vol. 3.

\(^c\) Nights and days; three hundred and sixty of each.

\(^d\) Deriving it from purīka, water, Purishin is a name of the sun, as the source of rain: the first five feet are the five seasons, the dewy and cold seasons forming one; the twelve forms are the twelve months, or twelve Ādīyas.

\(^e\) Śāyaka considers this as synonymous with adhīsam or parbhuttam, dependent upon, and applicable to the sun, as dependent upon, or influenced by, the course of the year, or recurrence of the solstices; moving quick or slow, according to his southern or northern declination.

\(^f\) Upare is the term of the text, which the Scholiast explains, shining in his seven-wheeled (car), each (wheel) having six spokes.

13. All beings abide in this five-spoked revolving wheel; the heavily-loaded axle is never heated; its eternal compact nave is never worn away.

14. The seven-fellied, undecaying wheel, repeatedly revolves: ten,\(^b\) united on the upper surface,\(^c\) bear (the world): the orb\(^d\) of the sun proceeds, invested with water, and in it are all beings deposited.

15. Of those that are born together, sages have called the seventh the single-born; for six are twins, and are moveable, and born of the gods:\(^e\) where living creatures are delighted,—uparamanta asmin prsthinah; or it may mean a year,\(^{\text{v}}\)c samvatsarah; but it may have a relation, perhaps, to the expression in the first line of the verse, Divah pare arddhe, in the further part of the sky; upara may imply the nearer or hither part, referring to the two ayanas, or solstices: the seven wheels are the seven rays, or the seven days of the week, the six spokes the six seasons.

\(^a\) The five seasons; or the text may refer to the cycle of five years.

\(^b\) The ten organs of sense, or the five Lokapddas, guardians of the world, and five classes of human beings, according to Sâyaka: perhaps the ten regions of space would be more appropriate.

\(^c\) Uttándydm, or the upper part; urddhatandydm, or the pole, ténàdà; or the earth spread above, upari vistrita bhûmydm: it is not clear what is intended.

\(^d\) Sárvasya chakshush, lit. the eye of the sun, either the display of the nature or radiance of the sun, or his orb, being, as it were, the eye of all; sarvasya chakshuh sthánıyam \(v\)c mahdalam.

\(^e\) These are six seasons, made up of two months each; the their desirable (properties), placed severally in their proper abode, are various (also) in form, and revolve for (the benefit of) that which is stationary.

16. They have called these, my virtuous females, males: he who has eyes beholds; the blind man seeth not: he who is a sage son understands this, and he who discriminates is the father of the father.

17. The cow, holding her calf underneath with seventh is the intercalary month, which has no fellow, and has no Aditya to preside over it, wherefore it is not considered to be of divine origin like the rest: the six seasons are also termed Rishi, rishhayah, which Sāyana explains by gantárah, goers; in what sense does not appear: it may, perhaps, refer to the presence of a Rishi in the sun's car in each of the twelve months, if that be not rather a Paurāṇik than a Vaidik notion.—Vishnu Purāṇa, p. 233.

a. That is, the several seasons are diversified by the varieties of temperature, produce, and the like, for the benefit of the world.

b. This is a piece of grammatical mysticism; raśnu, a ray of the sun, here personified as a female, is properly a noun masculine.

c. According to the Scholiast, the Sun is to be considered as the father of the rays of light, which again, in their collective capacity, being the cause of rain, are the fosterers, or parent of the earth: the sun is therefore father of the father, and he who knows this is identical with the sun: another explanation is that which Manu intimates; an intelligent son may be termed the parent of an ignorant father: the philosophical view of the meaning is, that there is no distinction of gender in soul; it is neither male, nor female, nor neuter, and therefore may be said to be either or all, according to the forms with which it is associated; as in the text, twam stri, twam punās asi, twam kumāra, uta vā kumārī, thou art woman, thou art man, thou art youth, thou art her fore-feet, and then above with her hind-feet, has risen up: whither is she gone; to whom has she turned back when half-way; where does she bear young: it is not amongst the herd.\(^a\)

18. He who knows the protector of this (world) as the inferior associated with the superior, and the superior associated with the inferior, he is, as it were, a sage; but who in this world can expound (it); whence is the divine mind in its supremacy engendered.\(^b\)

19. Those which (the sages) have termed descending, they have also termed ascending; and those they have termed ascending, they have also called descending: and those (orbits) which thou, SOMA and INDRA,\(^d\) hast made, bear along the worlds like (oxen) yoked to a wain.

20. Two birds associated together, and mutual maiden; being, in fact, neither, as the Smṛiti has it,—naiva stri, na pumāṃ esha, naiva chāyam napunsakam.

\(^a\) This is rather obscure: according to the Scholiast, the cow is the burnt-offering, and the calf is Agni, and the positions of the two indicate the station of the offerer with respect to the sun: or the cow may typify the solar rays collectively, and the calf the worshipper.

\(^b\) Agni is the inferior, Aditya the superior; but they are both identical, fire and the sun being the same.

\(^c\) The rays of light, or the planets changing their relative position as they revolve.

\(^d\) The moon and the sun; Indra being one of the twelve Adityas, or identical here with the sun.

\(^e\) There is some probability in Śidāka's explanation, that the friends, take refuge in the same tree: one of them eats the sweet fig; the other, abstaining from food, merely looks on.

Varga XVIII.

21. Where the smooth-gliding (rays), (cognizant of their duty), distil the perpetual portion of ambrosial (water); there has the lord and steadfast protector of all beings consigned me, (though) immature (in wisdom).

22. In the tree into which the smooth-gliding (rays), feeders on the sweet (produce), enter, and again bring forth (light) over all; they have called the fruit sweet, but he partakes not of it who knows not the protector (of the universe).

23. They who know the station of Agni upon the earth; the station of Vāyu that was fabricated from the firmament; and that station of the Sun which is placed in heaven, obtain immortality.

vital and supreme spirit, ķvādātma and paramātma, are here alluded to under the figure of the two birds.

a Pippatam svedā atti; the philosophical interpretation is, that the vital spirit enjoys the rewards of acts. Ydaka's explanation is something different, although he agrees in considering two species of soul to be intended as abiding in one body.—Nir. xiv. 30.
b Suparnā is here explained, supatandh sobhanagamand ras-mayah; the goers easily or beautifully, the rays of the sun.
c Aditya has admitted, or admits me, the reciter of the hymn, to the sphere of the sun.
d The orb or region of the sun.
e Tam na unnasat yaḥ pitarām na veda: here pitarām is explained, in its general sense of pdaka, cherisher, protector; the sun, or, according to the Vaidūnīk gloss, the supreme spirit.
f Yadvīstre adhi gдыtram traishubhdd-vd traishubhham, &c.
24. He constructs the prayer with the Gāyatrī metre; with the prayer (he constructs) the Śāma, and with the Trishtubh metre the couplet (or triplet): with the couplet (or triplet) he constructs the hymn with (verses of) two or four distichs; and with the syllable they construct the seven metres.

The purport of this phraseology, borrowed from the several metres, Gāyatrī, Trishtubh, and Jagati, is not very clear: it may be merely an obscure and mystic reference to the text of the Veda, a knowledge of which is essential to final felicity; but Sāyana explains the words as in the translation; gāyatrī he derives from gāyatrī, the earth; and in the second place he calls it the pada, or station of Agni: trishtubha he identifies with the firmament, and the place of Vāyu; and Jagat as the sun in Jagati, the solar region: another interpretation is derived from the ritual use of the three several metres, and their combinations, at the three daily sacrifices.

a Gāyatreṇa pratimimite arkam, he, severally, measures the mantra with the Gāyatrī metre; or a part being put for the whole, with any Vaidik metre.

b Trishtubheṇa vādikam; vādka is explained to signify either dwirica or trichā rūpam, the form or phrase of two or three stanzas; or it may imply a Sūkta.

c Vākena-vādikam: when the first vādka has the sense of Sūkta, then its repetition may imply the Vargā or Anuvāka; but if it signify a couplet or triplet, it seems more applicable to the Sūkta or hymn.

d Akshareṇa sapta vādikāḥ, the seven generic metres of the Veda with the syllable; the syllable being the chief element of the metre; thus, the Gāyatrī consists of eight syllables; Trishtubh, of eleven; Jagati, of twelve: it is not said who thus composed or classified the metrical system of the Vedas, but it appears, from the commentary on the following stanza, that Brahmā is intended.
25. With the stanzas in the Jagati metre he fixed the rain in heaven, and surveyed the Sun in the Rathantara. They have declared three divisions of the Gāyatri metre, whence it surpasses (all the rest) in force and majesty.

26. I invoke the milch cow that is easily milked, that the handy milker may milk her: may Savitri accept this our excellent libation, that his heat may (thereby) increase: it is for this, verily, that I earnestly invoke him.

27. She comes lowing, abounding in rich (products), desiring her calf in her mind: may this cow grant her milk to the Āświns: may she thrive for our great advantage.

28. The cow bellows for her calf, (who stands) when the verb is in the singular; perhaps the Rishis, or the priests, are alluded to when it is in the plural.

a Sindhun divi astabhāyat; Brahmā, says the Scholiast, at the time of creation, fixed the shedder of water, udakasya nyandakam, in the sky; or it might be intended for Aditya, as by the text,—Jñātāv ad eska ya eska tapati; he may be termed Jñātā who gives heat (to the world).

b This is commonly known as a portion of the Śūma: the meaning of the phrase is not very obvious. Śāyaka says Prajāpati beheld the sun in the stanza which sustains it; taddhārabhāṣṭāyaṃ riki.

c Gāyatrasya samidhas tvra dhuk: Śāyaka considers samidha as merely signifying pāda, division of a stanza; of which the Gāyatri verse has three.

d The cow is the cloud, the milk the rain, and Vāyu, or wind, the milker; the metaphor is continued in the three following verses, where the calf is the world, or mankind anxious for the rain, as the cause of abundance.
with winking eyes, and lows as (she) proceeds to lick his forehead: she utters a cry, as, anxious, she sees the moisture in the corners of his mouth, and nourishes him with her milk.

29. He, too, bellows, and the cow utters inarticulate sounds, as, encompassed by him, she repairs to her stall; (influenced) by her instincts, she acts like a human being, and, radiant, manifests her nature.

30. Life endowed with breath, eager (in discharge of its functions), reposes, steady, in the midst of its (proper) abodes: the life of the mortal body, cognate with the mortal frame, endures immortal, (sustained) by (obsequial) offerings.

31. I have beheld the unwearied protector of the universe, the sun, travelling upwards and downwards by various paths: invested with aggregative and diffusive radiance, he revolves in the midst of the regions.

32. He who has made (this state of things) does not comprehend it: he who has beheld it, has it also verily hidden (from him): he, whilst yet en-

Swadhbhih-putrakrītalḥ, by offerings made by the sons.

This verse occurs in the Yajush, xxxvii. 17; Mahādhara explains it in the like manner.

Man, according to Sāyaha's philosophical interpretation; but that of the Nairuktas, which he cites, is probably more consistent with the intention of the original, which considers wind as the cause of rain, to be alluded to allegorically.
veloped in his mother's womb, is subject to many births, and has entered upon evil.

33. The heaven is my parent and progenitor: the navel (of the earth) is my kinsman: the spacious earth is my mother. The womb (of all being) lies between the two uplifted ladies, and in it the parent has deposited the germ (of the fruitfulness) of the daughter.

34. I ask thee, (Institutor of the rite), what is the uttermost end of the earth: I ask thee, where is the navel of the world. I ask thee, what is the fecundating power of the rain-shedding steed: I ask thee, what is the supreme heaven of (holy) speech.

35. This altar is the uttermost end of the earth:

a Nábhír atra bandhu; Sáyaña refers nábhi to the preceding terms, me pitá janitá, meaning the moisture of the earth, by which corn is abundant, and which, as derived from the rain of heaven, makes the latter the parent and progenitor of man: bandhu he renders bandhiká, binding or supporting, and makes it an epithet of príthiví, the earth: it may be doubted if this is the meaning, and the term nábhi possibly implies the antarikśha, or firmament, completing, with heaven and earth, the three regions concerned in providing sustenance for man.

b Uttánayós-chamvor-yonir antar: the uplifted ladies are heaven and earth, and the womb of all beings between them is the firmament, the region of the rain.

c The father, the heaven, may be regarded as identical with either Āditya or Indra; the daughter is the earth, whose fertility depends upon the rain deposited as a germ in the firmament.

d The answers in the following stanza explain what is here intended.

e As in the text, etávati vai príthiví yávati vedih, such or so this sacrifice is the navel of the world: this Soma juice is the fecundating power of the rain-shedding steed: this Brahmá is the supreme heaven of (holy) speech.

36. The seven (sustaining), the embryo (rain) for half a year, the fecundating (element) of the world, abide, by appointment, in the various functions of Vishńu. By their intelligence they pervade in thought all around (them), for they are intelligent and diffusive.

37. I distinguish not if I am this all; for I go perplexed, and bound in mind; when the first-born (perceptions) of the truth reach me, then immemuch, verily, as the earth, so much is the altar: it is the essence of the whole earth.

a Nábhi merely means sannáhana, the binding together of man with the means of subsistence, or the crops that spring from the rain which falls as the consequence of sacrifice or of obligations.

b The texts of the Vedas, of which Brahmá, or perhaps the priest so termed, is the author or expounder.

c The solar rays, saptárddhagarbhāth; either retaining the rains for half a year; that is, during the dry months, or abiding in a part or half of space, or in the mid-heaven or firmament.

d Vishńu is said to be here the pervading sun; vyápakasya Adityasya, in whose various duties of cherishing the world, the solar rays are, by direction, pratiśa, especially employed.

e Na víjñáñámi yadiva idam asmi; or it may be read, yadi vá idam, that I am like that which this is; or if I am this; in either case, the expression warrants the Vaidyántik character which Sáyana ascribes to it, implying the identity of individual and universal spirit.
diately shall I obtain a portion (of the meaning) of that (sacred) word.

38. The immortal, cognate with the mortal, affected by (desire of) enjoyment, a goes to the lower or the upper (sphere): but (men beholding them) associated, going everywhere (in this world together); going everywhere (in other worlds together); have comprehended the one, but have not comprehended the other. b

39. All the gods have taken their seats upon this supreme heaven, the imperishable (text) of the Veda: c what will he, who knows not this, do with the Veda? but they who do know it, they are perfect.

40. Cow, mayst thou be rich in milk through abundant fodder; that we also may be rich (in abundance); eat grass at all seasons, and, roaming (at will), drink pure water.

\begin{itemize}
\item[\textsuperscript{a}] The sound, \textit{gauri}, is explained, in one sense, that of the clouds or sky, as differently originated; in one station, \textit{ekapadi}, from the clouds; in two, \textit{dwipadi}, from the clouds and sky; in four, the four quarters of space; in eight, the four points and four intermediate points of the horizon; or from them and the zenith, \textit{navapadi}, nine-stationed: another explanation makes \textit{gauri} articulate speech, single as the crude form only, double as declension and conjugation, fourfold as nouns, verbs, prepositions, and particles; eightfold as the eight cases, including the vocative; and ninefold as the same, with the addition of indeclinable: or again, it may be articulate sound, diversified according to the nine parts of the body whence it may be supposed to proceed, navel, chest, throat, &c.; the highest heaven is said to be the \textit{hridaya}, \textit{dk\text{\textacute{s}}a}, or ethereal element of the heart, as the basis of speech, \textit{m\text{\textacute{u}}l\text{\textacute{d}}dh\text{\textacute{a}}re}.

45. Four are the definite grades of speech: those Brahmans who are wise know them: three, deposited in secret, indicate no meaning: men speak the fourth grade of speech.

a The three are, Agni, who burns up the earth; the Sun, who revives it by his light, and the rain which he sends; and Váyu, the wind, who contributes to the fall of rain.

b Chatwári vákparimité padáni: the explanations of this piece of mysticism somewhat vary: the four padas may be om, and the three sacred words, bhúr, bhuvára, suvar; or the four parts of speech, nouns, verbs, prepositions, and particles; or the language of the mantras, the kalpa, the Bráhmana, and laukika, or current speech; or the languages of serpents, birds, insects, and man; or they may be pard, audible; pasyánti, visible, audible only to sages and saints; madhyamá, intelligible or expressive, proceeding from the heart; and vaiswárá, articulate, as residing in the mouth and enunciated by the palate, lips, tongue, &c.; or again, they may be the languages of the three upper worlds and of the world of man.

c Bráhmana ye manáshínah: Bráhmanas here, according to Sáyáha, are those acquainted with Sabdabrahma; Brahma as the word, or, in fact, Yogis, mystics.

d Of the four grades, padas, three may be considered mystical; but we have another set from the Bráhmanas, quoted by Sáyáha, from Yásha—Nir. xiii. 9: Speech, vdk, it is said was created fourfold; three kinds of which are in the three regions, the fourth amongst the Paúsas: the form on earth, associated with Agni, is in the Rathantara; the form in the firmament, associated with Váyu, is in the Vámadvána mantras; that which is in heaven, with Áditya, is Briháti, or in the thunder (stánayátnau): whatever else was more than this was placed amongst the Paúsas, literally, 46. They have styled (him, the Sun), a Indra, Mitra, Varuṇa, Agni, and he is the celestial, well-winged Garutmat, for learned priests call one by many names as they speak of Agni, Yama, Mātariswan.

47. The smooth-gliding wafters (of the rain, the solar rays), clothing the waters with a dark cloud, ascend to heaven: they come down again from the dwelling of the rain, and immediately the earth is moistened with water.

48. The fellies are twelve; the wheel is one; three are the axles; but who knows it? within it are collected 360 (spokes), which are, as it were, moveable and immovable. b

49. Saraswati, that retiring breast, c which is the animals; but here apparently implying the Brāhmaṇas,—atha pāsushu tato yā vṛdg-ātirichyate tām Brāhmaṇashu adadbhuh: although the inference that follows rather implies the Brāhmaṇs, as it is said; therefore, the Brāhmaṇs speak both languages, both that of the gods and that of man; tasmād Brāhmaṇa ubhayim vācham vadanti yd cha devānām yd cha manushyānām: the key to this is to be found, probably, in the Upanishads.

a The Sun is Śāyana's interpretation: Ydka says Agni: but they are the same, and are the same as all the other forms, according to the texts, Ekaiva vā mahān ātmā devatā sāryah, the divine sun is the one great spirit; and Agni sarvā devatāḥ, Agni is all the divinities.

b The wheel is the year of twelve months; the three axles are the three double seasons, or hot, wet, and cold; and the three hundred and sixty spokes are the days of the luni-solar year, as we have had before.

ANUVÁKA XXIII.

Sókta I. (CLXV.)

The hymn is supposed to repeat a conversation between ÍNÐRA, Agástya, and the Maruts, and the interlocutors are the Rishis of the Sókta; that is, the Maruts are the Rishis of the third, fifth, and seventh verses; Agástya of the three last, and Ínдра of the rest. Ínдра as Marutvat, or attended by the Maruts, is the deity; the metre is Tríshûkha.¹

1. (Ínдра speaks), —With what auspicious fortune have the Maruts, who are of one age, one residence, one dignity, watered (the earth) together: with what intention: whence have they come: Showerers of rain, they venerate, through desire of wealth, the energy (that is generated in the world by rain).

2. Of whose oblations do the youthful (Maruts) approve: who attracts them to his (own) sacrifice (from the rites of others): with what powerful praise may we propitiate (them), wandering like kites in the mid-air?

3. (The Maruts), —Ínдра, lord of the good, whither dost thou, who art entitled to honour, proceed alone: what means this (absence of attendance): when followed (by us), thou requirest (what

4. (Indra),—Sacred rites are mine: (holy) praises give me pleasure: libations are for me: my vigorous thunderbolt, hurled (against my foes), goes (to its mark): me, do (pious worshippers) propitiate: hymns are addressed to me: these horses bear us to the presence (of those worshippers, and worship).

5. (The Maruts),—Therefore we also, decorating our persons, are ready, with our docile and nigh-standing steeds, (to attend thee), with all our splendour, to those rites: verily, Indra, thou appropriatest our (sacrificial) food.

Varga XXV.

6. (Indra),—Where, Maruts, has that (sacrificial) food been assigned to you, which, for the destruction of Ahi, was appropriated to me alone; for I indeed am fierce, and strong, and mighty, and have bowed down all mine enemies with death-dealing shafts.

10. (Indra),—May the prowess of me alone be irresistible: may I quickly accomplish whatever I contemplate in my mind: for verily, Maruts, I am fierce and sagacious, and to whatever (objects) I direct (my thoughts), of them I am the lord, and rule (over them).

Sūkta II. (CLXVI.)

The deities are the Maruts; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. We proclaim eagerly, Maruts, your ancient greatness, for (the sake of inducing) your prompt appearance, as the indication of (the approach of) the showerer (of benefits). Loud-roaring and mighty Maruts, you exert your vigorous energies for the advance (to the sacrifice), as if it was to battle.

2. Ever accepting the sweet (libation), as (they would) a son, they sport playfully at sacrifices, demolishing (all intruders); the Rudras come to the offerer of prayers and oblations, for his protection, and, powerful as they are, do him no harm.

3. To him, the presenter (of offerings), the protecting and immortal Maruts, (gratified) by the oblation, have given abundance of riches: they, the bestowers of happiness, becoming, as it were, the friends (of the worshipper), sprinkle the regions plentifully with water.

4. Those, your coursers, which traverse the regions in the repetition of the stanza, at the end of the next Sūkta, he explains it, chirakāla jīvanam, long life: Mahādhara makes it an epithet of food, and strength-conferring life, deriving it from jī for jīva, and radānu; Unādi aff.—Pan. vi. 1, 66.

in their speed, proceed, self-guided: all worlds, all dwellings, are alarmed, for marvellous is your coming: (such fear as is felt) when spears are thrust forth (in battle).

5. When your brilliant coursers make the mountains echo; and, friendly to man, traverse the summit of the firmament; then all the forest lords are alarmed at your approach, and the bushes wave to and fro, as a woman in a chariot.

Varga II.

6. Fierce Maruts, free from malevolence in your kindly thoughts, fulfil towards us your good purposes; when your missile lightning rends (the cloud), as a well-hurled weapon wounds the deer.

7. Givers without stint, possessors of inexhaustible riches, devoid of malevolence, ever glorified at sacrifices, they worship the adorable (Indra), for (the sake of) drinking the (Soma) wine; for they know the first manly exploits of the hero.

8. Maruts, gratify, with infinite and complete enjoyments, him, whom you protect from degrading sin: that man whom, fierce and mighty, and glorified (as you are), you defend from calumny, by (providing for) the nourishment of his descendants.

a Pahswah sudhiteva barhand: Sāyāha connects Pahūn with krivirdati, the missile of the winds; because, he says, when the wind blows, animals are withered or chilled; but it seems more naturally related to what follows, as a well-placed weapon strikes animals.

b Tanayasya pushīsin; tanaya, a son, is here put for descendants, putrādayah.
9. Maruts, all good things are in your cars: on your shoulders abides emulous strength: at your resting-places on the road refreshments (are ready):* a the axle of your (chariot) wheels holds them firmly together.

10. Maruts, in your arms, propitious to man, are many good things: on your breasts are golden (ornaments), brilliant and conspicuous: white garlands (hang) on your shoulders: sharp are (the edges of) your weapons: the Maruts have various decorations, as birds have (many-coloured) wings.

11. Maruts, mighty with mighty power, all-pervading, manifest afar off, as the gods (are made manifest) by the constellations; exhilarating, soft-tongued, speaking gently with your mouths, associated with Indra, glorified by praise; (come to our sacrifice).

12. Such, well-born Maruts, is your greatness, that your munificence is as long (continued) as the function of Aditi;* and Indra does not exceed, by his own liberality, (the value of) that which you have bestowed upon the devout man (who worships you).

13. Your alliance with us, Maruts, is of a long duration: on which account, immortals, accept our ample praise; and, having accepted our laudation, be gratified, leaders (of sacrifice), by our holy acts, through this (your) favourable disposition towards mankind.

14. Quick-moving Maruts, we augment the long (offered ceremony) upon your mighty (approach), whereby men triumph in war.—May we obtain, by these our sacrifices, your wished-for (presence).

15. This praise, Maruts, is for you: this hymn is for you; (the work) of a venerable author, capable of conferring delight (by his laudations): may the praise reach you (for the good of your) persons, so that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sûkta III. (CLXVII.)

The first stanza is addressed to Indra; the rest to the Maruts; the Rishi is Agastyā; the metre, Trishtubh.

Varga IV.

1. May thy thousand benefits, Indra, come to us: may a thousand kinds of abundant food come to us, lord of horses: may a thousand (sorts of) wealth come to exhilarate us: may thousands of horses be ours.

2. May the Maruts come to our presence with benefactions: may they who are possessed of knowledge (come) with most excellent and brilliant (treas-sures), since their glorious horses, the Niyutas, gather wealth even on the farther shore of the sea.\textsuperscript{a}

3. In whom the water-shedding, golden-coloured lightning, is fitly deposited like a chaplet (of clouds) moving in the firmament like the (splendidly-attired) wife of a man (of rank),\textsuperscript{b} and distinguished in assemblies like a sacrificial hymn.\textsuperscript{c}

4. The radiant, ever-moving Maruts, have mingled with (their) associate, (lightning), like (youths) with common women;\textsuperscript{d} the formidable divinities do not overwhelm heaven and earth (with rain), but promote their prosperity through (friendly) regard.

5. Rodasī, the associate of the scatterers (of the clouds), with dishevelled tresses, and mind devoted to her lords, wooes them to associate (with her): "Radiant in form, she has ascended the car of the restless (Maruts) as Sūryā (ascended the car of the Ātwins), and comes hither (with the celerity) of the sun.

6. The youthful (Maruts) have placed the young (lightning) in (their) brilliant (car), commingling (with them), and vigorous (in yielding rain) on sacrifices (being solemnized); when, Maruts, your worshipper, presenting oblations, pouring out the Soma juice, and offering adoration, chants the sacred song.

7. I celebrate that greatness of the Maruts, which is true, and worthy of celebration, inasmuch as their high-minded, haughty, and ever-enduring (bride), supports a flourishing progeny.

8. Mitra, and Varuṇa, and Aryaman, defend (this) sacrifice from (all that is) reprehensible, and destroy (all that are) unworthy. They cause the yet a Rodaśī usually means, as in the preceding stanza, heaven and earth; here it is said to signify the lightning, or the bride of the Maruts, marutpāni vidyūṭ-vad.

b Sūryevā, like Sūryā; the Scholiast understands by this appellation, either the wife or the daughter of Sūryā; the latter is the more usual form of the legend.—Vol. i. p. 311, and note.

c There is no substantive in the hemistic; but the epithets, vrishamāhī, abhayuḥ, sthīrā, being feminine, imply a substantive in the same gender, which the Scholiast renders by Rodaśī, the wife of the Maruts, who, by contributing to the fall of rain, assists in the sustenance of mankind.
unfallen and showering (rains) to descend, when, Maruts, the water-yielding (season) gives increase to this (world).*

9. None of us, Maruts, have attained, either nearly or remotely, the limit of your strength: those (Maruts), increasing in energy and vigour, overwhelm their enemies like an ocean.

10. Let us, who are beloved of Indra, glorify him to-day; let us glorify him to-morrow, at the sacred rite; let us glorify him for our great (good), in future days as of old, so that Ribhuksin may ever be favourable to us amongst men.

11. This praise, Maruts, is for you; this hymn is for you, (the work) of a venerable author, capable of conferring delight (by his laudations): may the praise reach you for (the good of your) persons, so that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

Súkta IV. (CLXVIII.)
The deities and Rishi are the same; the first seven verses are in the Jagati, the last three in the Trishûbh metre.

1. Maruts, at every sacrifice your alacrity is uniform: you, verily, discharge your every function for the benefit of the gods: therefore, do I invite you to come hither, by sacred hymns, for (the sake

* Vavridha im maruto ddīvdrak: the latter may refer to the Yajamana, when the phrase will be, when, Maruts, the worshipper, or he by whom the offering is presented, promotes this your increase.
of) your powerful protection of heaven and earth, and your beneficent praise.

2. They who are as if embodied, self-born, self-invigorated, and (ever) tremulous (in movement), are generated (to confer) abundant food and heaven: they are numerous as the undulations of the waters; they are to be praised when present, shedding water, like cows (yielding milk).

3. They, who are like the Soma plants, with well-nourished branches, and then poured out (in libations), are imbibed; they abide, like devoted adherents, in the hearts (of men); upon their shoulders hangs (a lance), like a youthful female, and in their hands a guard and sword are wielded.

4. Mutually supported, they descend readily from the sky: immortal Maruts, animate us by your own words (to praise you): exempt from toil, present at many (sacrifices); brilliant-eyed, the Maruts have shaken the firmest mountains.

5. Maruts, lightning-armed, who, (standing) amongst you, sets you of yourselves in motion, as the jaws are (set in motion) by the tongue: as falling rains (are essential) for the obtaining of food, so

(those, desirous of sustenance), excite you in various ways, like a horse in (his) daily (training).\textsuperscript{a}

6. Where, Maruts, is the limit of the vast region (whence you come)\textsuperscript{b} where is the beginning of that to which you proceed: when you scatter the dense vapour like light grass, and hurl down the brilliant rain-cloud by the thunderbolt.

7. Like your possession of treasure, Maruts, is your liberality: ministerial (of Indra's bounty), heaven-bestowing, brilliant, fruitful, favourable to the husbandman, propitious: it is like the donation of a wealthy (donor), prompt (of distribution), and like the all-subduing force of the Asuras.\textsuperscript{c}

8. The rivers are arrested by the thunderbolts when they utter the voice of the clouds; but the lightnings smile in the firmament when the Maruts sprinkle water on the earth.

9. Priśni bore the brilliant troop of the quick-moving Maruts for the great combat (with the clouds), whereupon (mankind) immediately beheld the desiderated food.

10. This praise, Maruts, is for you: this hymn is for you, (the work) of a venerable author, capable of conferring delight (by his laudations): may the praise reach you for (the good of your) persons, so that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

\textsuperscript{b} Rajaso mahaśpurum may mean the limit of the rains; rajas being a synonyme of either loka or udaka.

\textsuperscript{c} Asuryeva janjati; asurasya sarvādhībhavanti śaktih: according to the Scholiast, the similitude consists in this, that, as the Asuras take from one to give to another, so the winds plunder the clouds to enrich the earth.

Śūnta V. (CLXIX.)

The deity is Indra; the Rishi, Agاستیا; the metre, Tristubh.

Varga VIII.

1. Thou, Indra, art mighty from the might of those of whom thou art the protector against abandonment: therefore, creator of the Maruts, favourably-minded towards us, grant us those blessings which are most dear to thee.

2. Rulers over all men, and impelling towards man the water-shedding clouds, they are united, Indra, (with thee): the host of Maruts is delighted by (thy) acquisition of heaven-bestowing wealth.

3. Thy weapon, Indra, is at hand for our (good); the Maruts send down the long-accumulated rain; Agni is blazing for the ceremony; the oblations encompass him as the waters (surround) an island.

4. Do thou, Indra, quickly grant us that wealth (which thou possessest, for we gratify) the donor with a most worthy present: we, thy praisers, offer to thee, the ready-giver of boons, the laudations that would propitiate thee; (and the priests) nourish thee with sacrificial food, as they cherish the bosom (of a female for the sake of replenishing it) with sweet (milk).

5. Thy riches, Indra, are most delighting;* the exciters of any one desirous to sacrifice: may those Maruts be propitious to us; the divine beings who were anxious to go first to the ceremony.

6. Go, Indra, to the mighty rain-shedding leaders (of the clouds), and exert thyself in (thine) aerial dwelling; for their broad-footed steeds stand (firm), like the manly energies of an enemy in the field of battle.\(^a\)

7. The noise of the formidable, dark-coloured, swift-moving, and advancing Maruts, is everywhere echoed; (the noise) of them who strike down their mortal (foes) gathering in a host against them, by their self-defending blows, as (they strike down) a contemptible enemy.\(^b\)

8. Associated with the Maruts, do thou, Indra, for thine own honour and the good of all, pierce the exhilarating receptacles of the waters, for thou, Indra, art glorified by the landed divinities: may we obtain for thee food, strength, and long life.

\(^a\) Tirthe nāryah paunsyāni tatahuh: aryah is said to be for areh, satroh, of an enemy: tirthe, yuddhamārge, the way of battle: or, according to the Scholiast, it may be rendered, the broad-based, dark-coloured clouds stand like the manly armies of a prince, śvāmisah on the royal road, rājā-vākhām.

\(^b\) So Śāyaśa interprets rīkhāvānam; otherwise, it might be thought to imply a debtor, as if the cloud was debtor to the winds for its contents.
The deity and Rishi as before, but the hymn is in the form of a dialogue between them; the two first verses are in the Brihati, the three last in the Anushthubh metre.

1. (Indra speaks),—It is not certain what to-day or what to-morrow will yield to us: who comprehends this mystery: verily, the mind of any other (being) is of an unsteady (nature), and even that which has been profoundly studied, is (in time) forgotten.

2. (Agastya),—Why, Indra, dost thou purpose to slay us: the Maruts are thy brethren.

The Scholiast cites the Nirukta, 1. 6, for the occasion of the dialogue: Agastya, having intended to offer a sacrifice to Indra, proposed to make offerings also to the Maruts, of which Indra complains; the object being evidently, what has been elsewhere indicated, the association of the Maruts with Indra in the worship addressed to the latter, apparently an innovation, and objected to by some of the worshippers of Indra.

Na núnam asti no śwah, lit. it is not certain, nor is it to-morrow; but Súrya and Yáska consider the first negative to imply to-day; it is not certain, Indra says, whether I shall receive any offering either to-day or to-morrow: hope or expectation of the future should not be entertained.

The latter portion of this stanza is not very clear: anyasya chittam abhi sancharyam, utdhitam vi nasyati; literally, the mind of another is very wandering; although read, (it) perishes. Roth translates it; on the fickleness of the other (?) what other)—rests the (well-grounded) expectation.—Nir. Erläuterungen, p. 7.

Being equally with Indra, the sons of Aditi, according to the Purāṇas: but here, probably, nothing more is meant than affinity of function.
with them (the offering) in peace; destroy us not in enmity.

3. (Indra),—Wherefore, brother Agastya, dost thou, who art my friend, treat me with disregard: verily, we know what is in thy mind: thou dost not intend to give us anything.

4. (Agastya),—Let the priests decorate the altar; let them kindle the fire to the east; and then let us both consummate the sacrifice, the inspirer of immortal (wisdom).b

5. (Agastya),—Thou, Vasupati, art the lord of riches; thou, Mitrapati, art the firm stay (of us), thy friends: Declare, Indra, along with the Maruts, (thy approval of our acts), and partake of the oblation offered in due season.

Sūkta VII. (CLXXI.)
The deities are the Maruts; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. I approach you, Maruts, with this reverential homage, and with a hymn implore your favour against eager (foes): with minds pacified by our praises, suppress your anger, and let loose your horses. c

* This is also a figurative relationship, founded on the interchange of benefits, the presentation of oblations by one, the reward given by the other.

b Some refer this stanza to Indra, but it seems more suited to Agastya; in which case the two are either the sacrificer and his wife, or the institutor of the ceremony and the officiating priest.

c Take the horses out of your car, that you may not come back to the sacrifice in anger: this hymn again indicates a sort of trimming between the worship of Indra and of the Maruts.
2. This praise, accompanied by offerings, Maruts, is for you, offered from the heart: accept it, divinities, with favour, and come with willing minds (to receive) these (laudations), for you are the augmenters of sacrificial food.

3. May the Maruts, now hymned, bestow happiness upon us: may Maghavan, now glorified, be propitious to us: Maruts, may all the ensuing days that may be expected by us prove gratifying, and full of enjoyment.

4. Maruts, through fear of that violent Indra, I fly, trembling, (from his presence): the oblations that had been prepared for you have been put away: nevertheless, have patience with us.

5. The rays of the ever-recurring mornings, favoured, Indra, by thy vigour, confer consciousness as they shine: showerer of benefits, ancient (of days), bestower of strength, fierce, (and attended) by the fierce Maruts, grant us (abundant) food.

6. Do thou, Indra, cherish the vigorous leaders (of the rains), be free from displeasure against the Maruts: overcoming (our) enemies along with the intelligent (Maruts), support us (so that) we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sūkta VIII. (CLXXII.)

Varga XII.

1. Maruts, of inseparable splendour, may your coming be marvellous, liberal benefactors, for our protection.

2. Maruts, liberal benefactors, may your bright destructive (shaft) be far from us: may the stone which you hurl be far from us.

3. Maruts, liberal benefactors, protect my people, (although I be) as insignificant as grass: lift us up, that we may live.

Sūkta IX. (CLXXIII.)

The deity is Indra; the Rishi, Agastya; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. The priests chant the heaven-ascending Sāma, as thou knowest (it), for such (praise) do we venerate as the cause of increase and conferrer of heaven, whence the kine, unimpeded, do honour to the divine (Indra), who is seated on the sacred grass.

2. The showerer (of the oblation, the offerer of the sacrifice, assisted) by (the priests), presenting the oblations which have been provided by himself, adores (Indra), in order that he may hasten (to the rite), as a (thirsty) deer to the water. The mortal invoker (of the gods), O mighty Indra, whilst glorifying them who are desirous of praise, presents a twofold offering (to thee).

3. The invoker (of the gods, Agni), pervades the measured stations (of the altars), and accepts that (oblation), which is the germ of the year and of the

4. We offer to him, (INDRA), the most pious (oblations): the worshippers of the gods present to him substantial (adorations).\textsuperscript{b} may he, of conspicuous lustre, standing in his car, and light-moving like the AŚWINS, be gratified (by our worship).

5. Glorify that INDRA who is mighty, who is a hero, possessing abundant wealth, standing in his car, a valiant combatant against adversaries, the wielder of the thunderbolt, the disperser of all-enveloping gloom.

6. Heaven and earth are insufficient for the girth of that INDRA, who, with his greatness, rules over the leaders (of sacrifice): as the atmosphere encompasses the earth, so he encompasses (the three worlds), and, being the master of the rain, he upholds the sky as well as the firmament and the earth.\textsuperscript{c}

7. Those people, who, jointly worshipping INDRA, diligently endeavour, O hero, to propitiate thee, the invigorator in combats, the guide in the right way: provide, for his gratification, with sacrificial viands.

8. The libations (offered) to thee are, verily, the cause of happiness, since the divine waters (effused) in the firmament for the benefit of mankind afford thee satisfaction. All praise, Indra, is acceptable to thee, and thou rewardest with understanding those who praise thee.

9. May we be, as it were, thy valued friends, O Lord, and obtain our desires, like those (who gain their objects) by the praise of princes. May Indra, propitiated by our eulogiums, be brought to the sacrifice by our hymns.

10. Emulous in commendation, like (those contending for the favour) of men, may Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, be equally (a friend) to us: like those who, desirous of his friendship, (conciliate) the lord of a city (ruling) with good government, so do our intermediate (representatives) propitiate (Indra) with sacrifices.

11. One man propitiates Indra, augmenting (his vigour) by sacrifice; another, who is insincere, worships (him), with mind averted, (toworldly thoughts): (to the first he is) like a lake to a thirsty (pilgrim) near a sacred spot; (to the other) like a long road, which retards the end (of the journey).b

a Mitrāyuvṛt pūrpatīm, purah svāminas, the master or governor of a city.

b The application of these comparisons is not very distinct, and it might be thought that they refer to the individuals mentioned.
12. Indra, associated with the Maruts in battles (with the clouds), abandon us not;¹ for a share of the offering is set apart, mighty one, for thee, for whom, the shedder of rain and accepter of oblations, the worship is offered with oblations, whilst the hymn glorifies the Maruts.

13. This hymn, Indra, is addressed to thee. Lord of steeds, learn by it the way to our sacrifice, and come hither for our good, that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.²

Sūkta X. (CLXXIV.)
The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

Varga XVI.

1. Thou, Indra, art king: they who are gods (are subject) to thee: therefore, scatterer (of foes), do thou protect and cherish us men: thou art the protector of the good, the possessor of wealth, the extricator of us (from sin): thou art true, the invester (of all with thy lustre), the giver of strength.

2. Thou hast humbled the people, suing for pardon,³ when thou hadst destroyed their seven new cities: thou, the irreproachable, hast dispersed in the first half of the stanza; but they are rather more intelligible as applied to Indra.

the sake of the youthful Purukutsa.

3. Go to the cities inhabited by the Rakshasas, and thence to heaven (attended), receiver of many sacrifices, by those who (attend thee). Defend, like a lion, the untamed, quick-moving Agni, that he may abide in his dwelling, fulfilling his functions.

4. Let (thy foes, Indra,) humbled by the might of thy thunderbolt, rest in their own station, for thy glory: when thou movest, (armed) with thy weapon, thou sendest down the waters: arresting thy horses, increase, by thy power, (the abundance of) food.

5. Bear, Indra, with thy obedient horses, as swift as the wind, (the sage) Kutsa, to that ceremony (to which) thou desirest (to convey him): let the sun bring near the wheel of his chariot, and let the thunder-armed advance against his opponents.

6. Indra, lord of steeds, invigorated by our Varga XVII.

* The verse admits, according to the commentator, of a different explanation, more consistent with current acceptance, rūśř; viz., thou hast made the subject (rain), soliciting forbearance, descend (in showers): when thou hadst rent asunder the gliding, world-filling (clouds), then, irreproachable one, thou didst make the waters flow in channels, and didst open the chief cloud for young Purukutsa.

animating praise, thou hast slain those who make thee no offerings, and disturb thy worshippers; but they who look upon thee as (their) protector, and are associated for (the presentation of sacrificial) food, obtain from thee posterity.

7. The sage praises thee, Indra, for the grant of desirable (food), since thou hast made the earth the bed of the Asura: Maghavan has made the three (regions) marvellous by his gifts, and has destroyed for (the prince) Duryodhæ (the Asura) Kuyavâcha, in combat.

8. The sages have celebrated thy everlasting (as well as thy) recent (exploits, in achieving which) thou hast endured many injuries in putting an end to war: verily, thou hast demolished the hostile and undivine cities; thou hast bowed down the thunderbolt of the undivine Asura.

9. Thou, Indra, art the terrifier (of thy foes); thou hast made the trembling waters overspread (the earth) like flowing rivers: but, hero, when thou fillest the ocean, thou hast protected in their well-being Turvasa and Yadu.

a The text has only tisrah, to which the Scholiast adds bhututh, either earth in three respects, as identical with the three rituals of the Darsa, or lunar periods; the Pasu, or victim; and Soma, or libation; or as implying earth, firmament, and heaven.

10. Be thou, Indra, at all times our especial defender; the preserver of our people, the bestower of strength upon all these our emulous (followers); that we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sūkta XI. (CLXXV.)

The deity is Indra; the Rishi, Agastya; the metre of the first verse is a kind of Brihatī; of the last, Trishūbh; of the rest, Anushūbh.

1. Lord of steeds, thou art exhilarated when the sacred (Soma juice) has been imbibed by thee as by its (appropriate) vessel; for to thee, showerer (of benefits), it is exhilarating, inebriating, invigorating, the yielder of delight, (satisfying as) food, and the giver of a thousand (pleasures).

2. May our Soma libation reach you, (for it is) exhilarating, invigorating, inebriating, most precious: it is companionable, Indra, enjoyable, the over-thower of hosts, immortal.

3. Thou art a hero, a benefactor, accelerate the vehicle of man (that bears him to heaven); consume, mighty one, the irreligious Dasyu, as a (wooden) vessel is burnt by fire.

5. Thy inebriety is most intense; nevertheless, thy acts (for our good) are most beneficent. Thou desirest, bountiful giver of horses, that (both thy inebriety and thy beneficence should be the means of) destroying enemies and distributing riches.

6. Inasmuch, Indra, as thou hast been the (giver of) happiness to thine ancient encomiasts, like water to one who is thirsty, therefore I constantly repeat this thy praise, that I may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sūkta XII. (CLXXVI.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Amushūbh, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishūbh.

Varga XIX.

1. Soma, exhilarate Indra (at the sacrifice we offer), for the sake of obtaining wealth: pervade him, showerer (of benefits), for when imbibed thou art the annihilator (of enemies), and sufferest not a foe to be nigh.

2. Pervade with our praise him who is the sole sustainer of men, to whom the oblation is presented, and who, the showerer (of benefits), causes (every desire) to bud like barley.

3. In whose hands are all the treasures (that are desired by) the five classes of beings: destroy, INDRA, him who oppresses us; slay him, (as if thou wast thyself) the heavenly thunderbolt.

4. Slay every one who offers not libations, however difficult to be destroyed: slay every one who is no delight to thee: bestow upon us his wealth, for the pious (worshipper) deserves it.

5. SOMA, thou protectest him in whose prayers, doubly devout, there is the combination (of praise and oblation): protect, especially, INDRA in war; protect the vigorous INDRA in battles.

6. Inasmuch, INDRA, as thou hast been the giver of happiness to thine ancient encomiasts, like water to one who is thirsty, therefore I constantly repeat this thy praise, that I may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

SŪKTA XIII. (CLXXVII.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Anushmathi, except in the last verse, in which it is Tristambha.

1. May INDRA, who is the cherisher of men, the benefactor of mankind, the lord of men, the adored of many, (come to us). INDRA, who art praised (by us), and art desirous of the oblation, harness thy vigorous steeds, and come down to me for (my) preservation.

* We have in this hymn, as we have had in others, a prodigal repetition of the words varsha and varshadam: showering, shedding, effusing; the horses are vrishaka; the car is varshaha; Indra bounty-shedding car: come down with them to us. We invoke thee, Indra, the libation being poured out.

3. Ascend thy bounty-shedding car, for for thee the Soma, the showerer of benefits, is effused, the sweet libations are prepared. Bounty-shedding Indra, having harnessed them, come with thy vigorous steeds for (the good of) mankind; come with thy rapid (car) to my presence.

4. This is the sacrifice offered to the gods: this is the offering of the victim: these are the prayers: this, Indra, is the Soma juice: the sacred grass is ready strewn: come, therefore, Indra, quickly, sit down, drink (the libation): here let loose thy steeds.

5. Glorified by us, Indra, come to (our) presence to accept the prayers of the venerable offerer (of the oblation); so that we may ever enjoy prosperity through thy protection, and thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sūkta XIV. (CLXXXVIII.)

The deities, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

Varga XXI.

1. Inasmuch, Indra, as the praise by which thou art (induced to bestow) protection on thine adorers is heard (by all), therefore disappoint not the desire in vrishabha; the Soma is vrishan; and so on, showing poverty both of ideas and expressions.

* Ayam miyedha: the latter is explained as an epithet of Yajña, derived from medha, which, according to a text cited by the commentator, is the same as pāśu, a victim.
(that would raise us) to greatness: may I obtain, through thy (favour), all things that are obtainable by man.

2. Let not the royal Indra frustrate those our actions, which the sisters, (Day and Night), are directing to their object. May these invigorating offerings propitiate him, so that he may bestow upon us friendly (regard), and (abundant) food.

3. Indra, the hero, the victor in battles, along with the leaders (of his hosts, the Maruts), will hear the invocation of his supplicating worshipper, and when disposed to accept his praises, will, of his own accord, drive his chariot close to the donor (of the oblation).

4. Verily, Indra, through desire of (sacrificial) food, is the devourer (of that which is presented) by (his) worshippers, and overcomes (the adversaries) of his friend: in the many-voiced assembly (of men), Indra, the faithful (performer of his promise), commending (the piety) of his worshipper, approves of the (offered) food.

5. By thee, opulent Indra, may we overcome our mighty and formidable enemies: thou art our protector: mayst thou be propitious to our prosperity, that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

*Svastrā, lit. sisters, may mean as explained in the text; or it may imply the associated institutor of the rite and the officiating priest; or it may mean the fingers which are employed in ritual manipulations.
Sūkta XV. (CLXXIX.)

There is no deity, properly speaking, to this Sūkta; but Rati, the goddess of pleasure, is suggested by the Scholiast as taking the place of one; the Rishis are the supposed interlocutors, Agastya, his wife, Lopamudrā, and certain disciples of the sage who have overheard the conversation; the metre is Trishûbbh.

Varga XXII.

1. (Lopamudrā).—Many years have I been serving thee diligently, both day and night, and through mornings, bringing on old age: decay now impairs the beauty of my limbs: what, therefore, is now (to be done): let husbands approach their wives.

2. The ancient sages, disseminators of truth, who, verily, conversed of truths with the gods, begot (progeny), nor thereby violated (their vow of continence), therefore should wives be approached by their husbands.

3. (Agastya).—Penance has not been practised in vain: since the gods protect us, we may indulge all our desires: in this world we may triumph in many conflicts, if we exert ourselves mutually together.

4. Desire, either from this cause or from that, has come upon me whilst engaged in prayer and suppressing (passion): let Lopamudrā approach her husband: the unsteady female beguiles the firm and resolute man.

SECOND ASHTAKA—FOURTH ADHYAYA. 175

5. (Pupil),—I beseech the Soma juice, which has been drunk in my heart, that it may fully expiate the sin we have committed; man is subject to many desires.

6. Agastya, a venerable sage, working with (fit) implements, desiring progeny, offspring, and strength, practised both classes (of obligations), and received true benedictions from the gods.

+a Antito hritu pitam, drunk mentally, not actually, is probably intended.
+b The sin of listening to the conversation of their Guru with his wife; according to Suvaka, the repetition of this and the following verse expiates sin in general, and secures the accomplishment of all desires.
+c Khanaamana khanitrakah, lit. digging with digging tools; that is, effecting his objects by appropriate means, earning his reward by sacrifice and hymns.
+d Prajam apatyam balam ichchhamana: prajam is distinguished by the Scholiast as implying repeated successions, descendants, and apatyam as signifying more immediate descent, sons, grandsons; or prajam may mean descendants.
+e Kama and Tapas, desire and devotion; the duties of domestic as well as ascetic life.
Varga XXIII.

1. Āświns, your horses are traversers of the (three) regions, when your chariot proceeds to (its desired) quarters: the golden fellies of your wheels grant (whatever is wished for): drinking the Soma juice, you participate in the morning (rite).

2. Direct downwards (the course) of your (car) swift moving, variously going, friendly to man, and to be especially venerated, when, all adorable, your sister (dawn) prepares (for your approach), and (the institutor of the ceremony) worships you, drinkers of the Soma juice, for the sake (of obtaining) strength and food.

3. You have restored milk to the cow: you have (brought) down the prior mature (secretion) into the unripe (or barren udder) of the cow: the devout offerer of the oblation worships you, whose forms are truth, (as vigilant in the midst of the ceremony), as a thief (in the midst) of a thicket.

4. You rendered the heat as soothing as sweet butter to Atri;* wishing (for relief), and invested it with coolness, like water: therefore, for you, Āświns, leaders (of rites,) the fire-offering (is

5. Dasras, may I bring you, by the vehicle of my prayers, (hither), to bestow (upon me your aid), like the infirm son of Tugra: heaven and earth combine (to worship you) through your greatness: may this, your aged (worshipper), adorabe (Aświns), enjoy long life, (exempt) from sin.

6. Bountiful givers, when you yoke your horses you replenish the earth with viands: may this your worshipper be (swift) as the wind to propitiate and please you, that, through your great (favour), he may, like a pious man, obtain food.

7. Your sincere adorers, we verily praise you in various ways. The pitcher has been placed (ready for. the Soma juice). Irreproachable Aświns,

c Vi pātir-hitāvān: Sāyāha proposes first, to explain pāthi by droha-kalāśa, the jar or vessel into which the Soma juice, after expression, is strained through a filter; but he then suggests that pāthi may have its more usual sense of a merchant or trader, and hitāvān, instead of 'being placed,' may mean opulent; in which case vi will have the force of viyuṣyaṭām, let him be separated; implying, let the niggardly rich man who does not offer worship be cast off: the Niti manjari appears to have had a different, but scarcely correct reading, ahaviḥ-pāthi, a niggardly offering, no oblation.

8. Aświns, Agastya, eminent amongst the leaders of men, arouses you daily with numerous (invocations), like an instrument of sound,* for the sake of obtaining a manifold (flow) of a torrent (of rain).

9. When, by the virtue of your chariot, you come (to the sacrifice), and when, like the ministering priest, (after discharging his function), you depart, gliding away, you give to the devout (worshippers a reward), though it be store of good horses: may we be enriched, Nāsātyas, (by your favour).

10. We invoke to-day, Aświns, with hymns, for the sake of good things, your praise-worthy chariot of undamaged wheels, and traversing the sky, that we may obtain (from it) food, strength, and long life.

Śūkta II. (CLXXXI.)

Varga XXV.

1. When, beloved (Aświns), do you bear aloft (the materials) of food and riches, that, desirous of the sacrifice, you may send down the rain: this sacrifice offers you adoration, givers of riches, protectors of men.

2. Aświns, may your horses, pure, rain-drinking, swift as the wind, heaven-born, quick-moving, fleet as thought, vigorous, well-backed, and self-irradiating, bring you hither.

* Kārddhunāva, from kārd, sound, śabda; and dhuni, generating, utpādayitā, such as the conch shell and the like, śankhidi sa īva.
3. Aświns, excellent and steady, may your chariot, vast as the earth, broad-fronted, rapid as the rain, (fleet) as thought, emulative* and adorable, come hither for (our) good.

4. Born here (in the middle region) and here (in the upper region), b you are glorified together, as faultless in your forms and (perfect in) your own many excellences: c one (of you), the victorious son (of the firmament), the devout (promoter) of sacred sacrifice, the other, the auspicious son of heaven, d (each) upholds (the world).

5. Aświns, may the golden-coloured (car of one of you), traversing at will the quarters of space, e come to our dwellings; may mankind encourage the horses of the other by food, by friction, and by shouts.

a Akampūrvah, I first, is usually applied to a warrior, one who would be first in battle: Śāyaṇa would explain it here intelligent, manasvin; or very generous, atyuddrah.

b Iheka jātā, literally, born here and here, iha and iha: the Scholiast supplies the amplification, identifying the Aświns with the Sun and Moon.

c Arepasā tanvā nāmabhik swaih; or arepasā may mean, free from sin, according to the commentator, apāyau, alluding to the legend of the decapitation of Dadhyanch, vol. i., p. 216, by which act, with reference to its result, no sin was incurred.

d As the same with the moon and sun, one Aświn may be termed the son of the middle region or firmament; the other, the son of the upper region, heaven or sky.

e Niceruh kakuho vasām anu: kakuha may be an epithet of ratha, signifying best, kresṭha; but it seems unnecessary to depart from its more usual meaning of points of the horizon.
Varga XXVI. 6. (One of you), the disperser (of the clouds), like Indra, the annihilator (of his foes), desirous of the oblation, proceeds, (bestowing) abundant food. (Devout worshippers) cherish with (sacrificial) viands, (the faculties) of the other, for the sake of favours, which flow upon us like swelling rivers.

7. Aświns, creators, the perpetual threefold hymn, addressed to you, has been uttered, (to secure) your steady (favour): thus glorified, protect him who solicits (your bounty), and, whether moving or resting, hear his invocation.

8. May the praise of your resplendent forms, (uttered) in the hall of sacrifice, thrice strewn with sacred grass, bring prosperity to the conductors (of the sacrifice). Showerers (of benefits), may the raining cloud, proceeding to man, nourish him like a sprinkling of water.

9. The wise offerer of oblations, like Pūshan, praises you, Aświns, as (he would praise) Agni and Ushas, (at the season) at which I invoke you.

a Saradoväd, which is variously interpreted: it may be synonymous with Saradovāḍa, blighting, withering as leaves; or many-yeared, old, eternal, bahu-samvatsaraḥ; or autumnal, with reference to one of the Aświns as the moon, Sarat-kālā vāna.

b This and the preceding stanza are not very explicit in the comparison which is intimated between the functions of the two Aświns, for the use of anyasya, of the other, in the second half of the verse, is all that intimates that ekasya, of the one, is understood in the first half.

c Alluding to the time at which it is especially proper to worship the Aświns, the morning sacrifice.
praising with devotion, that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sūkta III. (CLXXXII.)

The deities, Rishi, and metre, as before.

1. The information, sage (priests), has been re- Varga XXVII. received: be ready with your praises, for the (benefit-) showering car (of the Aświns has arrived): pro- pitiate (the divinities), for they show favour to the doer of good works: they are entitled to praise, rich in benevolence to mankind, the grandsons of heaven, and observers of holy rites.

2. Daśras, in truth most imperial, adorable, swifter than the winds, and eminent in good works, riders in a car, and most distinguished charioteers, bring hither your car, full heaped up with ambrosia, and with it come, Aświns, to the donor (of the offering).

3. What make you here, Aświns; why do you tarry, (where) any man who makes no oblation is respected: humble him; take away the life of the niggard; grant light to the pious man striving to speak your praise.

4. Annihilate, Aświns, the dogs who bark at us:

5. You constructed a pleasant, substantial, winged bark, borne on the ocean waters for the son of Tugra, by which, with mind devoted to the gods, you bore him up, and, quickly descending (from the sky), you made a path for him across the great waters.

6. Four ships launched into the midst of the

* Plava, a raft, a float.
* See vol. i. p. 306.
* Chatusra návad, four boats or ships: in this and all the other expressions in this hymn, referring to the legend, it is impossible to dispute the applicability of the text to the story: the authenticity of the narrative, depending solely upon tradition, may be questionable enough, but its purport is fully borne out by the expressions of the text, in this and half a dozen other places, in which the incidents are alluded to. Professor Roth has not merely questioned the accuracy of the translation, but has confidently asserted that there is no mention of the 'sea' in the text; grounding his assertion, apparently, upon 'samudra,' meaning the antariksha, or mid-heaven, as well as the ocean; how Bhujyu should have fallen into jeopardy in the sky, how he should have got there at all, might have induced a cautious critic to hesitate before he would restrict the meaning of samudra to antariksha; but in this place, and in several others, there is no room for an equivocal meaning: sindhu, kshodas, arnas, are none of them included amongst the synonyms of antariksha: in one place, indeed, the text seems to have made a provision against a misapprehension, by placing the scene of the adventure, arnas receptacle (of the waters), sent by the Aświns, brought safe to shore the son of Tugra, who had been cast headlong into the waters (by his foes), and plunged in inextricable darkness.

7. What was the tree that was stationed in the midst of the ocean, to which the supplicating son of Tugra clung: as leaves (are caught hold of) for the support of a falling animal: a you, Aświns, bore him up to safety, to your great renown.

8. May the praise which your devout adorers have uttered be acceptable to you, Nāsatyas; leaders (in pious rites): be propitiated to-day by the libations of our assembly, that we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

The deities, Rishi, and metre, as before.

2. Your easy-rolling car alights upon the earth, where, favourable to the sacred rite, you stop for the sake of the (sacrificial) food: may this hymn, promotive of your personal (welfare), be associated with your forms, and do you unite with the dawn, the daughter of heaven.

3. Ascend your rolling car, which approaches the sacred rite of the offerer of the oblation; the car in which, Násatyas, leaders, you purpose to come to the sacrifice, and to proceed to the dwelling (of the worshipper), for (bestowing upon him) offspring, and for his own (good).

4. Let not the wolf, let not the she-wolf, harm me, safe (in your protection); abandon me not, nor deliver me (to another). This your share (of the offering) is prepared; this prayer, Dasras, (is addressed) to you; these treasures of Soma juice are for you.

5. Gotama, Purumílinha, Atri, (each), offering oblations, invokes you for his protection: like unto a wayfarer, who (makes for his intended direction) by a straight (path), do you, Dasras, come (direct) to my invocation.\(^a\)

FIFTH ADHYĀYA.

SŪKTA V. (CLXXXIV.)
The deities,Ṛishi, and metre, as before.

1. We invoke you two, (Āświns), to-day; the same two on any other day: when the morning dawns. Nāsatyas, grandsons of heaven, wherever you may be, the pious reciter (of the hymn) invokes you with praises on behalf of the liberal donor (of the offering).

2. Showerers (of benefits), rejoicing in (our) libations, make us happy, and destroy the niggard (withholder) of offerings: hear, leaders, with your ears, my praises addressed to you with pure words, for you are seekers (after praise), you are retentive (of laudation).

3. Divine Āświns,* in whom is no untruth, invoking the Āświns, as the directest path to the realization of his wishes.

* The text has simply Puṣhās, which is, properly, an appellation of a form of the sun: it is here said, by the Scholiast, to (darting) like arrows to acquire glory, and to carry off Súryá, a to you are addressed the prayers that are recited at holy rites, for (the completion of) the uninterrupted, sin-removing (sacrifice), as ancient ages (offered them).

4. Receivers of the oblation, may your liberality be displayed towards us: be pleased with the hymn of the venerable author, so that men may honour the institutor of the ceremony, as (they honour) you, liberal donors, for the sake of renown.

5. Aśwīns, possessors of wealth, this sin-removing hymn has been addressed to you, together with respectful (oblations): Násatyas, be favourable to Agastya; come to his dwelling for (confer-ring on him) progeny, and for his own (good).

6. (Through your aid), Aśwīns, we cross over the limit of darkness: to you this (our hymn) has been addressed: come hither by the path traversed by the gods, that we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

indicate both the Aśwīns, the one as the sun and the other, understood, as the moon.

* See vol. i. p. 311. The commentator adds to the legend, that, besides Súryá, a prize was offered of a hymn of a thousand stanzas, which the Aśwīns also won; but, at the request of Agni and other competitors, they gave up to them portions of the hymn.

b Varuṇasya bhūreh is interpreted by the Scholiast, svichchhin-nasya varuṇasya-phalapratibandhaka pápanivārakasya ydgasya, of the uninterrupted sacrifice which is obstructive of the sin that intercepts the reward: the expression is unusual.
Sūkta VI. (CLXXXV.)
The deities are Heaven and Earth; the Rishi and metre as in the last.

1. Which of these two, (Heaven and Earth), is prior, which posterior; how were they engendered; declare), sages, who knows this? verily, you uphold the universe of itself, and the days (and nights)\(^a\) revolve as if they had wheels.

2. Footless and motionless, they sustain numerous moving and footed races, as a son is even (nursed) on the lap of his parents: defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great (danger).\(^b\)

3. I solicit of Aditi\(^c\) wealth, without pain or decay, like heaven (in its fullness of enjoyment), exempt from injury, and abounding in food: grant, Heaven and Earth, such wealth to him who praises you: defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great (danger).

4. May we ever be (devoted to) that Heaven and Earth, who are not subject to annoyance, who satisfy (all beings) with food, who have the gods (and men)

\(^a\) Aham chakriyeva, two days as if wheeled; that is, the succession of day and night, each of which may be considered in turn as preceding or following the other, like the rotations of a wheel. See also Yāska, iii. 22.

\(^b\) Rakshatam na abhvat: abhva means merely great—the substantive has to be supplied: according to Sāyāka, it is, from sin as the cause of great danger,—mahato bhayaḥetoh pāpāt.

\(^c\) Aditi is here said to mean the firmament.
for sons, and who are both endowed with the double (condition) of the divine days (and nights):* defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great (danger).

5. Going always together, equally young, and of the like termination, sisters, and kindred, and scenting the navel of the world, placed on their lap as its parents: it defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

6. I invoke to the sacrifice, for the preservation of gods (and men), the two vast, all-supporting, and mighty parents (of the rain and corn); who, beautiful in form, sustain ambrosial (showers); defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

7. I glorify with reverence, at this sacrifice, (the two), who are vast, expansive, multiform, infinite, auspicious; who support (all beings) by their bounty: defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

8. May this sacrifice be the means of expiating those offences which we may have committed against the gods, against a friend at any time, a Ube devsnām ubhayēbhīr-ahām: ahan, according to the Scholiast, implies night as well as day.

b Abhijīghranti bhuvanasya nābhim pitor-upasthe: the meaning is not very obvious; nābhi, according to Sāstra, here means 'water'; udakam, as the binding of all beings,—bhutejādāsya bandhakam; and which may be regarded as the child of heaven and earth, as they both contribute to its production,—ubhayor udakapradattvam prāsiddham: or the two here mentioned may imply water and the oblation, which are also connected. against a son-in-law: a defend us, Heaven and Earth, from great danger.

9. May both these, accepting praise, and friendly to man, be favourable to me: may they both be associated as guardians for my protection: deities, we, your adorers, propitiating you with (sacrificial) food, desire ample (wealth), for the sake of making liberal donations.

10. Endowed with understanding, I repeat to Heaven and Earth this initial praise, to be heard around: may paternal (heaven) and maternal (earth) preserve us from reprehensible iniquity; and ever nigh defend us with their protection.

11. May this (hymn), Heaven and Earth, be successful; (the hymn) which, Father and Mother, I repeat to you both on this occasion; be ever with your protection in the proximity of those who praise you; b that we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sūkta VII. (CLXXXVI.)

The deities are the Viśwadevas; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. May the divine Savitri, the benefactor of all men, come benignantly to our solemnity, together with the divinities of earth, and do you, who are a Jāyapatim वद्: Jāh, it is said, means ‘daughters;’ patim is, as usual, lord or husband.

b Devānām avame: the first is interpreted stotrānām, ‘of praisers.’
(always) young, willingly present at our sacrifice, exhilarate us, as (you exhilarate) the whole world.\textsuperscript{a}

2. May all the triumphant gods, MīTRA, ARYAMAN, VARUṆA, equally well pleased, come (to our rite): may they all be propitious to us: may they not leave us in want of food, after overcoming (our foes).

3. I praise with hymns, (O gods), your best beloved guest, AGNĪ, who is prompt (to partake of the oblation), and who is well pleased along (with you); so that (thereby) VARUṆA, the possessor of renown, the subduer of foes, the animator (of men), may fill us with food.

4. I approach you, (deities), with reverence, night and day, in the hope of overcoming (sin), as (willingly) as a gentle cow (comes to be milked), mixing (for you) on the appropriate day the (sacrificial) food, (consisting) of multiform (preparations) of milk (generated) from the same udder.\textsuperscript{b}

\textsuperscript{a} This verse occurs in the Yajurveda, 33, 34. Mahādhara rather differs from Śadvaha in his explanation. Viśvādara he considers an epithet of Savitṛ,—viśva nara hitakārī, the doer of good to all men.\textsuperscript{b} He renders by food,—yathā sarve īrām bhakṣhayanti tathā ētu; whilst Śadvaha has for īrdbhik saha, bhūmīsaṁyād bhūmābhik, with the divinities, whose place is earth; in the second part of the verse, he explains jagad by jagama, moveable; that is, cattle and offspring.

\textsuperscript{b} Viśvādara payasi saṁmāsa-udhāna, 'in multiform milk in a common udder;' or it may be explained, the manifold water or solution of the Soma juice prepared for the sacrifice; which may be compared, on account of its yielding rewards, to an udder yielding milk, whence butter and the like.
5. May Ahibbudhnya\(^a\) grant us happiness: may Sindhut\(^b\) come, nourishing us as a (cow her) calf, whereby we may propitiate the grandson of the waters, (Agni), whom the clouds, swift as thought, convey.

6. Or may Twashtri come to this sacrifice, equally well pleased with those who praise (him) at the excellent (rite) at which he is present: may the most potent Indra, the protector of man, the destroyer of Veitra, come to the (solemnity) of our leaders.

7. For our minds, yoked together like horses, tend to the ever youthful Indra, as cows to their calves: and the praises of men, (addressed) to him, are generating most fragrant (fruit),\(^c\) as wives bear (children to their husbands).

8. Or may the Maruts, being of one mind, come from heaven and earth (to the sacrifice); they who are a mighty host, who have parti-coloured steeds, who are like protecting chariots,\(^d\) and who are

\(^a\) Or Akhir, who is also Budhnya: Ahi and Budhna are both said to be synonyms of amariksha, and the compound implies a divinity presiding over the firmament: they occur as one name in the Nirukta, v. 4; it is no doubt the same with the Ahirradhna of the Purushas, who is by them enumerated as one of the Rudras. —Vishnu P. 121. In the Kosha of Hemachandra, Ahirradhna is a name of Siva.

\(^c\) Surabhishamam, explained by the commentary, atisayena surabhim, exceedingly fragrant; a rather singular epithet.

\(^d\) Avanayo na rathah-rakshakhah-rathah; or avanaya may mean, bending, or inclining downwards.
devourers of foes: may they come like friendly deities.

9. For, verily, their greatness is well known, (as) they diligently discharge their functions; by which their sport pours rain upon every arid soil, as light spreads (universally) on a fine day.

10. Propitiate the Aświns and Pūshan, for my protection; (propitiate) those (deities), who are of independent powers,* as Viṣṇu, devoid of hatred, Vāyu, and Ribhurṣhin,¹ and may I influence the gods to be present for my felicity.

11. Objects of admiration, may that wealth-abounding effulgence which manifests itself amongst the gods, give animation to our existence, and (permanence to) our dwellings; that we may (thence) obtain food, strength, and long life.

Sūkta VIII. (CLXXXVII.)

The deity is termed Pitr, the divinity presiding over food;⁶ the Rishi is Agastya; the metre of the second, fourth, eighth, ninth, and tenth verses, is Gāyatrī; of the other six, Ushākh.

Varga VI.

I. I glorify Pitr, the great, the upholder, the

⁶ Anna devatā, or simply anna, the divinity presiding over food, or merely food; pitr implying pālakam, that which nourishes: according to Sāmanaka, the hymn should be recited by a person about to eat, when his food will never disagree with him; its repetition also, accompanied with oblations and worship, will strong, by whose invigorating power Trīta\(^a\) slew the mutilated Vṛtra.

2. Savoury Pitu; sweet Pitu; we worship thee: become our protector.

3. Come to us, Pitu, auspicious with auspicious aids; a source of delight; not unpalatable; a friend well respected, and having none (but agreeable properties).\(^b\)

4. Thy flavours, Pitu, are diffused through the regions, as the winds are spread through the sky.

5. Those (men), Pitu, (are the enjoyers of thy bounty), who are thy distributors, most sweet Pitu, (to others): they who are the relishers of thy flavours, are as if they had stiff necks.\(^c\) secure him against want of food, and if he should have taken poison, its silent repetition will act as an antidote.

6. The thoughts of the mighty gods are fixed, Varga VII.

\(^a\) Trīta is here evidently a name of Indra; the Scholiast explains it, he whose fame is spread through the three worlds; or, as Mahāthara interprets it, Tristhāna-Indra, the three-stationed Indra.—Yajur-Veda, xxxiv. 7.

\(^b\) The text has adhayaḍh, not being twofold; that is, according to the commentator, being of the property described alone; not comprising any incompatible property; or it may be an epithet of sakdh, a friend, one who does not differ in mind or act.

\(^c\) Twigrīvaḍh iva trate; tvai is, ordinarily, a synonyme of bahu, much, many; Sāyaḍha explains it by pravriddha, enlarged; because, he says, when people eat, they are dridhāṅga, erect, firm; and when they are without food, the neck is bent, or bends down; or it may mean, that they are great eaters, as if they had many throats.
Pitru, upon thee: by thy kind and intelligent assistance, (Indra) slew Ahī.\(^a\)

7. When, Pitru, this (product) of the water-wealthy clouds, (the rain), arrives; then do thou, sweet Pitru, be at hand with sufficiency for our eating.

8. And since we enjoy the abundance of the waters and the plants; therefore, Body, do thou grow fat.\(^b\)

9. And since we enjoy, Soma,\(^c\) thy mixture with boiled milk or boiled barley;\(^d\) therefore, Body, do thou grow fat.

10. Vegetable cake of fried meal,\(^e\) do thou be substantial, wholesome, and invigorating; and, Body, do thou grow fat.

11. We extract from thee, Pitru,\(^f\) by our praises, (the sacrificial food), as cows yield butter for oblation; from thee, who art exhilarating to the gods; exhilarating also to us.

\(^a\) Indra is supplied by the comment: there is no nominative in the text to ahim-avadhit.

\(^b\) Vatīpe pīvā id bhavā; vatīpi is explained bātra, that which is sustained by vital air,—udāta.

\(^c\) The object addressed is now not food in general, but a modified form of the Soma juice.

\(^d\) Gavāiro-yaviśatrak are said to mean preparations of milk and barley, boiled: go-vikdraksagṛddṛkṣyapadiādravyam and yavavi-kṛdṛkṣapadiā dravyam.

Sūkta IX. (CLXXXVIII.)

This hymn is addressed to the various forms of Agni, which have already occurred more than once as Āprī; the Rishi is Agastya; the metre, Gayatri.

1. Thou shinest to-day, divine conqueror of thousands, kindled by the priests: do thou, who art the sapient messenger (of the gods), convey (to them) our oblation.

2. The adorable Tanānapātī proceeds to the rite, and combines with the oblation, bearing (for the sacrificer) infinite (abundance of) food.

3. Agni, who art to be glorified, bring hither,

* Vol. i. p. 31; and this vol. p. 71: as before noticed, i. p. 122; note, the Āprī are also termed Prayāja: Sāyata also quotes Ydaka for the synonyme Kim-devatā, a term of disparagement, implying their insignificance, as much as to say contemptuously, What sort of divinities are these: the term Prayāja, that which is an especial object of worship, may be variously applied, as in the Brāhmaṇas, to divinities presiding over the seasons, over the metres of the Veda, over animals, over life, over the spirit, which are forms of Agni.—Prayāja ritudevatas ścändodevataḥ pāsudevataḥ prāṇadevataḥ dīmdevataḥ ityādīṁ bahūn pakhān upanyasya brāhmaṇāni cha pradārśya dāgheya eveti siddhāntītam.

* This hymn occasionally differs from others of the same tenor in employing as epithets the terms they use as denominatives; thus, here, samiddha is a participle, an epithet of deva: in Hymn xiii., Susamiddha, which means well-kindled, is considered to be a name of Agni.

* Ida is here used in place of Iśīta, employed elsewhere as an appellative: Narāṇa, who, in the two preceding hymns, precedes Iśīta, is here omitted.
being invoked by us, the adorable gods, for thou art the donor of thousands.

4. By the power (of their prayers) they have strewn the sacred grass, the seat of numerous heroes, pointing to the east; on which, Ādītyas, you are manifest.

5. They have sprinkled water on the doors (of the hall of sacrifice), which are variously and perfectly radiant, manifold, excellent, many, and numerous.

6. Let the brilliant and beautiful Day and Night, who shine with surpassing lustre, sit down here (upon the sacred grass).

7. Let these two chief, well-spoken, divine sages, the invokers (of the gods), perform this our sacrifice.

8. Bhāratī, Ilā, Saraswati, I invoke you all, that you may direct us to prosperity.

9. Tvashtarī, who is the master (in fashioning)

Varga IX.

See note on Varga v. vol. i. p. 32.

The epithets here given to the doors are unusual,—vīrdī samṛdī vibhvāḥ prabhuh bahūś ca bhūyasi ca ydh; they are explained by the commentator as in the text, but he adds that the two last may be understood as epithets of number, and the rest as names; the apartment having four different doors, each designated by its proper appellation: in the original, the two first, vīrdī, samṛdī, are in the nom. sing.; the others, more correctly, in the accus. plural.

Sāyāda makes Bhārati the goddess presiding over the heaven, Ilā over the earth, and Saraswati over the firmament; but they are all three considered to be special manifestations of the majesty of the sun; Etaś tiṣra Ādītyaprabhahāvaśeśaharapā ityādhuh.
the forms (of beings),\textsuperscript{a} has made all animals distinct: grant us, (Twaśṭṛi), their increase.

10. Vanaspati, deliver of thyself the victim to the gods, so that Agni may taste the oblation.

11. Agni, the preceiver of the gods, is characterized by the Gāyatrī measure: he blazes when the oblations are offered.

Śūkta X. (CLXXXIX.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi, Agastya; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. Agni, knowing all kinds of knowledge, lead us by good ways to wealth: remove far from us the sin that would force us astray, that we may offer to thee most ample adoration.\textsuperscript{b}

2. Adorable Agni, convey us by the sacred acts (of worship), beyond all evil ways: may our city be spacious; our land be extensive; be the bestower of happiness upon our offspring, upon our sons.

3. Agni, do thou remove from us disease, and \textsuperscript{a} Twaśṭṛ ārupāṇi hi prabhuk; kartum, to make, being understood: Twaśṭṛi is described by the commentator as the divinity presiding over the implements of sacrifice, but the office is also ascribed to him of fashioning beings in the womb as soon as begotten, founded upon a text of the Veda, cited as, retasad siktasya Twaśṭṛ ārupāṇi vikaroti; or, as explained by the Scholiast, yonaś eṛishṭānārupāṇi kartum prabhuk.

\textsuperscript{b} This verse is an essential one in the formule accompanying oblations with fire: it occurs three times in the Yajush, v. 36; vii. 43; and xl. 16; the explanation of Mahādhara is the same as that of Sāyaśa in the two first; in the third it is somewhat varied.
those men who, unprotected by Agni, are adverse to us; and, adorable divinity, (visit) the earth, with all the immortals, for our welfare.

4. Cherish us, Agni, with incessant bounties; shine always in thy favourite abode: let no danger, youngest (of the gods), assault thy worshipper today; nor, mighty one, let it assail him at any other season.

5. Abandon us not, Agni, to a wicked, voracious, malevolent foe; (abandon us) not to one who has fangs, and who bites;* nor to one without teeth;* nor to the malignant;* nor give us up, powerful Agni, to disgrace.

6. Agni, born for sacrifice, (a man) praising thee, who art excellent, for (the sake of cherishing) his body, becomes such as thou art; exempts himself from all who are inclined to harm or revile him; for thou, Agni, art the especial adversary of those who do wrong.

7. Adorable Agni, thou art sagacious, and in a short time discriminatest between both those men (who do and do not worship thee): approach the worshipper at the proper time, and be compliant (with his wishes); like an institutor of the rite, (who is directed) by the desires (of the priests).

8. We address our pious prayers to thee, Agni,

* Snakes and venomous reptiles.

* And who, therefore, does mischief with other natural weapons, as horns and claws.

* Rishate, to one who injures; as, thieves and Rakshasas.
the son of prayer, the subduer of foes; may we procure, by these sacred supplications, infinite wealth; that we may thence obtain food, strength, and long life.

Súkta XI. (CXC.)

The deity is Brihaspati; the Rishi Agastyá; the metre, Trishûkhā.

1. (Priests), augment by your hymns Brihaspati, who deserts not (his worshipper); the showerer (of benefits), the pleasant-tongued, the adorable; of whom resplendent, gods and men, (the ministers) of the institutor of the sacrifice, emulous in sacred songs, proclaim (the praise).

2. The hymns of the (rainy) season are addressed to him, who is verily the creator (of the rain), and has granted it (to the prayers) of the devout; for that Brihaspati is the manifest (of all), the expansive wind that (dispensing) blessings has been produced for (the diffusion of) water.

3. He is ready (to accept) the offered praise, the presentation of the homage, the hymn, as the sun (is ready to put forth) his rays: by the acts of him whom the Rakshasas (oppose not), the daily (revolving sun) exists, and he is strong as a fearful beast of prey.

4. The glory of this Bṛihaspāti spreads through heaven and earth like the sun: receiving worship, and giving intelligence, he bestows (the rewards of sacrifice); like the weapons of the hunters, so these (weapons) of Bṛihaspāti fall daily upon the workers of guile.

5. Divine Bṛihaspāti, thou dost not bestow desired (wealth) upon those stupid (men), who, sinful and mean, subsist, considering thee, who art auspicious, as an old ox: but thou favourest him who offers (thee) libations.

6. Be a (pleasant) way to him who goes well and makes good offerings, like the affectionate friend of (a ruler who) restrains the bad; and may those sinless men who instruct us, although yet enveloped (by ignorance), stand extricated from their covering.

a Mrigāhām na hetayah is explained by the commentary, hantum anvishyatām dyudhānāvā, like the weapons of those seeking to kill.

b Twad usrikam manyamanāh: usriyā is explained, a cow giving little milk; or an old one, jirnam anatwādham vā.

c Chayase it piyārum, thou goest to bestow favour on him who sacrifices with the Soma juice; but, according to the Nirukta, the words may have a different sense, implying, thou destroyest the malevolent.—rv. 25.

d Abhi ye chakshate noh, those who speak to us: the commentator says, who, bodhayanti, waken or instruct us; but it is not clear how those who are aphārita, ajñānendivita, enveloped by ignorance, should be competent to teach: another explanation is,
SECOND ASHTĀKA—FIFTH ADHYĀYA.  201

7. To whom praises (necessarily) proceed, as men (assemble round a master); as rivers, rolling between their banks, flow to the ocean: that wise Bṛihas-pati, greedy (after rain), and stationary in the midst, contemplates both* (the ferry and the water).

8. So, Bṛihaspati, the mighty, the beneficent, the powerful, the showerer (of benefits), the divine, has been glorified: praised by us, may he make us possessed of progeny and cattle, that thence we may obtain food, strength, and long life.

SūKTA XII. (CXCI.)

The divinities are considered to be Water, Grass, and the Sun; the Ṛishi is Agastya; the metre of the 10th, 11th, and 12th verses, is Mahāpānkti; of the 13th, Mahābrihāti; of the rest, Anushtubh. b

1. Some creature of little venom; some creature

let those who revile us, and are being protected, be deprived of that protection.

a Udbhayam chashtē antar Bṛihaspatistara āpāicha gridhrak: the passage is very obscure: gridhrak is explained, vrishtim ḍāṅkshandasā, desirous of rain; taras, taraham jāldhivṛddhim, crossing, or a ferry, or increase of water; āpah has its usual sense; ubhayam antar madhye sthitwō, having stood in the middle; but it is not said of what: chashtē-pakṣate, he sees; or karoti, he does: identifying Bṛihaspati with Indra, ubhayam, both, may denote heaven and earth, between which, in the Antariksha, or firmament, the region of the rain, is his proper station.

b This is a rather singular hymn: according to the Scholiast, it is a mystical antidote against poison, having been recited by Agastya under an apprehension of having been poisoned; so Šaunaka says; Let any one who is afflicted by poison diligently of great venom; or some venomous aquatic reptile;* creatures of two kinds, both destructive (of life), or (poisonous) unseen creatures, have anointed me with their poison.

2. (The antidote), coming (to the bitten person), destroys the unseen (venomous creatures); departing, (it destroys them); deprived (of substance), it destroys them (by its odour); being ground, it pulverises them.

3. (Blades of) sarar grass, (of) kusara, (of) darbha, (of) sairya, (of) munja, (of) viraña, all (the haunt) repeat the hymn Kankato na, when it will have no effect upon him, though inflicted by a serpent, or an envenomed spear: he will overcome all venom in reptiles, spiders, insects, scorpions, roots, and artificial poisons, by silently repeating it.

*Kankata, na-kankata, satīnakankata, are thus explained by Sāyaśa, apanvishā kaschit, something of little venom; tadvīpardo analpavian shah mahoragdhi, the opposite of that, of not little venom, like great snakes and the like: satīna is a synonyme of water in the Nirukta.

*b Of little or of much venom; or creatures of land or water.

c Adriśhā, of invisible forms; the appellation, according to the Scholiast, of certain poisonous insects; in the comment on the eighth verse he explains it, either a class of poisons, or of poisonous creatures.—vishaviseshā vishadharawisesha vā.

d Alipsata, have smeared, have spread over all the limbs.

e Avaghnati, evahanyamānavahadhiḥ; a drug or antidote being destroyed; losing its substance, and reduced to its odour: or it may mean merely, that a certain drug, understood, is destructive of poisonous creatures.

f These are severally, the Saccharum sara, an inferior sort of it, Poa cynosuroides, Saccharum spontaneum, Saccharum munja, of unseen (venomous creatures), have together anointed me (with their venom).

4. The cows had lain down in their stalls; the wild beasts had retreated (to their lairs); the senses of men were at rest; when the unseen (venomous creatures) anointed me (with their venom).

5. Or they may be discovered (in the dark), as thieves in the (dusk of) evening; for although they be unseen, yet all are seen by them; therefore, men, be vigilant.

6. Heaven, (serpents), is your father; Earth, your mother; Soma, your brother; Aditi, your sister: unseen, all-seeing, abide (in your own holes); enjoy (your own) good pleasure.

7. Those (who move with their) shoulders, those (who move with their) bodies, those who sting with a These reptiles being most frequent at night or in the dark; the verse occurs in the Atharvaveda, vi. lxxii. 2, with a various reading in the first part of the second line; nyūrmayo nādinam, the waves of the rivers were hushed.

b As snakes by their breathing, according to Sāyana.

c So the Scholiast understands visvadrishta, making it a bahuvrīhi compound, as indicated by the accentuation.

d Soma here will be the moon; or, according to the Scholiast, Heaven, the residence of Soma.—Somadhara dyu lokah.

e* Ye ansyd ye angyāḥ; the expressions are rather vague, implying what relates to the shoulders, or the body generally: thus, ansyd may mean, being suited to the shoulders, moving with or by them, born or produced in or on them, biting with them,—ansādhāḥ, ansugāḥ, ansebhavāḥ, ansayāḥbhyaṃ khaddantah: so angya

9. The Sun has risen on high, destroying all the many (poisons); A\'ditya, the all-seeing, the destroyer of the unseen, (rises) for (the good of) living beings.\(^c\)

10. I deposit the poison in the solar orb, like a leather bottle in the house of a vender of spirits: verily, that adorable (Sun) never dies; nor, (through his favour), shall we die (of the venom); for, though afar off, yet drawn by his coursers, he will overtake may mean, moving with the body, or poisoning with the body, as certain spiders, whose contact is poisonous, and the like: the anse bhavāh, produced in the shoulders, might furnish those who seek for analogies between Iranian and Indian legends with a parallel in the story of Zohāk.

\(^a\) Suchkhāh, having sharp needle-like stings, like a scorpion.

\(^b\) Adrishtāhā may also mean, the dissipator of darkness; but adrishta presently occurs again in the sense of invisible venomous creatures, who, as well as the Yātudhānas, or Rakshasas, disappear at sunrise. We have this stanza, with some variety, in the Atharvāṣa, v. xxiii. 6: the second half of the stanza is, drishtānṣcha ghnān na drishtānṣcha; sarvānṣcha pramānān kriyān, destroying the seen and unseen; killing all the reptiles.

\(^c\) This also occurs in the Atharvāṣa, vi. lxi. 1: the second part is the same; the first reads, Utsūryo divam eti pura rakshānī nājūvan, the sun rises in the sky in the east, scattering the Rakshasas.
(the poison): the science of antidotes converted thee, (Poison), to ambrosia.\(^a\)

11. That little insignificant bird\(^b\) has swallowed thy venom; she does not die; nor shall we die; for, although afar off, yet drawn by his coursers, (the Sun) will overtake (the poison); the science of antidotes has converted thee, (Poison), to ambrosia.

12. May the thrice-seven sparks (of Agni)\(^c\) consume the influence of the venom; they verily do not perish; nor shall we die; for, although afar off, the Sun, drawn by his coursers, will overtake the

\(^a\) The notion that pervades this stanza, and forms the burden of the three following, is derived, according to Śdyaka, from the Viṣha-vidyā, the science of poisons, or of antidotes, whence it is also termed Madhu-vidyā, science of ambrosia: one formula of which, as cited by him, is "having taken the poison in the solar orb with the fourth finger; having made it ambrosia; and caused them to blend together, may it become poisonless:" by the Sūrya maṭḍala, or orb of the sun, is probably to be understood a mystical diagram, or figure wholly or partly typical of the solar orb: the sun being considered as especially instrumental in counteracting the operation of poison: the science of antidotes is also named in the text maṭḍal, as synonymous with Madhuvidyā. It was originally taught by Indra to Dadhyanch, who communicated it to the Āwins, and thereby lost his head.—See vol. i. p. 310, note.

\(^b\) The bird, according to the Scholiast, is the female kapinjala, or francoline partridge, which, he says, is well known as a remover of poison.—viṣha-hartri.

\(^c\) The seven tongues, or flames of fire, may be multiplied as red, white, and black; or viṣhpulingaka may be a synonyme of chaṭikā, a female sparrow; of whom there are twenty-one varieties, eaters of poison with impunity.
poison; the science of antidotes has converted thee, (Poison), to ambrosia.

13. I recite the names of ninety and nine (rivers), the destroyers of poison: although afar off, (the Sun), drawn by his coursers, will overtake the poison: the science of antidotes has converted thee, (Poison), to ambrosia.

14. May the thrice-seven peahens, the seven-sister rivers, carry off, (O Body), thy poison, as maidens, with pitchers, carry away water.

15. May the insignificant mongoose (carry off) thy venom, (Poison): if not, I will crush the vile (creature) with a stone: so may the poison depart (from my body), and go to distant regions.

16. Hastening forth at the command (of Agastya), thus spake the mongoose: The venom of the scorpion is innocuous; scorpion, thy venom is innocuous.

a Tri-sapta mayūryah: the enmity between peafowl and snakes is proverbial, but that there are twenty-one varieties of the mayūri, or peahen, wants authority: the seven rivers, the Scholiast says, are those of heaven, or the branches of the divine Gangā, but we have had them before; all running streams are possibly regarded as antidotes.

b Kushumbhako-nakulah, the nēul, or viverra Mongoose, whose hostility to the snake is also proverbial.

c M. Langlois has preferred a totally different interpretation of this Sākta, understanding it to allude to the state of the sky before the commencement of a sacrifice: he therefore interprets visha by darkness,—les ténèbres, or les vapeurs de la nuit, which are dispersed by the morning light, or by the rays of the sun: on what authority this view of the intention of the hymn is founded.
MAṆḌALÁ II.

The first Mahádála is termed that of the Sátrachás, of a hundred put for an indefinite number of authors of Ráicas, or stanzas; the second is usually termed the Gritsamáda Mahádála, the hymns, with a few exceptions, being attributed to the Ríshi Gritsamáda, a remarkable personage in Hindu legend. It is related of him that he was first a member of the family of Angíras, being the son of Súnahotrá: he was carried off by the Asuras, whilst performing a sacrifice, but was rescued by Indra, by whose authority he was thenceforth designated as Gritsamáda, the son of Súnaka, or Sáunaka, of the race of Bhrígu. Thus, the Anukramánika says of him: He, who was an Angírasa, the son of Súnahotrá, became Sáunaka, of the race of Bhrígu: he, Gritsamáda, is the the seer of the second Mahádála: and again, in the enumeration of the Ríshis, it is said of him, The Ríshi of the hymn, Twam Agné is Gritsamáda, the son of Súnaka, who went to the race of Bhrígu, being naturally the son of Súnahotrá, of the Angírasa family. The Index should be correct, if it be the work of Kátyáyana, who is said to have been the pupil of Sáunaka; but we have other very different accounts of Gritsamáda, or Ghrítsamáda, as the name is also written. In the Anubádana Parva of the Mahábhárata he is called the son of Vísthava, a king of the Hásayás, who, fleeing from the vengeance of Prátrádána, king of Káśi, took refuge with the Ríshi Bhrígu: on Prátrádána's demanding his delivery, Bhrígu denied that any has not been stated; nothing of the kind is intimated by Sáyaña, whose interpretation is confirmed by the legendary application of the hymn as related by Sáunaka and by the corresponding texts of the Átharvaná; there are, no doubt, many expressions of doubtful import, and some which are used in other places, as in the Yajush, in a different acceptation; but the interpretation given by Sáyaña appears to be most consistent with the general purport of the text.
Kšatriya was present in his hermitage; in consequence of which denial, Vṛitiha at once became a Brahmā; his son was Grīsamāda, who, the Mahābhadrata adds, was a famous Rishi, and the author of the principal hymns in the Rig-Veda.—Maha. vol. iv. p. 70. Again, the Purāṇas make him the son of Suhotra, and father either of Śaunaka, or of Śunaka, the father of Śaunaka; and ascribe to him the institution of the four castes. A curious story is also related of Grīsamāda, to which the Mahābhadrata alludes, of his having assumed the semblance of Indra, and so enabled that deity to escape from the Asuras, who were lying in wait to destroy him; a legend to which we shall again have occasion to refer. Śaunaka, whether the same as Grīsamāda, or a different person, is named as the chief of the Rishis assembled at Naimishādhyāya to celebrate the twelve years' sacrifice, to whom the Mahābhadrata, and several of the Purāṇas, are said to have been repeated, by Lomaharshana, the Sūta: he is also said to have been the teacher of a Śākhā, or branch of the Atharvā-Veda: he is often quoted, as we have seen, by Śāyana.

SŪKTA I. (I.)

The deity is Agni; the Rishi, Grīsamāda; the metre, Jagati.

Varga XVII. 1. Sovereign of men, Agni, thou art born for the days (of sacrifice), pure and all-irradiating, from the waters; from the stones, from trees, and from plants.*

* This verse occurs in the Yajush, xi. 27. Mahābharm's explanation is much the same as that of Śāyana: both notice varieties of interpretation. Sūṣukṣhadi, for instance, may also signify drying up, causing the evaporation of the earth's moisture;
SECOND ASHTA—FIFTH ADHYAYA. 209

2. Thine, Agni, is the office of the Hotri, of the Potri, of the Ritwij, of the Neshtri; thou art the Agnidhra of the devout; thine is the function of the Praṣāṭri; thou art the Adhvaryu and the Brahman; and the householder in our dwelling.

or it may mean, destroying, consuming: Agni is produced from the waters, either as the lightning that accompanies rain or submarine fire; from stones by striking them together; so from trees or wood by attrition; from plants, such as bambus, by mutual friction, causing the conflagration of a forest.

* These are eight of the sixteen priests employed at very solemn ceremonies: the commentary ascribes the duty of the Prakāṣṭri to the Maitrāvaruṣa, and identifies the Brahmad with the Brāhmaśđchchhansi; but in the ordinary enumeration they are distinct: the sixteen are thus enumerated by Kulluka Bhāfla, the commentator on Manu, viii. 210; in the order and proportion in which they are entitled to share in a Dauṣṭikā of a hundred cows, being arranged in four classes, of which the first four are severally the heads, and the others subordinate to them, in the same course of succession:—1. Hotri, Adhvaryu, Udgdatri, and Brahman, are to have twelve each, or forty-eight in all. 2. Maitrāvaruṣa, Pratistotri, Brāhmaśđchchhansi, and Prastotri, six each, or twenty-four. 3. Achchdvdaka, Neshtri, Agnidhra, and Pratikarttri, four each, or sixteen; and 4. Grāvdudut, Netri, Potri, and Subrahmaśyā, three each, or in all twelve; making up the total of one hundred. Rāmandātha, in his commentary on the Amara Kosha, vii. 17, also gives the names of the sixteen priests, with a few variations from Kulluka. Grāvdudut is his reading, instead of Grāvdudut, and it is the more usual one; and in place of the Prastotri, Netri, and Potri, he gives, Prasthdti, Prakāṣṭri, and Bādlīchchhddaka: we have the Potri repeatedly named in the text of the Rich, as well as the Prakāṣṭri. In the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, b. vii. 1, the sixteen priests to whom portions of the offering
3. Thou, Agni, art Indra, the showerer (of bounties) on the good; thou art the adorable Vishnu, the hymned of many: thou, Brahmanaspati, art Brahma, the possessor of riches; thou, the author of various (conditions), art associated with wisdom.

4. Thou, Agni, art the royal Varuna, observant of holy vows: thou art the adorable Mitra, the destroyer (of foes): thou art Aryaman, the protector of the virtuous, whose (liberality) is enjoyed by all:

are assigned are also enumerated, with some modifications, having, instead of the Pratistotri, Gravidut, Netri, and Subrahmashya, of the first list, the Pratiprasthatri, Upagdri, Atreyas, and Sadasyas. The same authority, however, adds as priests not included in the sixteen, the Graviduts, Unnetris, Subrahmashya, and the Samirtis, or immolator, when a Brahman. In Madhava's commentary on the Nyaya madh vistara of Jaimini, for an extract from which I am indebted to Dr. Goldstücker, he enumerates the sixteen priests as classed in four orders, following the authority of Kumdril Bhatta, much to the same effect as Kulluka; they are:—

1. The Adhwaryus, Pratipraesthatri, Neshtri, and Unnetri; 2. the Brahma, Brakhmabhachchhans, Agnidh, and Potri; 3. the Ugdtri, Prastotri, Pratihartri, and Subrahmashya; and 4. the Hotri, Maitrivaruna, Achchhavaka, and Graviduts. The four first are especially charged with the ceremonial of the Yajur-Veda; the next four superintend the whole according to the ritual of the three Vedas; the third class chant the hymns, especially of the Sama Veda, and the fourth repeat the hymns of the Rich; the head of each class receives the entire Dakshin, or gratuity; the second, one-half; the third, one-third; and the fourth, a quarter: the several functions are not very explicitly described.

* Liberality is said to be the characteristic, properly, of Aryaman, datriwam charyamho lingam.
thou art a portion (of the sun):* be the distributor (of good things), divine (Agni), at our sacrifice.

5. Thou, Agni, art Twasytri, (the giver) of great wealth to (thy) worshipper: these praises are thine: do thou, of benevolent power, (admit) our affinity: thou, who art prompt to encourage (us), givest us good (store of) horses: thou, who aboundest with opulence, art the strength of men.

6. Thou, Agni, art Rudra, the expeller (of foes) from the expanse of heaven:^ thou art the strength of the Maruts: thou art supreme over (sacrificial) food: thou, who art pleasantly domiciled (in the hall of sacrifice), goest with ruddy horses, (fleet as) the wind: as Pushan, thou cherishest, of thine own will, those who offer worship.

7. Thou, Agni, art Dravinodas, to him who honours thee: thou art the divine Savitri, the possessor of precious things: protector of men, thou art Bhaga, and rulest over wealth: thou art the cherisher of him who worships thee in his dwelling.

8. The people adore thee, Agni, the protector of the people in their dwellings: they propitiate thee as a benevolent sovereign: leader of a radiant host, thou art lord over all offerings: thou art the distributor of tens, and hundreds, and thousands (of good things).

* Twam anish may also mean the forms of the sun, or the Aditya, named anu.

^ Twam Rudro asuro maho divah: asura is explained hatrinam mirasita, the expeller of enemies, divas, from heaven; or it may mean, the giver of strength, asur, bala; tasya dita; Aditya rupa: a form of Aditya, or an Aditya.
9. (Devout) men (worship) thee, Agni, as a father, with sacred rites: they (cherish) thee, who art the illuminator of the body, with acts (of kindness), as a brother: thou art as a son to him who propitiates thee; and thou protectest us, a faithful and firm friend.

10. Thou, Agni, art (ever) resplendent, and art to be glorified when present: thou art lord over all renowned food and riches: thou shinest brightly, and thou consumest (the oblation) for him who offers it: thou art the especial accomplisher of the sacrifice, and bestower (of its rewards).

11. Thou, divine Agni, art Aditi to the donor of the oblation: thou art Hotra and Bharati, and thriftest by praise: thou art Ilá of a hundred winters to him who makes thee gifts: thou, lord of wealth, art the destroyer of Vritra, Sarasvatí.

12. When, well-cherished Agni, thou art (the giver of) excellent food: in thy desirable and delightful hues, beauties (abound): thou (art) food:

*a Twam agne ribhuḥ, twam vájasya tiszhe: we might have conjectured that some allusion to the Ribhus was here intended; but Sāyana renders ribhu, bhāsamdāḥ, shining; and vájasya, by annasya, of food.

b Twam Ilá kathahimāsi, according to the Scholiast, means the earth of unlimited duration,—aparimitukālā bhūmih.

c Vṛitrahā, Sāyana interprets, the destroyer of sin, &c.; but these goddesses are identified in the hymns to the Apris, with Agni, and an allusion to Indra would only be consistent with the prevailing idea throughout the hymn, of the universal identity of Agni with all other divinities.
(thou art) the transporter (beyond sin); thou art mighty; thou art wealth; thou art manifold, and everywhere diffused.

13. The Adityas have made thee, Agni, their mouth; the pure (deities) have made thee, Kavi, their tongue: the (gods), the givers of wealth, depend upon thee at sacrifices; they eat the offered oblation through thee:

14. All the benignant immortal gods eat the offered oblation through thee, as their mouth: mortals taste the flavour (of all viands) through thee: thou art born pure, the embryo of plants.

15. Thou art associated, Agni, by thy vigour, with those (gods): divine, well-born Agni, thou exceedest (them in strength); for the (sacrificial) food that is here prepared is, by thy power, subsequently diffused through both regions, heaven and earth.

16. The pious are they who present, as a gift, to the reciters of thy praises, an excellent cow and an excellent horse: do thou, Agni, lead both us and them to the best of abodes, (or heaven), that we and our worthy descendants may repeat the solemn prayer to thee at the sacrifice.

* Corn and other grains ripen by the heat of the sun or fire; the text has śuci, pure; but Śāyāna’s copy must have had in its place vasi, which he explains as usual, being the abode of all; sarveśham nivedabhiṭah san.
SÚKTA II.

The deity, Rishi, and metre, the same as before.

Varga XX.

1. Exalt with sacrifice, Agni, who knows all that has been born: worship him with oblations, and with ample praise; him who is well kindled, well fed, much lauded, resplendent, the conveyer of oblations, the giver of strength (to the body).

2. The mornings and evenings, Agni, are desirous (of worshipping) thee, as cows in their stalls long for their calves: adored of many, thou, self-controlled, art verily spread through the sky: thou (art present at all) the sacred rites of men, and shinest brightly by night.

3. The gods have stationed at the root of the world, a that Agni who is of goodly appearance; the pervader of heaven and earth; who is to be known as a car (to convey men to their wishes); who shines with pure radiance, and who is to be honoured as a friend amongst mankind.

4. They have placed him in his solitary dwelling, who is shedding moisture upon the earth; resplendent as gold, b traversing the firmament, animate with flames; and pervading the two parents (of all things, heaven and earth), like refreshing water.

a Budhne rajasah-lokasya mule: that is, according to the commentary, the altar.

b Chandram iva surucham might seem to be preferably rendered, bright-shining, like the moon; but Sāyaṇa affirms that chandra here means gold; of which, when neuter, it is a synonyme, in the Veda.
5. May he, the presenter of oblations (to the gods), be around all sacrifices: men propitiate him with oblations and with praises, when blazing with radiant tresses\(^a\) amongst the growing plants, and enlivening heaven and earth (with his sparks), like the sky with stars.

6. Thou, Agni, art he who, for our good, art possessed of riches: kindled by us, blaze as the liberal donor of wealth to us: render heaven and earth propitious to us, so that, divine Agni, (the gods) may partake of the oblations of the institutor of the rite.

7. Bestow upon us, Agni, infinite possessions: grant us thousands (of cattle and dependants): open to us, for thy reputation, the doors of abundance: make heaven and earth, propitiated by sacred prayer, favourable to us, and may the mornings light thee up like the sun.

8. Kindled at the beautiful dawn, (Agni) shines with brilliant lustre, like the sun; adored by the hymns of the worshipper, Agni, the king of men,\(^b\)

\(^a\) _Hiriśpro vridhasāndsu jarbhurāt_: _śipra_ has been before met with, in its ordinary sense of chin, or jaw; or has been explained, the nose; and one sense of the compound that here occurs is, _haradaśīlahanuh_, having a jaw accustomed to seize or consume; but, upon the authority of another text, _śiprd śirhasu vitatā hiran-yayth_, golden locks spread on the head, _Sāyaṇa_ explains it here by _uskhāka_, a curl, or turban; _vridhasāndsu_ he explains by _pravardha mânasvoshadāhusu_, amongst growing plants.

\(^b\) _Rājā viśām_, king, or master of the Viśas, or people.
(comes as) an agreeable guest to the institutor of the sacrifice.

9. Amongst men our praise, Agni, celebrates thee, who art first amongst the greatly-splendid immortals; (may it be to us) as a milch cow spontaneously yielding at sacrifices to the worshipper, infinite and multiform (blessings according to his) desire.

10. May we manifest vigour among other men, Agni, through the steed and the food (which thou hast given); and may our unsurpassed wealth shine like the sun over (that of) the five classes of beings.\(^a\)

11. Vigorous Agni, hear (our prayers): for thou art he who is to be lauded; to whom the well-born priests address (their hymns); and whom, entitled to worship, and radiant in thine own abode, the offerers of the oblation approach, for the sake of never-failing posterity.

12. Agni, knowing all that is born, may we, both adorers and priests, be thine for the sake of felicity; and do thou bestow upon us wealth of dwellings, of cattle, of much gold, of many dependants, and virtuous offspring.

13. The pious are they who present, as a gift, to the reciters of thy praises, an excellent cow and an elegant horse: do thou, Agni, lead us and them to the best of abodes, (or heaven), that we and our worthy descendants may repeat the solemn prayer to thee at the sacrifice.

Súkta III.

The divinities are the A'ra; the metre is Trishūkh, except in the seventh stanza, in which it is Jagati.

1. Agni, the well-kindled, placed upon (the altar of) the earth, stands in the presence of all beings; the invoker (of the gods), the purifier, the ancient, the intelligent, the divine: Let the venerable Agni minister to the gods.

2. May the bright Nārāsan, illumining the receptacles (of the offering), making manifest by his greatness the three radiant (regions), and diffusing the oblation at the season of sacrifice with butter-dispensing purpose, satisfy the gods.

3. Agni, who art the venerable Īlita, do thou, with mind favourably disposed towards us, offer to-day sacrifice to the gods, before the human (ministrant priest): as such, bring hither the company of the Maruts, the undecaying Indra, to whom, seated on the sacred grass, do you priests offer worship.

4. Divine grass, let the Vasus, the Viśvadevas, the adorable A'dityas, sit upon this flourishing, invigorating, well-grown, sacred grass, strewn for the sake of wealth upon this altar, and sprinkled with butter.

5. Let the divine doors, spacious and easily accessible, and to be saluted with prostrations, be set open; let them be celebrated as expansive, uninjurable, and conferring sanctity upon the illustrious class (of worshippers), possessed of virtuous progeny.

Varga XXIII.

6. In regard of our good deeds, Day and Night, perpetually reverenced, are interweaving in concert, like two famous female weavers, the extended thread, (to complete) the web of the sacrifice, liberal yielders (of rewards), containers of water.

7. Let the two divine invokers of the gods, the first (to be reverenced), most wise, sincerely worshipping with sacred texts, most excellent in form, offering homage to the gods in due season, present oblations in the three high places upon the navel of the earth.

8. May the three goddesses, Saraswati, perfecting our understanding, the divine Ilá, and all-impressive Bharati, having come to our dwelling, protect this faultless rite, (offered) for our welfare.

a Vayyeva rakvite are explained by the Scholiast, vaydy īva vdnakusāle īva ṣabdite, stute.

b The personified fires of earth and the firmament, under the character of two ministering priests, according to the Scholiast.

c That is, as usual, the altar: the three high places, śūnushtu trishu, are the three sacred fires; Gārhapatya, Ahamaniya, and Dakshina.
9. May a tawny-hued, well-gröwn (son), the bestower of food, active, manly, a worshipper of the gods, be born: may Twashfri prolong for us a continuous (line of) progeny, and may the food of the gods come also to us.

10. May Agni, who is Vanaspati, approving (of our rite), approach; and by his especial acts fully dress the victim:¹ may the divine immolator² convey the burnt-offering to the gods, knowing it to have thrice consecrated.³

11. I sprinkle the butter, for butter is his birthplace; he is nourished by butter; butter is his radiance: Agni, showerer (of benefits), bring the gods to the offered oblation; exhilarate them; convey to them the offering that has been reverently sanctified.⁴

SUKTA IV.

Agni is the deity; Sománhuti, of the race of Bhrigu, the Rishi; the metre is Trishûdh.

VARSA XXIV. 1. I invoke, on your behalf, the resplendent, the sinless Agni, the guest of mortals, the accepter of (sacrificial) food, who, knowing all that has been born, is like a friend, the supporter (of all beings), from men to gods.

2. The Bhrigus, worshipping Agni, have twice made him manifest: (once) in the abode of the waters, and (once) amongst the sons of men: may that Agni, the sovereign of the gods, mounted on a rapid courser, ever overcome all (our foes).

3. The gods, intending to dwell (in heaven), left, as a dear friend amongst the human races, that Agni, who, present in the chamber of sacrifice, is bounteous to the donor of offerings, and shines on the nights when he is wished for.

4. The cherishing of Agni is as agreeable as (the cherishing) of one's self: (pleasant) is his appearance, when spreading abroad, and consuming (the hither Agni to the oblation; exhilarate him; (and say to him), Showerer (of blessings), convey the consecrated oblation (to the gods).

5. Whose greatness my colleagues loudly extol: who has manifested his real form to the priests: who is recognised at oblations by his variegated radiance, and who, though frequently growing old, again and again becomes young.

6. Who shines amidst the forests, as if satisfying himself (with food): who (rushes along), like water down a declivity, and thunders like a chariot (of war): dark-pathed, consuming, yet delightful, he is regarded like the sky smiling with constellations.

7. He who is in many places; who spreads over the whole earth, like an animal without a herdsman, that goes according to its own will; Agni, the bright-shining, consuming the dry bushes, by whom the pain of blackness (is inflicted on the trees), entirely drinks up (their moisture).

8. Verily thy praise has been recited (by us) at the third (daily) sacrifice, as it was in the repetition of thy first propitiation: give us, Agni, ample and notorious food, posterity, riches, such as may be the support of numerous dependants.

9. By thee, (Agni), may the Grītsamadas, repeating thy praise, become masters of the precious secret (treasures); so that they may be possessed of excellent dependants, and be able to resist (their) enemies; and do thou give to (thy) pious worshippers, and to him who glorifies (thee), such (abundant) food.
Súkta V.

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Anushubh.

1. An invoker (of the gods), our instructor and protector, has been born for the preservation of our patrons: may we, possessed of (sacrificial) food, be able to acquire worshipful, conquerable, and manageable riches.

2. In whom, as conductor of the sacrifice, the seven rays are manifested, and who, as a human Potri, officiates in the eighth place to perfect every divine (rite).

3. Whatever (offerings the priest) presents, whatever prayers he recites, he, (Agni), knows them all: he comprehends all priestly acts, as the circumference (includes the spokes) of a wheel.

4. The pure regulator (of the sacrifice) is born verily together with the holy act: the wise (worshipper) performs all his, (Agni’s), prescribed rites in succession, as the branches spring (from a common stem).

5. The sister fingers, which are the milch kine of the Neshtri, are those which accomplish his, (Agni’s), worship; and in various ways are combined for this purpose through the three (sacred fires).

6. When the sister (vessel), bearing the clarified butter, is placed near the maternal (altar), the Adhwarayu rejoices at their approach, like barley (at the fall of) rain.

7. May he, the ministering priest, discharge the office of priest at his own ceremony; and may we worthily repeat (his) praise, and offer (him) sacrifice.

8. And do thou, Agni, (grant), that this wise (worshipper) may worthily offer (worship) to all the adorable (divinities), and that the sacrifice which we offer may also be perfected in thee.

Sūkta VI.

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Gayatri.

1. Agni, accept this my fuel, this my oblation; Varga XXVII. listen, well pleased, to my praises.

2. May we propitiate thee, Agni, by this (oblation): grandson of strength, (who art) gratified by prompt sacrifice, a (may we please thee), well-born, by this hymn.

3. Granter of riches, may we, thy worshippers, propitiate thee, who art desirous of (sacrificial) wealth, and deserving of laudation, by our praises.

4. Lord of wealth, giver of wealth, possessor of riches, who art wise, understand (our prayers), and scatter our enemies.

5. (For thou art) he (who gives) us rain from heaven; he (who gives) us undecaying strength, he (who gives) us infinite (abundance of) food.

6. Youngest (of the gods), their messenger, their invoker, most deserving of worship, come, upon our praise, to him who offers (thee) adoration, and is desirous of (thy) protection.

7. Sage Agni, thou penetratest the innermost (man), knowing the birth of both (the worshipper and the worshipped); like a messenger favourable to men, especially to his friends.

8. Do thou, Agni, who art all-wise, fulfil (our desires): do thou, who art intelligent, worship (the gods) in order; and sit down on this sacred grass.

a Abhavishate-vyopakayajna, whose rites are expanding; or dvu, quick, tadichchhati, he wishes that; he wishes for quick or prompt worship.

b Yajur-Veda, xii. 43; the explanation is the same, only the ellipse following understand, is filled up by abhimatam, wish, desire.

SECONd ASH'TAKA—FIFTH ADHYĀYA. 225

Sūkta VII.

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

1. Youngest (of the gods), Agni, descendant of Bhárata, granter of dwellings, bring (to us) excellent, splendid, and enviable riches.

2. Let no enemy prevail against us, whether of god or man; protect us from both such foes.

3. Let us, through thy favour, overwhelm all our foes, like torrents of water.

4. Purifier, Agni, holy, adorable, thou shinest exceeding when (thou art) worshipped with (oblations of) butter.

5. Agni, descendant of Bhárata, thou art entirely ours, when sacrificed to with pregnant kine, with barren cows, or bulls.

6. Feeder upon fuel, to whom butter is offered, (thou art). the ancient, the invoker of the gods, the excellent, the son of strength, the wonderful.

*a Bhárata, according to Sāyāha, means sprung from the priests,—bharad-ṛtwija, produced by their rubbing the sticks together.

*b Vasābhīr-ukṣhabhīh-ashēdpadbhirdhutah, offered or sacrificed to with barren cows, vasā; with bulls, ukṣha; and with eight-footed animals; that is, according to Sāyāha, a cow with calf; but it is remarkable that these animals should be spoken of as burnt-offerings.

*c Druannah: from dṛu, a tree, or timber; and anna, food.
Sūkta VIII.

The deity and Rishi are the same, as is the metre, except in the last stanza, in which it is Anushtubh.

Varga XXIX.

1. Praise quickly the yoked chariot of the glorious and munificent Agni, like one who is desirous of food.

2. Who, sagacious, invincible, and of graceful gait, destroys, when propitiated, his foe, for him who presents (offerings).

3. Who, invested with radiance, is glorified, morning and evening, in (our) dwellings: whose worship is never neglected.

4. Who, many-tinted, shines with radiance, like the sun with (his) lustre, spreading (light) over (all) by his imperishable (flames).

5. Our praises have increased the self-irradiating devouring Agni: he is possessed of all glory.

6. May we, uninjured, be secure in the protection of Agni, Indra, Soma, and the gods, and, confident in battle, overcome (our enemies).

Sūkta IX.

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Trishubh.

Varga I.

1. May Agni, the invoker (of the gods), the intelligent, the resplendent, the radiant, the very powerful; he who knows (how to maintain) his rites undisturbed; who is steady in (his own) place, and is the cherisher of thousands, sit in the station of the invoking priest.\textsuperscript{a}

2. Showerer (of benefits), Agni, be thou our messenger (to the gods); our preserver from evil; the conveyer to us of wealth; the protector of our sons and grandsons, and of our persons; understand (our prayer), ever heedful and resplendent.

3. We adore thee, Agni, in thy loftiest birth-place, and with hymns in thine inferior station:\textsuperscript{b} I worship that seat whence thou hast issued: the priests have offered thee, when kindled, oblations.

4. Agni, who art the chief of sacrificers, worship (the gods) with the oblation, and earnestly commend to them the (sacrificial) food that is to be given (them); for thou, indeed, art the sovereign lord of riches; thou art the appreciator of our pious prayer.

5. Beautiful Agni, the two dwelling-places (heaven and earth) of thee, who art born day by day, never perish: confer upon him who praises thee (abundant) food, and make him the master of riches, (supporting) virtuous offspring.

\textsuperscript{a} Hotrishadane, in a place convenient for pouring the butter on the fire, or near to the Uttara-vedi, the north altar; or considering the fire itself to be introduced, upon the altar: Mahidhara explains it in the same manner,—Yajur-Veda, vi. 36.

\textsuperscript{b} That is, Agni is worshipped in heaven as the Sun; in the firmament as lightning; and as the sacrificial fire kindled on the altar: the same occurs in the Yajush, xvii. 75.
6. Do thou, with this (thy) host (of attendants), be of good promise to us: do thou, the especial worshipper of the gods, their unassailable protector, as well as our preserver, light up (all) with shining and affluent well-being.

Śūkta X.

Varga II.

1. The adorable Agni, the first (of the gods), and their nourisher when kindled by man upon the altar; he who is clothed in radiance, is immortal, discriminating, food-bestowing, powerful; he is to be worshipped.

2. May Agni, who is immortal, of manifold wisdom, and wonderful splendour, hear my invocation, (preferred) with all laudations: tawny, or red, or purple horses draw his car; he has been borne in various directions.

3. They have generated (Agni) when soundly sleeping on his upturned (couch):* that Agni who is an embryo in many (vegetable) forms, and who, (rendered manifest) by the oblation, abides conscious in the night, unenveloped by darkness.

4. I offer oblations with butter to Agni, b who spreads through all regions, vast, expanding, with b Jigharmy-agnim havishā ghritena: the Yajush, xi. 23, reads it, ā twā jigharmi manasaḥ ghritena, I sprinkle thee with butter, with a believing mind; sraddhādyuktena chittena.

all-comprehending form; a nourished (with sacrificial) food, powerful, conspicuous.

5. I offer oblations to Agni, who is present at all (sacrifices); b may he accept (them), offered with an unhesitating mind, (to him) who is the refuge of man, endowed with any form that may be desired, blazing with a radiance (that it is) not (possible) to endure.

6. Overpowering (thy foes) with lustre, mayest thou recognize thy portion: may we, having thee for our messenger, recite (praise) like Manu: desiring wealth, I offer oblation with the sacrificial ladle and with praises, to that entire Agni, who rewards (the worshipper) with the sweet (fruit) of the sacrifice.

a Prithum tiraschā vayasad vrihantam: Makidhara connects the two first, and renders them, vast with crooked-going or undulating radiance: the two last he interprets, augmenting with smoke: other interpretations are given, but they are not more intelligible than that of the text.

b This verse is also in the Yajush, xi. 24; and from Kātyāyana, a direction is given for its use and that of the preceding: they are to be repeated together, but the first half of stanza four is to be repeated with the second half of stanza five, and the first half of stanza five with the second half of stanza four: as the sense of the line stops with the half-stanza, there is no obscurity of meaning from the process, but it shows that more attention is paid to the manner than the matter of the recitation.
Sūkta XI.

The deity is Indra; the Rishi as before; the metre is a species of Tristubh, entitled Vṛtta-sthāna, except in the last verse, in which it is in the usual form.

Varga III.

1. Indra, hear (my) invocation; disregard it not: may we be (thought worthy) of the gift of thy treasures: these oblations, designed to obtain wealth, flowing (abundantly) like rivers, bring to thee augmented vigour.

2. Indra, hero, thou hast set free the copious (waters) which were formerly arrested by Ahi, and which thou hast distributed: invigorated by hymns, thou hast cast down headlong the slave, conceiving himself immortal.

3. Indra, hero, these brilliant (laudations), in (the form of) hymns, in which thou delightest, and in (that of) the praises uttered by the worshippers by which thou art gratified, are addressed to thee, to bring thee (to our sacrifice).

4. We are invigorating thy brilliant strength (by our praises), and placing the thunderbolt in thy hands: do thou, Indra, radiant, increasing in strength, and (encouraged) by the sun, overpower, for our (good), the servile people.

a Rudriyeshu stomeshu: Rudriya may be rendered, the means of giving pleasure,—sukhasādhanabhūteshu; or Rudrāh may mean stotdārah, praisers, worshippers; either is an unusual signification.

b Dāsīr visadh suryena sahyādh: the two first the Scholiast renders by, upakshapayattrā, or dūrāh-prajāh, people interrupting
5. Indra, hero, thou hadst slain by thy prowess the glorified Abi, hidden privily in a cave, lurking in concealment, covered by the waters in which he was abiding, and arresting the rains in the sky.

6. We glorify, Indra, thy mighty (deeds) of old: we glorify thy (more) recent exploits: we praise the thunderbolt shining in thine arms, and we celebrate the horses, the signs of (Indra as) the sun.

7. Thy swift horses, Indra, have uttered a loud sound, announcing rain: the level earth anxiously expects its fall, as the gathering cloud has passed.

8. The cloud, not heedless (of its office), is suspended (in the sky); resonant with maternal (waters), it has spread about: (the winds), augmenting the sound in the distant horizon, have promulgated the voice uttered by Indra.

9. The mighty Indra has shattered the guileful Vritra, reposing in the cloud: heaven and earth shook, alarmed at the thundering bolt of the showerer.

10. The thunderbolt of the showerer roared aloud, when (Indra), the friend of man, sought to slay the enemy of mankind. Drinking the Soma religious rites, or of the race of Asuras; súryaśa he renders by prerakesha, urger, instigator, as if it were an adjective.

a Harśa súryasya ketu, the two horses the signs of the sun; but the Scholiast proposes to explain súrya by instigator or heroic,—sushu prerakasya; or su-súryasya, as indicating Indra; or it may mean, of Indra, identical with Súrya, Suryatmanah Indrasya.

b Amánushah yan mánusko nijárvit, when the man, or as Sdyája juice, he, (Indra), baffled the devices of the guileful Dánava.

Varga V.

11. Drink hero, Indra, drink the Soma: may the exhilarating juices delight thee: may they, distending thy flanks, augment (thy prowess), and in this manner may the replenishing effused libation satisfy Indra.

12. May we, thy pious (worshippers), abide in thee: approaching thee with devotion, may we enjoy (the reward of) our adoration: desirous of protection, we meditate thy glorification: may we ever be (thought worthy) of the gift of thy treasures.

13. May we, (through) thy (favour), Indra, be such as those are, who, desirous of thy protection, augment (by their praises) thy vigour: divine (Indra), thou grantest the wealth which we desire, (the source of) great power and of (numerous) progeny.

14. Thou grantest a habitation; thou grantest us friends; thou grantest us, Indra, the strength of the Maruts: the winds, a who, propitious and exulting, drink copiously of the first offering (of the Soma juice).

explains it, the benefactor of man, manushyanam hitakari, destroyed the no-man; that is, the manushyanam-ahitam, not friendly to man; which is, probably, a correcter reading than the manushyanam-ahitam, of the printed text.

a Vaisyavah, the Scholiast adds, may be put honorifically for Vayu, in the singular, of whom it is said, that he is the first drinker of the Soma; Vayur-hi somasya agrapadat.
15. Let those in whom thou art delighted repair (to the libation), and do thou, Indra, confiding, drink the satiating Soma: liberator (from evil), associated with the mighty and adorable (Maruts), augment our prosperity, and (that of) heaven.

16. Liberator (from evil), they who worship thee, the giver of happiness, with holy hymns, quickly become great: they who strew the sacred grass (in honour of thee) are protected by thee, and, together with their families, obtain (abundant) food.

17. Indra, hero, exulting in the solemn Trikadruka rites, quaff the Soma juice, and repeatedly shaking it from thy beard, repair, well pleased with thy steeds, to the drinking of the effused libation.

18. Indra, hero, keep up the strength wherewith thou hast crushed Varita, the spider-like son of *a Yeshu may apply either to the Maruts or to the Soma;—may those Maruts or those Soma juices, in which thou delightest.

*b Asmántsu prítswd taratra avarddhayo dyam brihadbhir arkaik: the sense is not very obvious: Śāyāka explains prítsu as the qualification of āvarddhaya, increase, that is, with children, cattle, and the like; in consequence of which prosperous condition, men can offer sacrifices, whence heaven thrives: arkaik is for archaniyaih, to be adored, the Maruts, understood.

c See vol. i. p. 85. The Trikadrukas are said, by the commentator, to denote three days, or celebrations of the ceremonial, termed abhiplava; abhiplavikeshu ahah-su, called severally, Jyotish, Gauh, Ayus: the text designates them as ugrishu, fierce, angry; but the Scholiast here explains ugra to mean, having many praises and prayers,—bahu stotraśdstravat.
Danu, and let open the light to the A'rya: the Dasyu has been set aside on thy left hand.

19. Let us honour those men, who, through thy protection, surpass all their rivals, as the Dasyus (are surpassed) by the A'rya: this (hast thou wrought) for us: thou hast slain Viśwarūpa, the son of Twashṭṛi, through friendship for Trīta.

20. Invigorated (by the libation) of the exulting Trīta, offering thee the Soma, thou hast annihilated Arbuda: Indra, aided by the Angirasas, has whirled round his bolt, as the sun turns round his wheel, and slain Bala.

21. That opulent donation, which proceeds, Indra, from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee the boon (which he desires): grant it to us, thy praisers; do not thou, who art the object of adoration, disregard (our prayer): so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at this sacrifice.

a Dánun aurtavādhām: Sāyāka considers the latter to be the same as aurtvādhām; or that it may be composed of aurtvā, a spider, and ḍhāḍ, resembling.

b Trīta, in this and the next stanza, is said to be a Mahārski.

c Sūryo na chakram; or na may be used in a negative sense, and the phrase imply, when the sun did not turn his wheel, or stood still through fear of the Āsura: or again, it may mean, that Indra whirled the wheel like the sun, having taken one of the wheels of the sun's chariot as a weapon against Bala.

d Mātī dhaṅ bhago no: Sāyāka renders, Bhujaniyāstvam asmākam kāman mā dākṣiṇ, thou, who art adorable, consume not our desires: Yāska separates the two last words, as, bhago no astu, may fortune be to us.—Nir. i. 7.
ANUVÁKA II.
Súkta I. (XII.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

1. He, who as soon as born, is the first (of the deities); who has done honour to the gods by his exploits; he, at whose might heaven and earth are alarmed, and (who is known) by the greatness of his strength, he, men, is Indra.

a Who has preserved or protected them; or has surpassed them; pratyarakshadh atyakrámad-itī vā.—Ydāka, x. 10; the whole of this hymn occurs, with one additional stanza, in the Atharva-Veda, xx. 34; to which, by the more modern character of its style, it more properly belongs: its construction is in striking contrast for intelligibility with the more ordinary elliptical and obscure construction of the Súktas by which it is preceded and followed.

b Sa jandā Indra; jandō jand, he asurdh, the Scholiast thus explaining jana: but this has reference, it is supposed, to a curious legend, which is somewhat variously related, although to the same general purport: according to one version, Gritsamada, by his devotions, acquired a form as vast as that of Indra, visible at once in heaven, in the firmament, and on earth; the two Asuras, Dhumi and Chumuri, taking him, therefore, for Indra, were proceeding to attack him, when he arrested their advance by repeating this hymn, intimating that he was not Indra: another version states, that when Indra and the gods were present at a sacrifice celebrated by Vainya, Gritsamada was one of the officiating priests; the Asuras came to the spot to kill Indra, who, assuming the likeness of Gritsamada, went away without question: when the assembly broke up, and Gritsamada went out, the Asuras, who had been lying wait, considered him to be Indra, and were
2. He, who fixed firm the moving earth; who tranquillized the incensed mountains;* who spread the spacious firmament; who consolidated the heaven; he, men, is Indra.

3. He, who having destroyed Ahi, set free the seven rivers; who recovered the cows detained by Bala; who generated fire in the clouds; who is invincible in battle; he, men, is Indra.

4. He, by whom all these perishable (regions) have been made; who consigned the base servile tribe to the cavern; who seizes triumphant the cherished (treasures) of the enemy, as a hunter (strikes) his prey; he, men, is Indra.

5. He, whom, terrible, they ask for, (saying), Where is he? or, verily, they say of him, he is not (in any one place); but who, inflicting (chastisement), destroys the cherished (treasures) of the enemy; in him have faith; for he, men, is Indra.

*Yah parvataṁ prakupitān arasādīt; the Scholiast says he quieted the mountains, going hither and thither, as long as they had wings: Indra cut them off.
6. He, who is the encourager of the rich, and of the poor, and of the priest, who recites his praise, and is a suppliant; who, of goodly features, is the protector of him, who, with ready stones, expresses the Soma juice; he, men, is Indra.

7. He, under whose control are horses and cattle, and villages, and all chariots; he who gave birth to the sun and to the dawn: and who is the leader of the waters; he, men, is Indra.

8. Whom (two hosts), calling and mutually encountering, call upon; whom both adversaries, high and low, (appeal to); whom two (charioteers), standing in the same car, severally invoke; he, men, is Indra.

9. Without whom men do not conquer; whom, when engaged in conflict, they invoke for succour; he, who is the prototype of the universe and the caster down of the unyielding; he, men, is Indra.

10. He, who with the thunderbolt has destroyed many committing great sin, and offering (him) no homage; who grants not success to the confident; who is the slayer of the Dasyu; he, men, is Indra.

11. He, who discovered S'ambara dwelling in the mountains for forty years; who slew Ahi, growing in strength, and the sleeping son of Danu; he, men, is Indra.

12. He, the seven-rayed, the showerer, the powerful, who let loose the seven rivers to flow; who, armed with the thunderbolt, crushed Raúhitá when scaling heaven; he, men, is Indra.

13. He, to whom heaven and earth bow down; he, at whose might the mountains are appalled; he, who is the drinker of the Soma juice, the firm (of frame), the adamant-armed, the wielder of the thunderbolt; he, men, is Indra.

14. He, who protects (the worshipper) offering the libation, or preparing (the mixed curds and butter), repeating his praise and soliciting his assistance; he, of whom the sacred prayer, the (offered) Soma juice, the (presented sacrificial) food, augment (the vigour); he, men, is Indra.

15. Indra, who art difficult of approach; thou, verily, art a true (benefactor), who bestowest (abundant) food upon him who offers the libation, who prepares (the mixed curds and butter): may we, enjoying thy favour, blessed with progeny, daily repeat (thy praises) at the sacrifice.

* Sāyāka considers, ahi, the slayer, abantáram, and dánúm, the son of Danu, to be epithets of Sambara.

*b The seven rays, raímayah, are here said to imply the seven forms of Parjanya, or Indra, as the rain-cloud; or seven kinds of rain-clouds, severally named in the Taittiríydráṣṭhyaka.
SECOND ASHTAKA—SIXTH ADHYĀYA. 239

Sókta II. (XIII.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are the same.

1. The season (of the rains) is the parent (of the Soma plant), which, as soon as born of her, enters into the waters in which it grows: thence it is fit for expression, as concentrating (the essence of the) water; and the juice of the Soma is especially to be praised (as the libation proper for Indra).

2. The aggregated (streams) come, bearing everywhere the water, and conveying it as sustenance for the asylum of all rivers, (the ocean): the same path is (assigned) to all the descending (currents) to follow; and as he, who has (assign)ed them (their course), thou, (Indra), art especially to be praised.

3. One (priest) announces (the offering) that he, (the institutor of the rite) presents; another performs the act that apportions the limbs (of the victim); a third corrects all the deficiencies of either, and as he, who has enjoyed these (functions), thou, (Indra), art especially to be praised.

4. Distributing nourishment to their progeny, they, (the householders), abide (in their dwellings), as if offering ample and sustaining wealth to a guest: constructing (useful works, a man) eats with his teeth the food (given him) by (his) protector, and

* According to Sāyaṇa, the Hotri, Adhvaryu, and Brahman, are the three priests indicated.

* Asīvaṇaṁ dānśtraik pitur atti bhōjanam; asīvaṇa is explained by the commentator, setubandaḥdikam karma kūrvan, doing acts, as he, who has enjoined these (things to be done), thou, (Indra), art especially to be praised.

5. Inasmuch as thou hast rendered earth visible to heaven, and hast set open the path of the rivers by slaying Ahi; therefore the gods have rendered thee divine by praises, as (men) invigorate a horse by water; (and) thou art, (Indra), to be praised.

6. (Thou art he) who bestowest both food and increase, and milkest the dry nutritious (grain) from out the humid stalk: he, who gives wealth to the worshipper, and art sole sovereign of the universe: thou art he, (Indra), who is to be praised.

7. Thou, who hast caused, by culture, the flowering and fruitful (plants) to spread over the field; who hast generated the various luminaries of heaven; and who, of vast bulk, comprehendest vast (bodies); thou art he who is to be praised.

8. Thou, who art (famed for) many exploits, put on to-day an unclouded countenance, (as prepared) to slay Sahavasu, the son of Nrimara, with the sharpened (edge of the thunderbolt), in defence of the (sacrificial) food, and for the destruction of the Dasyus: thou art he who is to be praised.

such as building bridges, and the like: pitukh is explained, as usual, palaka; but Sāyaṇa suggests that it may imply the fostering heaven, from which comes the rain that causes the growth of grain, for the sustenance of man.

* Two Asuras, of whom nothing more is particularized than the etymology of their appellations, which is perhaps not very authentic: nṛi, man, and mara, who kills; and saha, with, vasu, wealth.
9. Thou, for whose sole pleasure a thousand (steeds are ready); by whom all are to be fed; and who protectest the institutor (of the sacrifice); who, for the sake of Dabhiti, hast cast the Dasyus into unfettered (captivity), and who art to be approached (by all), thou art he who is to be praised.

10. Thou art he, from whose manhood all the rivers (have proceeded); to whom (the pious) have given (offerings); to whom, doer of mighty deeds, they have presented wealth; thou art he, who hast regulated the six expansive (objects), and art the protector of the five (races), that look up to thee: thou art he who is to be praised.

11. Thy heroism, hero, is to be glorified, by which, with a single effort, thou hast acquired wealth; (wherewith) the (sacrificial) food of (every) solemn and constant (ceremony is provided): for all (the acts) thou hast performed, thou, Indra, art he who is to be praised.

a Dabhiti has been named before, i. 295, but with no further description than his being a Rishi: he is elsewhere called a Râjâ: see note (a), p. 246: several of the exploits here ascribed to Indra are, in the hymn referred to, attributed to the Abwina.

b Shad-vishithrah; they are said to be, heaven, earth, day, night, water, and plants.

c Jâtushthirasya pra vayah sahaswato: Jâtushthira may be a proper name; when the sense will be, thou hast given (pra being put for praddh) food to the vigorous Jâtushthira; but the phrase may also signify, according to Sâyâka, Indra's being the occasional (jâtu) agent in sacrificial offerings (vayas) in relation to constant and essential ceremonies,—sþirasya baluwato yajnddehk karmaña sambandhikh vayas.

VOL. II. R
12. Thou hast provided a passage for the easy crossing of the flowing waters\(^a\) for Turviti and for Vayya: rendering (thyself) renowned, thou hast uplifted the blind and lame Parâvri\(^b\) from the lowliness (of affliction): thou art he who is to be praised.

13. Possessor of riches, exert thy ability to bestow wealth upon us; for thine is great affluence: mayest thou, Indra, be disposed to grant us exceeding abundance day by day, so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at (our) sacrifice.

Sûkta III. (XIV.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

Varga XIII. 1. Priests, bring the Soma libation for Indra;

\(^a\) Aramaya sarapasastarâya srutim: it would seem as if Sayâsa understood apas here by karma, opus; saranam apah karma ydsám: they of whom the act is going or proceeding: but this is only his etymology of apas, waters, for he presently places his meaning beyond doubt by saying, that the persons named beheld a large river, which they were unable to cross, when they prayed to Indra, and were conveyed across by him. Turviti and Vayya have both occurred more than once.—See Index, vol. i.

\(^b\) Parâvrijam prândham śrohaṃ, which is the expression of S. cxii. v. 8; see vol. i. p. 290; the latter adds chakshase etave, to see and to walk; and the Scholiast inserted, as understood, the name of Rijrásvo, as the individual who was made to see; whence it followed that Śroha was the name of him who was made to walk: from this passage, however, it is clear that there was an ellipse, and that both prândha and śroha, or blind and lame, were epithets of Parâvrij: the miracle in the earlier hymn is ascribed to the Abwine.
sprinkle with ladles the exhilarating beverage: he, the hero, is ever desirous of the draught: offer the libation to the showerer (of benefits), for, verily, he desires it.

2. Priests, offer the libation to him who slew the rain-arresting Vṛitra, as (he strikes down) a tree with (his) thunderbolt; to him who desires it: and Indra is worthy of (the beverage).

3. Priests, offer this libation, which, like the wind in the firmament, (is the cause of rain); to him who slew Drībhika, destroyed Bala, and liberated the cows: heap Indra with Soma juice, as an old man (is covered) with garments.

4. Priests, propitiate, by the offering of the Soma, that Indra, who slew Uraṇa, displaying nine and ninety arms; and hurled Arbuda down headlong.

5. Priests, offer the Soma libation to that Indra, who slew Svasna, the unabsorbable Sushna, and the mutilated (Vṛitra); who destroyed Pipru, Namuchi, and Rudhikrā.

6. Priests, present the Soma libation to him, a An Asura; Bala we have had before.

b Uraṇa is a new name; Arbuda occurs vol. i. p. 173.

c Sushna has often been named, and Pipru occurs more than once: see Index, vol. i. Svasna-su-āśnate is he who devours; but the Scholiast refers su to the verb jaghadna, well-slew, and makes the name, Asa, apparently without necessity; this and Rudhikrā, are new names of Asuras: Namuchi has been named before, vol. i. 14: his destruction by the foam of the sea, which is a Purāṇik legend, is cited by Skṛṣa from the Taittiṛīya:—

apām phena Namucheh tirah Indra udavartayat.
who, with the adamantine (thunderbolt), demolished the hundred ancient cities of Sambara, and cast down the hundred thousand (descendants) of Varchin.\(^a\)

\(^a\) For Sambara, see vol. i. Index; also vol. ii. p. 34, note. Varchin is said to have been an Asura, who reviled Indra, and was consequently destroyed, with all his children and dependants.

of heaven, of mid-heaven, of earth; and may such (pious) act be for your (good).

12. Possessor of riches, exert thy ability to bestow wealth upon us; for thine is great affluence: mayst thou, Indra, be disposed to grant us exceeding abundance day by day, so that, blessed with worthy descendants, we may glorify thee at our sacrifice.

Sūkta IV. (XV.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

1. Verily, I proclaim the great and authentic deeds of the mighty and true (Indra); of him who drank the effused juices at the Trikadruka rites,* and in his exhilaration slew Ahi.

2. Who fixed the heaven in unsupported (space), and filled the spacious firmament, and heaven, and earth, (with light): he it is who has upheld and has made the earth renowned: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

3. (He it is) who has measured the eastern (quarters) with measures like a chamber; who has dug with the thunderbolt the beds of the rivers, and has easily sent them forth by long-continued paths: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

4. Encountering the (Asuras), carrying off Dabhiti, he burnt all their weapons in a kindled fire, and enriched (the prince) with their cattle, their horses, and their chariots: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

5. He tranquillized this great river, (so that it) might be crossed; he conveyed across it in safety (the sages) who had been unable to pass over it, and who, having crossed, proceeded to realize the wealth they sought: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

Varga XVI.

6. By his great power he turned the Sindhu towards the north: with his thunderbolt he ground to pieces the waggon of the dawn, scattering the tardy enemy with his swift forces: in the exhilaration of the Soma, Indra has done these (deeds).

7. Conscious of the disappearance of the damsels, the (Rishi) Parivrij, becoming manifest, stood up; the lame man overtook (them), the blind man

thou hast protected Dabhīti, whilst his chamberlain

Sūkta V. (XVI.)

Deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

1. I bear the libation for you to the best of the holy (gods, to be poured) on the kindled fire, (and I offer to him) fitting praise: we invoke for (our) protection the ever-youthful Indra, the undecaying, the causer of decay, sprinkled (with the Soma libation).

2. For without that mighty Indra, this (world) were nothing; in him all powers whatever are aggregated: he receives the Soma juice into his stomach, and in his body (exhibits) strength and energy: he bears the thunderbolt in his hand, and wisdom in his head.

3. Thy might, Indra, is not to be overcome by (that of) heaven and earth; nor is thy chariot (to be stopped) by oceans or by mountains: no one can escape from thy thunderbolt, when thou traversest many leagues with rapid (horses).

4. All men offer worship to that adorable, powerful, and munificent (Indra), who is associated (with praise): therefore, (do thou), who art liberal and most wise, worship him with oblations; and drink, Indra, the Soma, together with the Sun, the showerer (of benefits). \[a\]

5. The juice of the gratifying and exhilarating (Soma), the exciter (of) those who drink it, flows to the showerer (of benefits), the dispenser of food, for his beverage: the two priests, the sprinklers of the oblation; and the stones (that express the juice), offer to the best (of the deities), the Soma, the shedder (of blessings). \[b\]

\[a\] Vrishabhena bhāmud: the Scholiast renders bhāmu by Agni, fire.

\[b\] The main object of this and the succeeding stanza appears to be the exemplification of the various modifications of meaning, of which the words vrishan and vrishabhā are susceptible; the Soma
6. Thy thunderbolt, INDRA, is the rainer (of bounties); thy chariot, the showerer (of blessings); thy two horses, the shedders (of desires); thy weapons, the diffusers (of wishes); thou reignest, showerer (of benefits), over the inebriating beverage, the sprinkler (of delight): satiate thyself, INDRA, with the good-diffusing Soma.

7. Victorious in battle, (through) thy (favour) I approach thee, who art gratified by praise, in sacred rites with prayer, as a boat (to bear me over misfortune): may INDRA listen attentively to these our words: we pour out libations to INDRA, (who is a receptacle) of treasure, as a well (is of water).

8. Conduct us beforehand away from evil, as a cow grazing in a meadow leads her calf (out of peril): may we, S'ATAKRATU, envelop thee, if but once, with acceptable praises, as youthful husbands (are embraced) by their wives.

Sûkta VI. (XVII.)

The deity and Rishi as before; the metre of the two last stanzas is Trishtubh; of the rest, Jagati.

Varga XIX. 1. Address, worshippers, after the manner of Angiras, a new (hymn) to that Indra, whose withering (energies) were developed of old; who, in the exhilaration of the Soma, forced open the obstructed and solid clouds.\

2. May that (Indra) be (exalted), who, manifesting his energy, exerted his might for the first drinking of the Soma: a hero, who in combats protected his own person, and by his greatness sustained the heaven upon his head.

3. Verily, Indra, thou hast displayed thy first great prowess, when, (propitiated) by the prayer (of the worshipping), thou hast put forth thy withering (vigour) in his presence: and when the congregated enemies (of the gods), hurled down by thee in thy chariot, drawn by thy horses, fled, scattered.

4. He indeed, the ancient Indra, making himself by his might sovereign over all worlds, became supreme over (all); and thenceforth sustaining heaven and earth, he overspread them with effulgence, and, scattering the malignant glooms, he pervaded (all things).

5. By his strength he fixed the wandering mountains; he directed the downward course of the waters; he upheld the earth, the nurse (of all creatures); and by his craft he stayed the heaven from falling.

6. Sufficient was he for (the protection of) this (world), which he, its defender, fabricated with his two arms for the sake of all mankind, over whom he was supreme by his wisdom; whereby, (also), he, the loud-shouting, having struck Kṛiṇi with the thunderbolt, consigned him to (eternal) slumber on the earth.

7. Sûkta VII. (XVIII.)

The deity and Rishi as before; the metre, Trishtubh.

Varga XXI. 1. A laudable and pure sacrifice\(^a\) has been instituted at dawn; having four pairs (of stones for bruising the Soma); three tones (of prayer); seven metres, and ten vessels; beneficial to man, conferring heaven, and sanctifiable with solemn rites and praises.

2. That (sacrifice) is sufficient for him, (Indra), whether (offered) for the first, the second, or the

3. I harness quickly and easily the horses to the car of Indra for its journey, by new and well-recited prayer: many wise (worshippers) are present here; let not other institutors of sacred rites tempt thee (away).

4. Come, Indra, when invoked, with two horses, or with four, or with six, or with eight, or with ten, to drink the Soma juice: object of worship, the juice is poured out; do no wrong (to the libation).

5. Come to our presence, Indra, having harnessed thy car with twenty, thirty, or forty horses; or with fifty well-trained steeds; or with sixty or with seventy, Indra, to drink the Soma juice.

6. Come, Indra, to our presence, conveyed by Varga XXII. eighty, ninety, or a hundred horses: this Soma has been poured into the goblet, Indra, for thy exhalation.

2. Exhilarated by the Soma juice, Indra, armed with the thunderbolt, severed the rain-confining cloud; whereupon the currents of the rivers proceeded (towards the ocean), like birds to their own nests.

3. The adorable Indra, the slayer of Ahi, sent the current of the waters towards the ocean: he generated the sun: he discovered the cattle: he effected the manifestation of the days by light.

4. To the presenter (of the libation) Indra gives many unparalleled gifts: he slays Vritra: he who was the arbiter amongst his worshippers when contending for the possession of the Sun.

Śūkta IX. (XX.)

The deity, Rishi, and metre, as before.

1. We bring to thee, Indra, (sacrificial) food, as one desiring food brings his waggon: a regard us benevolently, when glorifying thee, rendering (thee) illustrious by (our) praise, and soliciting such guides as thou art to felicity.

2. (Defend us), Indra, with thy protections, for thou art the defender against enemies of those men who rely upon thee: thou art the lord of the offerer (of the libation), the repeller (of foes), and with these acts (protectest) him who worships thee.

3. May that young, adorable Indra, ever be the friend, the benefactor, and protector of us, his worshippers: who, with his protection, may conduct (to the object of his worship) him who repeats (to him) prayer and praise, who prepares the oblation, and recites (his) commendations.

4. I laud that Indra, I glorify him, in whom of old (his worshippers) prospered, and overcame (their enemies): may he, when solicited, gratify the desire of wealth of his present pious adorer.

cities, has scattered the black-sprung servile (hosts).④
He engendered the earth and the waters for Manu:
may he fulfil the entire prayer of the sacrificer.

8. Vigour has been perpetually imparted to Indra by his worshippers (with oblations), for the sake of obtaining rain; for which purpose they have having slain the Dasyus, he has destroyed their iron cities.

9. That opulent donation which proceeds, Indra, from thee, assuredly bestows upon him who praises thee, the boon (which he desires); grant (it) to (us) thy adorers: do not thou, who art the object of adoration, disregard our prayers: so that, blessed as another sense, the pregnant wife of the Asura named Krišhā.

Sūkta X. (XXI.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Jagati, except in the last stanza, in which it is Trishubb.

1. Bring the desired Soma to the adorable Indra, Varga XXVII. the lord of all, the lord of wealth, the lord of heaven, the perpetual lord, the lord of man, the lord of earth, the lord of horses, the lord of cattle, the lord of water.*

2. Offer adoration to Indra, the overcomer, the destroyer, the munificent, the invincible, the all-enduring, the creator, the all-adorable; the sustainer, the unassailable, the ever-victorious.

3. I proclaim the mighty exploits of that Indra, who is ever victorious; the benefactor of man, the over thrower of (the strong) man, the caster down (of foes), the warrior; who is gratified by our libations, the granter of desires, the subduer of enemies, the refuge of the people.

4. Unequalled in liberality, the showerer (of benefits), the slayer of the malevolent, profound, mighty, (endowed with) impenetrable sagacity, the dispenser of prosperity, the enfeebler (of foes), firm (of frame), vast (in bulk), the performer of pious acts, Indra has given birth to the light of the morning.\(^b\)

6. Indra, bestow upon us most excellent treasures; (give us) the reputation of ability (to celebrate sacred rites); grant us prosperity, increase of wealth, security of person, sweetness of speech, and auspiciousness of days.

Sūkta XI. (XXII.)

The deity and Rishi as before; the metre of the first stanza is Ashfī; of the rest, Aṭiśakkarī.

Vara XXVIII.

1. The adorable and powerful (Indra), partaking of the Soma, mixed with barley, effused at the Trikadruka rites, has drunk with Viṣṇu as much as he wished: the draught has excited that great and mighty Indra to perform great deeds: May that divine (Soma) pervade the divine (Indra), the true Soma (pervade) the true Indra.¹

¹ All the verses of this hymn occur in the Sāma-Veda, though scattered; this corresponds with i. 457, and ii. 836, of Mr. Whitney's Index. Professor Benzey translates the first epithet of Indra, Mahisha, which Sāyāka interprets by Mahās, great, or pūjya, worshipful, by its more ordinary sense of Buffalo: the burthen of each verse, sa-enam saśchad devo devam satyam Indram satya Induh, he renders by, der hat der Gott den Gott geehrt, der wahre Indu den wahren Indra; Sāyāka refers sa to Indu, or the Soma, of which deva, as well as satya, is an epithet, and puts the

Thereupon, resplendent, he has overcome Krivi* in conflict by his prowess: he has filled heaven and earth (with his lustre), and has been invigorated by the efficacy of the draught: one portion he has taken to himself; the other he has distributed (to the gods): May that divine (Soma) pervade the divine (Indra), the true Soma, the true (Indra).*

3. Cognate with (pious) works and with power, thou desirest to support (the universe): mighty with heroic (energies), thou art the subduer of the malevolent: (thou art) the distinguisher (between the doer of good and ill); the giver of the substantial wealth he desires to him who praises thee: May the divine (Soma) pervade the divine (Indra), the true Soma, the true (Indra).*

4. Indra, the delighter (of all),* the first act verb sabchat, which he renders by vyāpti karma, pervading, in the imperative, vyāpnotu; the text follows his interpretation.

* Kriviṃ nāmāsuram, an Asura so named.

* Adhattānyam jathave, prem arichyata: literally, he has taken the other in the belly, he has left over that; that is, according to the Scholiast, basing his interpretation upon the Taittirīya, Indra, having divided the Soma into two portions, took one to himself, and gave the other to the gods; as it is said by another text, a half to Indra, a half to the other gods, etena ardham Indrīya, ardham anyebhyo devebhyah.

ANUVÁKA III.

Súkta I. (XXIII.)

This hymn is addressed to Bhra możnaśpati, or to Bhrahaspata when the latter is named; the Rishi is Gritsamada; the metre of the first fifteen stanzas and the nineteenth is Trishtubh; of the other three, Jagati.

Varga XXIX.

1. We invoke thee, Brahmanāspati, chief leader of the (heavenly) bands; a sage of sages; abounding beyond measure in (every kind of) food: best lord

a The text has only devasya, of the divine, or the deity; which the Scholiast explains, asurasya: anum rihān he renders prānam hīnasā, injuring or taking away the breath or life, in consequence of which Indra sends down the water or rain, prarindh āpah; the stanza occurs in the Sāma-Veda, i. 466, where this passage and the concluding one are somewhat differently translated.

b Brāhmanāspati is explained by Sōyaka, brahmaño annasya pariśidhasya karmaño vā pālayatī, the protector or cherisher of food, or of any solemn acts of devotion: he has other attributes in the text, as, gahānāṃ gahapatiḥ, chief of the gahas, which generally denotes the classes of the inferior divinities, as the commentator here understands it; and again, jyeshṭhārdjām brahmaṇāṃ, the best lord of mantras, or prayers,—prāsasyam svadhinam mantrādām.
of prayer: hearing our invocations, come with thy protections, and sit down in the chamber of sacrifice.

2. Brihaspati, destroyer of the Asuras, through thee the intelligent gods have obtained the sacrificial portion: in like manner as the adorable sun generates the (solar) rays by his radiance, so art thou the generator of all prayers.

3. Having repelled revilers, and (dispersed) the darkness, thou standest, Brihaspati, on the radiant chariot of sacrifice, (which is) formidable (to foes), the humiliator of enemies, the destroyer of evil spirits, the cleaver of the clouds, the attainer of heaven.

4. Thou leadest men, Brihaspati, by virtuous instructions; thou preservest them (from calamity): sin will never overtake him who presents (offerings) to thee: thou art the afflicter of him who hates (holy) prayers; thou art the punisher of wrath: such is thy great mightiness.

* There is no marked distinction between Brihaspati and Brahmaspati in any of the following stanzas: the former is, perhaps, something of a more martial character, and his protection is sought for against enemies and evil spirits in a more especial manner, but there is nothing very precise in the passages addressed to him to assign to him any particular office or character: Mahādhara explains the term, cherisher or protector of the Vedas,—brihatām vedānām pārakah; but in the next Sūkta, Sāyāka interprets brihat by mantra,—brihato mantrasya, svodmin.

b Brahmadvisah, which may mean, according to the commentator, those who hate either the Brāhmans, or the mantras, or prayers.
5. The man whom thou, Brahmañaspati, a kind protector, defendest, neither sorrow nor sin, nor adversaries, nor dissemblers ever harm, for thou drivest away from him all injurious (things).

6. Thou, Brihaspati, art our protector, and the guide of (our) path; (thou art) the discerner (of all things): we worship with praises for thy adoration: may his own precipitate malice involve him (in destruction) who practises deceit against us.

7. Turn aside from (the true) path, Brihaspati, the arrogant and savage man who advances to injure us, although unoffending, and keep us in the right way for (the completion of) this offering to the gods.

8. Brihaspati, defender (from calamity), we invoke thee, the protector of our persons, the speaker of encouraging words, and well disposed towards us: do thou destroy the revilers of the gods: let not the malevolent attain supreme felicity.

9. Through thee, Brahmañaspati, (our) benefactor, may we obtain desirable wealth from men: destroy those (our) unrighteous enemies, whether nigh or far off, who prevail against us.

10. Through thee, Brihaspati, (who art) the fulfiller of our desires; pure, and associated (with us), we possess excellent food: let not the wicked man who wishes to deceive us be our master; but let us, excelling in (pious) praises, attain prosperity.

11. Thou, Brahmañaspati, who hast no requiter (of thy bounty), who art the showerer (of benefits), the repairer to combat, the consumer of foes, the victor in battles, thou art true, the discharger of debts, the humiliator of the fierce and of the exulting.

12. Let not, Brihaspati, the murderous (weapon) of that man reach us, who, with unrighteous mind, seeks to harm us; who, fierce and arrogant, designs to kill (thy) worshippers: may we baffle the wrath of the strong evil-doer.

13. Brihaspati is to be invoked in battles; he is to be approached with reverence: he who moves amidst combats, the distributor of repeated wealth; the lord Brihaspati has verily overturned all the assailing malignant (hosts), like chariots (overturned in battle).

14. Consume with thy brightest (weapon) the Rakshasas, who have held thy witnessed prowess in disdain: manifest, Brihaspati, thy glorified (vigour), such as it was (of old), and destroy those who speak against thee.

15. Brihaspati, born of truth, grant us that wonderful treasure, wherewith the pious man may worship exceedingly; that (wealth) which shines amongst men; which is endowed with lustre, (is) the means of (performing holy) rites, and invigorates (its possessor) with strength.

* There are different interpretations of this stanza, and Sāyāka would prefer the sense which is given to the phrase, dravitham chitram, lit. various, or wonderful wealth, in the Brāhmaṇa, which considers it to mean brāhma-varcas, or tejās, the Brahmanical virtue or energy: the verse occurs in the Yajur, xxvi. 3, where
16. Deliver us not to the thieves, the enemies delighting in violence, who seize ever upon the food (of others); those who cherish in their hearts the abandonment (of the gods); (they), Bṛiháspati, who do not know the extent of (thy) power (against evil spirits).

17. Twashṭrī engendered thee (chief) amongst all beings, (whence) thou art the reciter of many a holy hymn. Bṛahmaṇāspatī acknowledges a debt to the performer of a sacred rite; he is the acquitted (of the debt), and the destroyer of the oppressor.

18. When Bṛihāspatī, descendant of Āngīras, for thy glory, Parvata had concealed the herd of kine, thou didst set them free, and with thine associate, Indra, didst send down the ocean of water which had been enveloped by darkness.

19. Brahmanaśpati, who art the regulator of this (world), understand (the purport) of (our) hymn, and grant us posterity; for all is prosperous that the gods protect: (and therefore) may we, blessed with excellent descendants, glorify thee at this sacrifice."

SECOND ASHTÁKA—SEVENTH ADHYÁYA

SEVENTH ADHYÁYA.

SÚKTA II. (XXIV.)

Brahmanaśpati and Brihaspati are again the deities; the former associated with Indra in the twelfth stanza; the Rishi as before; the metre of the twelfth and sixteenth stanzas is Tristhūkh; of the rest, Jagati.

1. Inasmuch, Brihaspati, as thou rulest (over all), accept this our propitiation: we worship thee with this new and solemn hymn: since this, thy Varga I.

[* This verse occurs in the Yajush, xxxiv. 58; Mahādhara explains it in the same manner, except in regard to the word vadema, at the end, rendered in the text, may we declare or glorify thee: he would explain it literally, let us speak; that is, let us say; let what we ask be given to us; let it be enjoyed by us;—dāyatām bhujyatām uchchārayema.*
friend, our benefactor, celebrates thee, do thou fulfil our desires.

2. (Thou art) that BRAHMAÑASPATI who, by his might, has humbled those who deserved humiliation; who in his wrath rent the clouds asunder; who sent down the undescending (waters); and made way into the mountain (cave), opulent (in cattle).

3. That was the exploit, (performed) for the most divine of the gods, by which the firm (shut gates) were thrown open, the strong (barriers) were relaxed, (by him) who set the cows at liberty: who, by the (force of the) sacred prayer, destroyed BALA: who dispersed the darkness and displayed the light.

4. That stone-like, solid, down-hanging, water-laden (cloud), which BRAHMAÑASPATI has with his strength divided, the universal solar rays have drunk up; but they have again shed together the showering and water-spreading (rain).

5. For you, (worshippers), the constant and manifold (bounties of BRAHMAÑASPATI), through months and through years, set open the gates of the future rains,* and he has appointed those results of prayer, which the two regions mutually and without effort provide.\textsuperscript{b}

6. Those sages, who, searching on every side, discovered the precious treasure (of cattle) hidden in the cave of the Pañis, having seen through the false (illusions of the Asura), and again coming (thither), forced an entrance.

7. Those sages, eminent for truth, having seen through the false (illusions of the Asura), again pursued the main road thither, and with their hands cast against the rock the destructive fire, which, till then, was not there.\^b

8. Whatever Brahmañaspati aims at with the truth-strung quick-darting bow, that (mark) he surely attains: holy are its arrows with which he \textit{The Angirasas, according to the Scholiast:} see vol. i. 16, note; the whole of this is, no doubt, allegorical; the cows hidden in the caves are the rains accumulated in the clouds, which are set free by the oblations with fire, of which the Angirasas were, no doubt, the authors; at least to some extent.

\textit{The expression is rather obscure, nakih sho asti, that is not; that is, according to Sāyāka, so aṃnih pūrvam tatra nakir asti, na vidyate, that fire formerly is not there, is not known; but they, of their own power, having produced the fire that was not known, or was not extant, threw it there; aṃdvaṃdnam aṃnim svacmaraḥtydd utpādyā tatra prachikshipuḥ: a probable allusion to the dissemination of fire-worship by the Angirasas:} see vol. i. pp. 3, 212.

their abode in the ear.\textsuperscript{a}

9. He, \textit{Brahmañaspati}, is the aggregator and subjugator (of objects); the family priest (of the gods); and the renowned in battle; the beholder (of all), who bestows food and desired treasures, whence the radiant sun shines without exertion.

10. Expansive, vast, and excellent riches, are the attainable (bounties) of \textit{Brihaspati}, the sender of the rain; these are the gifts of the adorable giver of food, whereby both (descriptions of worshippers) entering here enjoy (abundance).\textsuperscript{b}

11. He, who is all-pervading and delighting, is willing to sustain by his strength the noble wor-shipper), as well as one who is in low distress:
greatly is that \textit{Brahmañaspati} renowned amongst the gods, and therefore is he verily supreme above all (beings).

12. All truth, lords of wealth, (\textit{Indra} and \textit{Brahmañaspati}), is (inherent) in you both: the waters injure not your rites:\textsuperscript{c} come to our presence either the \textit{Yajamána}, or host, and the officiating priests; or they may be gods and men; \textit{viśo nivishátah santo bhunjate-bhogáms} ments.

13. The very swift horses of Brahmañaspati listen to (our invocation): the priest of the assembly offers with praise the (sacrificial) wealth: may Brahmañaspati, the hater of the oppressor, accept (the payment of) the debt, agreeably to his pleasure: may he be the accepter of the (sacrificial) food presented at this ceremony.

14. The purpose of Brahmañaspati, engaging in a great work, has been successful, according to his wish; for he it was who recovered (the stolen) cattle for (the dwellers in) heaven; and distributed them; so that of their own power they took different directions, like (the branches of) a mighty river.

15. May we, Brahmañaspati, be daily in the possession of well-regulated and food-supplying wealth: do thou add for us posterity to posterity, since thou, who art the ruler (of all), acceptest my invocation with (offered sacrificial) food.

16. Brahmañaspati, who art the regulator of this (world), understand (the purport of) our hymn, and grant us posterity; for all is prosperous that the gods protect: (and therefore) may we, blessed with excellent descendants, glorify thee at this sacrifice.

Sūkta III. (XXV.)

The deity and Rishi are the same; the metre is Jagati.

1. Kindling the fire, may (the worshipper) overcome the malevolent (disturbers of the rite); may he, repeating prayers, and laden with oblations, prosper: he whom BRAHMAṆASPATI makes his associate, lives to behold the son of his son.

2. (Surrounded) by his descendants, may he surpass the malevolent descendants (of his adversaries), for he is famed for great wealth of cattle, and understands (all things) of himself: his sons and grandsons prosper whom BRAHMAṆASPATI makes his associate.

3. As a river (washes away) its banks, so the devout worshipper, (of BRAHMAṆASPATI), overpowers his enemies by his strength, as a bull (overcomes) an ox: like the spreading flame of fire, it is impossible to stop him, whom BRAHMAṆASPATI makes his associate.

4. For him, the unobstructed rains of heaven descend: first among the devout, he acquires (wealth) in cattle: of irresistible vigour, he destroys his enemies by his strength, whom BRAHMAṆASPATI makes his associate.

5. Verily, for him all rivers flow: him do uninterrupted and numerous pleasures await: blessed with the felicity of the gods, he ever prospers, whom BRAHMAṆASPATI makes his associate.

Sūkta IV. (XXVI.)

Varga V.

1. May the sincere praiser (of BRAHMAṆASPATI) verily overcome (his) enemies; may the worshipper of the gods overcome him assuredly who does not reverence them: may the propitiator of (BRAH-MANASPATI) overcome him who is difficult to be overcome in battles: may he who offers sacrifice appropriate the food of him who does not sacrifice.

2. Offer worship, O man, (to BRAHMANASPATI): proceed resolutely against those who are meditating (hostility): keep your mind firm in contending against foes: offer oblations whereby you may be prosperous: we also solicit the protection of BRAHMANASPATI.

3. He who with a believing mind worships BRAHMANASPATI, the father of the gods,* with oblations, he verily receives food, together with his sons, his kindred, his descendants, his people, and (obtains) riches together with (all) men.

4. BRAHMANASPATI leads by a straight path (to his reward), the worshipper who propitiated him with oblations of butter: he guards him against sin: he protects him from foes and from distress: and wonderful (in might), confers upon him many (favours).

SûRTA V. (XXVII.)

The deities are the ĀDITYAS; the Rishi is either Grītāmada, or his son, Kûrma; the metre is Trishtubh.

1. I present continually, with the ladle (of speech), these oblation-dropping hymns to the royal

* Devānām pitaram: the Scholiast renders the latter, pālayi-tāram, the protector or cherisher.
A'ĐITYAS: May Mitra, Aryaman, Bhaga, the multi-present Varuna, the powerful Anśa, hear us.

2. May those of equal exploits, Mitra, Aryaman, Varuna, be pleased to-day by this my praise; they who are A'Đityas, luminous, purified by showers, who abandon none (that worship them), who are irreproachable, unassailable.

3. Those A'Đityas, mighty, profound, unsubdued, subduing, many-eyed, behold the innermost (thoughts of men), whether wicked or virtuous, whether far from or nigh to those royal (deities).

4. The divine A'Đityas are the upholders (of all things), moveable or immoveable; the protectors of the universe; the provident in acts; the collectors a The A’dityas, or sons of Aditi, here enumerated, are only five; the Scholiast quotes the Taittiriya for eight, adding Dhātri, Indra, and Visvabhu to those in the text, and adding Anśa for Anśa. The Purāṇik enumeration is universally twelve, Viśākha, Pūshan, Twashṭṛi, and Savitri, being added to the eight of the Taittiriya.

b Dhārāpūtṛa, cleansed by water, clean, nirmald, according to the commentary; but no doubt the term refers to the connection of the A’dityas with the fall of rain.

c Bhūryakshāh, having many eyes, is the literal rendering of the epithet; it is no doubt figuratively used, implying the universal penetration of the rays of light, or, as the commentator says, very brilliant,—bahunjasah.

d Antak-pasyante, they look within, is the phrase of the text, but the Scholiast explains it, prāndhält, or manushyānām kṛitvā, into the hearts of living beings, or men; the following expressions confirm his interpretation.
of rain; a the possessors of veracity; the acquitters of our debts.

5. May I be conscious, Adityas, of this your protection, the cause of happiness (and security) in danger; Aryaman, Mitra, and Varuna, may I, through your guidance, escape the sins which are like pitfalls (in my path).

6. Aryaman, Mitra, and Varuna, easy is the path (you show us), and free from thorns, and pleasant; therefore, Adityas, (lead us) by (it): speak to us favourably, and grant us happiness difficult to be disturbed.

7. May Aditi, the mother of royal sons, place us beyond the malice (of our enemies): may Aryaman lead us by easy paths, and may we, blessed with many descendants, and safe from harm, attain the great happiness of Mitra and Varuna.

8. They uphold the three worlds, the three

a Asuryam rakshamandah: asura, the Scholiast here explains, a cloud; from asu, water, as the same with life, and ra, what yields; thence, asuryam is the water of the cloud, or rain, which the Adityas keep collected until the season of its full tat tat kile vrishtyutpadandya rakshanti.

b The debts, in the estimation of the commentator, are literally so; those which are to be paid by the worshippers to other persons; riadhni stotribhiranyebhyah pradeyani; see again, verse nine of the next Sukta.

c Svabheva, svabhrdhiwa, gartavanti sthaliniva, like places of land having holes or pits.

d Tisro bhumi drayam: bhumi is here said to mean loka, world or sphere, earth, firmament, and heaven; which the Adityas support by supplying them with rain.
heavens; a and in their sacrifices three ceremonies (are comprised): b by truth, \textit{A\'dityas}, has your great might (been produced), such as is most excellent; \textit{Aryaman}, \textit{Mitra}, and \textit{Varu\'na}.

9. The \textit{A\'dityas}, decorated with golden ornaments, brilliant, purified by showers, who never slumber, nor close their eyelids, who are unassailable, and praised by many, uphold the three bright heavenly regions for the sake of the upright man.

10. \textit{Varu\'na}, destroyer of foes, thou art the sovereign over all, whether they be gods or mortals: grant to us to behold a hundred years, and that we may enjoy lives such as were enjoyed by ancient (sages). c

\textit{Varga VIII.}

11. Neither is the right hand known to us, \textit{A\'dityas}, nor is the left; neither is that which is in front, nor that which is behind, (discerned by me): Givers of dwellings, may I, who am immature \textit{a Trīh dyūn}, the three luminous objects, \textit{āiptān}, which, according to the Scholiast, may be the three \textit{lokes} above the sky, \textit{Mahār}, \textit{Jana}, \textit{Satya}, or the three luminous deities, \textit{Agni}, \textit{Vāyu}, and \textit{Śūrya}.

\textit{b} The expression is rather obscure,—\textit{trīhi vratā vidathe antar eshāṁ}, lit. the three ceremonies in the sacrifice, in the midst of them: the commentator explains it as in the text, the three daily ceremonials being essentially one worship of the \textit{A\'dityas}; or he suggests it might be rendered, in the midst of those worlds, there are three acts intended especially as the acts of the \textit{A\'dityas}, the absorption, retention, and re-distribution of dew or rain.

\textit{c} The text has only \textit{pūrvā}, prior, former; the commentator explains it by \textit{purvā-devāiḥ}, by former gods or divine sages.

12. He who presents offerings to the royal and true (A\'DITYAS); he whom their constant favours exalt; he proceeds, wealthy, renowned, munificent, and honoured, to sacrifices, in his chariot.

13. Pure, unmolested, possessing (abundant) food and virtuous descendants, he dwells amidst fertilizing waters:\textsuperscript{b} no one, whether nigh or afar, harms him who is (safe) in the good guidance of the A\'DITYAS.

14. A\'DITI, MITRA, VARU\'NA, have pity upon us, even although we may have committed some offence against you: may I obtain, INDRA, that great light which is free from peril; let not the protracted glooms (of night) envelop us.

15. Both (heaven and earth) combined, cherish him (whom the A\'DITYAS protect); verily prosperous, he thrives, with the rain of heaven; victorious in battles, (he defends) both his own dwelling (and assails) that of his foe;\textsuperscript{c} to him both portions (of creation) are propitious.\textsuperscript{d} car from the illusions which (you devise) for the malignant, the snares which are spread for your foes, (in like manner) as a horseman (passes over a road); and thus may we abide secure in infinite felicity.

17. May I never (have to) represent, Varuṇa, the destitution of a (once) opulent, dear, and munificent kinsman: a may I never, royal Varuṇa, be devoid of well-regulated riches: (and) may we, blessed with excellent descendants, worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice. b

Sūkta VI. (XXVIII.)

The deity is Varuṇa; the Rishi and metre are the same as before.

Varga IX.

1. (The worshipper repeats) this praise of the sage, the self-radiant Adītya; may he preside over all beings by his power: I beg for fame of the sovereign Varuṇa, a deity who, when much pleased, (is propitious) to his adorer.

2. May we, Varuṇa, deeply meditating on thee, earnestly praising thee, and (engaged) in thy worship, be prosperous; glorifying thee daily, like the fires

a Mahām ávidam bānam ápeh: the last word is of not unfrequent occurrence for jñāti, a relative; bānam, according to the Scholiast, is synonymous with śānyam, emptiness; ādāidyam, poverty: the sentiment is thus illustrated by the Scholiast: may I not be under the necessity of begging of different princes, saying, my sons, or other relatives, are hungry: asmadīyāḥ putrddayak kshudhitā iti prabhu prabhu samipē abhidhāya yādhamāno mā bhūvam.

3. VARUŅA, chief guide (of men), may we abide in the felicity of thee, who art endowed with great prowess, and art glorified by many: divine sons of ADITI, unharmed (by foes), have compassion upon us through your benevolence.

4. The A'DITYA, the Upholder, has created all this water: the rivers flow by the power of VARUŅA: they never weary, they never stop; they have descended with swiftness, like birds upon the circumambient (earth).

5. Cast off from me sin, VARUŅA, as if it were a rope: may we obtain from thee a channel (filled) with water: cut not the thread of me (engaged in) weaving pious works; blight not the elements of holy rites before the season (of their maturity).

6. Keep off all danger from me, VARUŅA: supreme monarch, endowed with truth, bestow thy favour upon me: cast off (from me) sin, like a tether from a calf: no one rules for the twinkling of an eye, apart from thee.

a Pra śīm asrījād ritam: the expression is indeterminate, in consequence of the various senses of ritam, which may mean truth, or sacrifice, as well as water: the following phrase, sindhavo varukāsya yanti, rivers go of Varuṇa, or by his will or power, confirms the sense of water in the preceding.

b Paptá raghuyā parijman: the last means merely that which goes about or round, and might be rendered, revolving: the Scholiast considers it to be an epithet of bhūmi, understood, parijmani bhūmyām.
7. Harm us not, VARUṆA, with those destructive (weapons), which, repeller (of foes), demolish him who does evil at thy sacrifice: let us not depart (before our time) from the regions of light: scatter the malevolent, that we may live.

8. As we have offered adoration to thee, VARUṆA, of old, in like manner as we offer it now, so may we offer it in future (to thee), who art everywhere present: for in thee, who art difficult of attainment, as in an (immoveable) mountain, all holy acts are assembled, and are not to be dissevered.

9. Discharge, VARUṆA, the debts (contracted) by my progenitors, and those now (contracted) by me; and may I not, royal VARUṆA, be dependent (on the debts contracted) by another: many are the mornings that have, as it were, indeed not dawned; make us, VARUṆA, alive in them.

10. Protect us, VARUṆA, against every peril which *a Madham rájann-aryakritena bhōjam, may I not enjoy by what is made by another; which the Scholiast explains, may I not obtain enjoyment by the wealth that is acquired by another: but the preceding phrase, mat-kritáni, made by me, refers to riśā, for riśáni, debts; and so, probably, it does here.

b A vyushtha in-nu bhúyantrunadhá-sah-á no jíván táśu bádhi, unrisen, verily indeed, many morning-dawns, make us alive in them: according to Sáyaña, this means, that persons involved in debt are so overcome with anxiety that they are not conscious of the dawn of day, to them the morning has not dawned, they are dead to the light of day: the passage is deserving of notice, indicating an advanced, as well as a corrupt state of society—the occurrence of debt and severity of its pressure.
a kinsman or a friend threatens me with alarmed in sleep; or from a thief or a wolf that attempts to destroy us.¹

11. May I never (have to) represent, VARUNA, the destitution of a (once) opulent, dear, and munificent kinsman: may I never, royal (VARUNA), be devoid of well-regulated riches: and may we, blessed with excellent descendants, worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.

SÚKTA VII. (XXIX.)
The deities are the Viśvadevas; the Rishi and metre as before.

1. A'DITYAS, upholders of pious works, and who are to be sought by all, remove sin far from me, like a woman delivered in secret:¹ knowing, MITRA, VARUNA, and (universal) gods, the good that follows from your hearing our prayers, I invoke you for (our) protection.

2. You, gods, are intelligence, you are vigour:

¹ The construction is rather inconsistent with māhyam, to me, in the sing., in the first line, and asmān, us, in the plur., in the second: according to an authority cited by Sāyāna, this hymn removes sin and danger, debt and poverty, and counteracts bad dreams—

_Idam ekādāśarcham tu vāruṇam bhayapāpanut,_ _Riṣhadrīdryaduhswapnanaśanam iti suṣrūma._

do you drive away the malevolent subduers (of enemies), overcome them entirely, and grant us felicity both now and in future.

3. What may we do for you, gods, either now, or in future: what may we do, Vasus, by perpetual and practicable (acts of devotion): Do you, Mitra, Varuna, Aditi, Indra, and the Maruts, maintain our well-being.

4. O gods, you, verily, are our kinsmen: being so, grant felicity to me your suppliant; let not your chariot be tardy in coming to the sacrifice; let us never weary of relatives such as you are.

5. Alone among you, I have committed many offences, (the which correct) as a father corrects a naughty (son): far from me, gods, be bonds; far from me be sins; seize not upon me (your) son as (a fowler) catches a bird.

6. Adorable (deities), be present to-day, that, apprehensive of danger, I may feel sure of your hearty (support): protect us, gods, from the rapacity of the wolf: protect us, adorable (deities), from him who would work us misfortune.

7. May I never (have to) represent, Varuna, the

The explanation of the expression, nijuro vrikasya, somewhat varies, the first being considered as the adjective, agreeing with vrikasya, protect us from the mischievous wolf; and again, kartdt avapado, is explained by Mahidhara, protect us from a well into which we might fall,— kuptdt avapat yatara sa-tasmát pálāyata.
destitution of a (once) opulent, dear, and munificent kinsman: may I never, royal (Varuṇa), be devoid of well-regulated riches, and may we, blessed with excellent descendants, worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.

Sūkta VIII. (XXX.)

The deities are various: Indra and Soma are those of the sixth stanza; Saraswati of the eighth; Brihaspati of the ninth; the Maruts of the last; Indra of the rest; the Rishi is Gritsamada; the metre is Trishtubh, except in the last verse, in which it is Jagati.

1. The waters cease not (to flow in libations) to the divine Indra, the sender of rain, the animator (of all), a the slayer of Ahi; day by day proceeds the current of the waters: at what period of time was their first creation.

2. His mother, (Aditi), declared to him the man who had offered (sacrificial) food to Vītrata: obedient to his pleasure, the rivers, tracing out their paths, flow day by day to their object, (the ocean).

3. Inasmuch as he had soared aloft above the firmament, Indra hurled against Vītrata his destructive (thunderbolt): enveloped in a cloud, he rushed upon Indra, but the wielder of the sharp-edged weapon triumphed over his foe.

a The text has savitre, which might mean, to the sun, as one with Indra: the Scholiast renders it, however, by sarvasya prerakdiya, to the instigator, impeller, or animator of all.

b The drift of the question, according to the commentator, is the non-creation or eternity of the waters,—nitya eva hi tat ityarthā.
4. Pierce, Brihaspati, with a radiant shaft, as with a thunderbolt, the sons of the Asura guarding his gates: in like manner as thou didst formerly slay Vritra by thy prowess, so do thou now destroy our enemy.

5. Do thou, who art on high, cast down from heaven the adamantine (thunderbolt), wherewith, when exhilarated, thou didst slay thy foe; and make us affluent in the possession of many sons, and grandsons, and cattle.

Varga XIII.

6. Indra and Soma, eradicate the worker (of evil), whom you hate; be the encouragers of the liberal instituter of the rite: protect us in this place of peril, and make the world (free from fear).

7. Let not Indra vex me, or weary me, or make me slothful: never may we say (to another), do not offer the Soma libation: (for it is Indra) who will fulfil (my wishes), who will give (me riches), who will hear (my prayers), who will reward me, presenting libations, with cattle.

8. Saraswati, do thou protect us: associated with the Maruts, and firm (of purpose), overcome our foes, whilst Indra slays the chief of the Sandikas, defying him and confiding in his strength.

a Brihaspati is here obviously identified with Indra.
b Krihatam-u-lokam, is, literally, make the world; but the verb is not used in the sense of creating, and requires the specification of what is done, which the comment supplies by bhaya-ratisam, freed from fear.
c Vrishabham sandikanam: the Sandikas are said to be the
9. Detecting him who is lying in ambush (against us), who is purposing our death, pierce him, Brihaspati, with thy sharp (thunderbolt), and overthrow (our) enemies with (thy) weapons: hurl, monarch, thy destroying (shaft) against the oppressor.

10. Achieve, hero, along with our valiant heroes, the exploits that are to be achieved by thee: long have (our enemies) been inflated (with pride); slay them, and bring to us their treasures.

11. Desirous of felicity, Maruts, I glorify with praise and homage your divine, manifest, and congre gated strength; that we may thereby daily enjoy distinguished affluence, accompanied by valiant dependants and posterity.

Sūkta IX. (XXXI.)

The deities and Rishi are the same; the metre of the last stanza is Trishtubh; of the rest, Jagati.

1. Mitra and Varuṇa, associated with the A'dityas, the Rudras, and the Vasus, protect our (sacrificial) chariot, when (it goes) about (from one place to another); like birds that fly down, seeking for food, rejoicing, and resting in the woods.

2. Propitiated divinities, protect our chariot, gone forth in quest of food among the people, when the descendants of Sanda, who, with Amarka, is the Purohita, or priest of the Ashuras.

* Asmākam avatam ratham: the latter is here intended for the cart, or waggon employed, as appears from the next stanza, to bring food, probably intending the Soma plant, for the preparation of the libation.
quick (horses), raising the dust with their paces, trample with their feet upon the high places of the earth.

3. Or, may that all-beholding ÍNDRA, the accomplisher of great deeds, by the collective vigour of the Maruts, (coming) from heaven, protect our chariot with unassailable protection, (for the sake of securing to us) ample wealth and abundant food.

4. Or, may the divine Twash Tri, the defender of the world, together with the wives (of the gods), well pleased, urge on the chariot; or may ÍLÁ, the resplendent BHAGA, Heaven and Earth, the sagacious Púshán, and the Aśwínas, the two husbands (of Súryá), urge on the chariot.

5. Or, may the two divine auspicious and mutually-contemplating Day and Night, the animators of moving (creatures, urge it on): and, Earth and Heaven, whilst I praise you both with a new hymn, I offer you food of the standing (corn), although provided with the three (sorts of sacrificial) viands.

a Prthivyáh sásna janghananta páhibhíh, going heavily on the precipice of the earth with their feet; literally, with their hands.

b The text has only gnábhíh, with the wives; but, as accompanying Twash Tri, they must be the devapatihi, the wives of the gods, the personified metres of the Veda, according to the Taíttriya; chhandánsi vai gnáh.

c Sthátsiçcha vayas tríyád upastíre: the passage is rather obscure: according to the Scholiast, it means, I, who am able to offer you three sorts of sacrificial food, vegetable substances, animal victims, or the Soma juice,—oshadhipašusomátmakámini
6. We desire, gods, to repeat the praise of you, who are propitiated by praise: may Ahirbudhnya, Aja-ekapá, Tríta, Ribhukshín, Savitri, bestow upon us food, and may the swift-moving grandson of the waters, (Agni, be gratified by) our praises and our worship.

7. Adorable (gods), I desire that these (my) earnest praises (should please) you: men wishing for food, desirous of vigour, have constructed (hymns) for your celebration; may you hasten like a (swift) chariot-horse to our (pious) rite.

Súkta X. (XXXII.)

The deities of the first stanza are Heaven and Earth; of the two next, Indra or Twashtri; Ráká, the full moon, of the two following; and Siníváli, the new moon, of the next two; and of the last verse, the six female personifications there specified; the Rishi is as before; the metre of the first five stanzas is Jagatá; of the three last, Anushmukh.

1. Heaven and Earth, be the protectors of me annámi; spread, upastríndámi; the food, or cates and butter, chárupuroddáddi lakshanádi, of that which is stationary, that is, vríhydáh, or rice and other grains.

The two first of these names occur in the Puráñnas, as those of two of the Rudras: according to the Scholiast, the first is the same as ahi, alone; budhmá implying merely his origin in the firmament,—budhnám antariksham tatra bhavo ahi-náma deva: the second is a name of the sun, the unborn, who goes with one foot: tríta he would treat as an epithet, tritastírnatama, most expanded, an epithet of Indra: Ribhukshín is an ordinary appellative of the same deity: Savitri he explains, the generator of all, sarvasya prasavítá.
your worshipper, anxious to propitiate you by worship and adoration, for of you two is abundant food: desiring riches, I glorify you both, and celebrate you with great (laudation).

2. Let not the secret guile of man, (Indra), harm us by day (or night); leave us not subject to the malevolent, disunite us not from thy friendship; regard us with the favourable thoughts that (spring) from it: we ask this (boon) of thee.

3. Bring to us, with benignant mind, the wellnourished and compactly-limbed milch cow, yielding milk, and conferring happiness: daily I glorify thee, who art adored by many, quick in (thy) steps, and rapid in (thy) words.\footnote{PadyabhIr-dh\textasciitilde um vachasad cha va\textasciitilde minam, explained as in the text, but, according to the Scholiast, it is doubtful whether this and the preceding stanza apply to Indra or to Twash\textasciitilde fri.}

4. I invoke, with suitable praise, R\textasciitilde k\textasciitilde, who is worthily invoked: may she, who is auspicious of good fortune, hear us, and spontaneously understand (our purpose): may she sew her work with an infallible needle;\footnote{St\textasciitilde vy\textasciitilde atu apah suchydchchhidym\textasciitilde nay\textasciitilde d, may she sew the work with a needle that is not capable of being cut or broken; with one, of which the stitches will endure, in like manner as clothes and the like wrought with a needle last a long time, according to the commentator.} may she grant us excellent and opulent descendants.

5. R\textasciitilde k\textasciitilde, with those thy kind and gracious intentions, wherewith thou grantest riches to the donor (of oblations), approach us to-day; thou who art auspicious of good fortune, favourably inclined, and bestowing a thousand blessings.

6. Wide-hipped Siníváli, who art the sister of the gods, accept the offered oblation, and grant us, goddess, progeny.

7. Offer the oblation to that Siníváli, the protectress of mankind, who has beautiful arms, beautiful fingers, who is the parent of many children, and who has numerous children.

8. I invoke her who is Gangú, who is Siníváli, who is Ráká, who is Saraswatí; (I invoke) Indráání for protection, Varunaání for welfare.

Súkta I. (XXXIII.)

The deity is Rudra; the Rishi as before; the metre, Trishtubh.

1. Father of the Maruts, may thy felicity extend to us: exclude us not from the sight of the sun:

\[\text{Siníváli} is the moon on the first day on which it is visible: she is said to be, devánám āvasá, either the sister of the gods, or one who is independent of them; the verse occurs in the Yajush, xxxiv. 10; for the epithet, Prithveśtvuṣṭke, which Sāyana explains by prithu jaghane, Mahábhara proposes, either, prithu keśabháre, abundant-hairèd, or much-praised, or desired of many; stukd, meaning a head of hair, praise, or desire.

\[\text{Gangú} is said to be a synonyme of Kuhu, the day of conjunction, when the moon rises invisible: it would seem as if these phases of the moon were identifiable with Indráli or Varunáli, or with both.

See vol. i. p. 302, note.

VOL. II.
(grant that) our valiant (descendants) may overcome (these) foes, and that we may be multiplied, Rudra, by (our) progeny.

2. Nourished by the sanatory vegetables which are bestowed by thee, may I live a hundred winters: extirpate mine enemies, my exceeding sin, and my manifold infirmities.

3. Thou, Rudra, art the chieuest of beings in glory; thou, wielder of the thunderbolt, art the mightiest of the mighty: do thou waft us in safety over (the ocean) of sin: repel all the assaults of iniquity.

4. Let us not provoke thee, Rudra, to wrath by our (imperfect) adorations; nor, showerer (of benefits), by our unworthy praise, nor by our invocation (of other deities): invigorate our sons by thy medicinal plants, for I hear that thou art a chief physician amongst physicians.\(^a\)

5. May I pacify by my praises that Rudra, who is worshipped with invocations and oblations; and never may he who is soft-bellied, of a tawny hue, and handsome chin;\(^b\) who is reverently invoked; subject us to that malevolent disposition (that purposes our destruction).\(^c\)

6. May the showerer of benefits, the lord of the Maruts, gratify me his suppliant with invigorating food: may I, free from sin, so propitiate Rudra, that I may attain to his felicity, as a man, distressed by heat, (finds relief) in the shade.

7. Where, Rudra, is thy joy-dispensing hand, which is the healer and delighter (of all): showerer (of benefits), who art the dispeller of the sins of the gods, quickly have compassion upon me.

8. I address infinite and earnest praise to the showerer (of benefits), the cherisher (of all), the white-complexioned: adore the consumer (of sin), with prostrations: we glorify the illustrious name of Rudra.

9. (Firm) with strong limbs, assuming many forms, fierce, and tawny-coloured, he shines with brilliant golden ornaments: vigour is inseparable from Rudra, the supreme ruler and lord of this world.

10. Worthy (of reverence), thou bearest arrows

*a Apabhrtā rapaso daiyasya, is, according to the commentator, devakritasya pāpasya apahartā, the taker away of sin committed by a divinity: however, the proper sense of daiya here may be questionable, and it may imply sin against the gods.

*b Śvītche-śviniyam anchate, he who goes to or obtains whiteness; the white complexion of Śīva, the later representative of Rudra, has, therefore, its origin in the Rich.

*c Asuryam, according to the comment, means bala, strength; or it might be thought to connect Rudra with the Asuras.

*d Arhan is for arka or yogya, fit for, or worthy of; the term is somewhat remarkable, as especially applicable, although not exclusively so, to a Buddha.
and a bow; worthy (of praise), thou wearest an adorable and omniform necklace; worthy (of adoration), thou preservest all this vast universe: there is no one more powerful than thou.

11. Glorify the renowned Rudra, riding in his car, ever youthful, destructive, fierce like a formidable wild beast: Rudra, propitiated by praise, grant happiness to him who praises (thee), and let thy hosts destroy him who is our adversary.

12. I bow, Rudra, to thee, approaching (our rite), as a boy to his father when pronouncing a blessing upon him: I glorify thee, the giver of much (wealth), the protector of the virtuous; do thou, thus glorified, bestow healing herbs upon me.

13. Maruts, I solicit of you those medicaments which are pure; those, showerers (of benefits), which give great pleasure; those which confer felicity; those which (our) sire, Manu, selected; and those (medicaments) of Rudra which are the alleviation (of disease), and defence (against danger).

14. May the javelin of Rudra avoid us: may the great displeasure of the radiant deity pass away (from us): showerer of benefits, turn away thy strong

b Yadu Manu avrikiți piită nah: this alludes, no doubt, to the vegetable seeds which Manu, according to the Mahabharata, was directed to take with him into the vessel in which he was preserved at the time of the deluge: the allusion is the more worthy of notice, that this particular incident is not mentioned in the narrative that is given of the event in the Śatapatha Brāhmaṇa: see Weber, Indische Studien.

15. Cherisher of the world, showerer (of benefits), omniscient and divine (Rudra), hearer of our invocation, so consider us on this occasion, that thou mayest not be irate, nor slay us; but that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.

Sūkta II. (XXXIV.)

The deities are the Maruts; the Rishi as before; the metre is Jagati, except in the last verse, in which it is Trishtubh.

1. The Maruts, shedders of showers, endowed with resistless might, like formidable lions, reverencing (the world) by their energies, resplendent as fires, laden with water, and blowing about the wandering cloud, give vent to its (collected) rain.

2. Since, golden-breasted Maruts, the vigorous (Rudra) begot you of the pure womb of Priśni,

* The stanza occurs in the Yajush, xvi. 50; the end of the first half of the verse reads, durmatir-aghāyoh, the displeasure of the sinful or the malevolent, instead of durmatir-mahī gāt, may the great displeasure pass away.

* Rjīśhidah, from rjīśha, water; or it may mean, Soma that has lost its strength.—rjīśha, apagata sārah somah.

* Priśnydh sukra ūdhanī, lit. in the pure udder of Priśni, that is, on the elevated places of the earth, in the mountains; or, according to the Scholiast, allusion is intended to the legend of the earth's assuming the form of a brindled cow, and Rudra's begetting the Maruts of her in the shape of a bull; but this is more of a Paurānik than a Vaidik legend.
therefore they, the devourers (of their enemies), are conspicuous (by their ornaments), as the heavens are by the constellations; and, senders of rain, they are brilliant as the cloud-born (lightning).

3. They sprinkle the wide-extended (lands) with water, as (men sprinkle) horses (when heated) in battles; and they rush along with swift (horses) on the skirts of the sounding (cloud): a Maruts, golden-helmed, b and of one mind, agitating (the trees), come with your spotted deer to (receive the sacrificial) food.

4. The prompt-giving Maruts ever confer upon the (offerer of sacrificial), food, as upon a friend, all these (world-supporting) waters: they who have spotted deer for steeds, who are possessed of inexhaustible riches, and who, seated in their chariots, (proceed) amongst the moving (clouds), like horses going straight c (to the goal).

5. Maruts, who are of one mind, and are armed with shining lances, come with the bright, full-udderied kine, by unobstructed paths, to partake a Nddasya kar'ais-turayanta dsukhih, lit. they hasten with quick ears of the sound, the Scholiast furnishes, quick horses, and explains the ears to signify, the middle parts of that which emits sound, i.e., the cloud.

b Hiraśyāśiprah: śīra, in other places, the nose, or the lower jaw, is here explained, śiras-trāgha, a head-guard, a helmet.

c Rijipyāso na is explained, by the Scholiast, by riṣu akṣaśīlam práśnavantah gachchhanto asvād iva, like horses going by, or arriving at, that which is straight, not crooked.
of the exhilaration of the (Soma) juice, as swans (fly) to their nests.

6. Maruts, who are of one mind, come to the food that is offered at (our) sacrifices, as (you come) to the praises of men: nourish the milch cow, (the cloud), so that it may be like a mare with a full udder, and render the pious rite productive of abundant food to the worshipper.

7. Bestow upon us, Maruts, that (son) who shall enjoy abundance, and who shall be repeating your appropriate praises day by day to (induce) your coming: give food to those who praise you; to him who glorifies you in battles: (grant him) liberality, intelligence, and unimpaired unsurpassable vigour.

8. When the golden-breasted munificent Maruts yoke their horses to their chariots on an auspicious (occasion), they shed in their peculiar (directions) abundant food upon him who offers them oblations, as a milch cow (gives milk) to her calf.

9. Maruts, granters of dwellings, protect us from the malignity of the man who cherishes wolf-like enmity against us: encompass him with your burning diseases; ward off the murderous (weapon) of the devourer.

10. Maruts, your marvellous energy is well known, whereby, seizing the udder of heaven, you milked it (of the rain,* destroyed) the reviler of

11. We invoke you, mighty Maruts, who frequent such sacrifices (as this, to be present) at the offering of the diffusive and desirable (libation): lifting up our ladles, and reciting their praise, we solicit the golden-hued and lofty Maruts for excellent wealth.

12. May they, who, the first celebrators of the ten-months’ rite, accomplished this sacrifice, person is abruptly changed: your energy is known, by which they milked, &c.

* Trita is said to be a Rishi.

b Evaydvah is said to be derived from eva, that which is to be gone to, gantavyam, that is, worship, or a sacrifice, stotram, yajnam ud, and ydvan, who goes to; it is a purely Vaidik word.

c Te dasagnwah prathamad yajnam tikre: in the first volume (p. 167), we have had dasagnwah explained, those who originally, at least, were priests of the race or school of Angiras, conducting ceremonies that lasted nine or ten days: here we have the office assigned to the Maruts, as the first celebrators of the rite, and who are therefore identified by the Scholiast with the Angirasas, Angirasas-tad rupd bhutvida-marutah, who were the first, or prior to the Adityas: according to the legend, which is here more fully detailed in the commentary, there was a competition for precedence in going to Swarga, between the Adityas and the Angirasas, and the latter acquired it, by first instituting sacrifices with fire; according to the text, Adityaschaiva iha-asam-angirasakcha te agre aagnind aagnim ayaajanta; the Adityas were also here, and the Angirasas; they (the latter) first worshipped Agni with fire: this is in harmony with the inference drawn from other

13. They, the Rudras, (equipped) with melodious (lutes),* and decorated with purple ornaments, exult in the dwellings of the waters; and scattering the clouds with rapid vigour, they are endowed with delightful and beautiful forms.

14. Imploring them for ample wealth, and (having recourse to him) for protection, we glorify them with this praise; like the five chief priests whom Trīta detained for the (performance of) the sacrifice, and to protect it with their weapons.\[\[\] passages, that Angiras and his disciples were the persons who first established the various forms of worship with fire: see vol. i. p. 3, note.

* Te kshobhīhiḥ: Sāyana explains kshobhīhiḥ by sabda kri-bhir-vakāhyair-vākāhīśeṣaḥ, with sounding instruments, called vīs, a sort of vīhās: the vīhā is a stringed instrument, well known.

b Trīto na yān pancha hotṛīn abhīṣṭaye dvavarttad avarān chak-riyā avase: the passage is obscure, especially as the legend which is alluded to is not narrated by the Scholiast: in fact, he is disposed to consider it as alluding to the practice of mysticism, or yog: the five hotṛis, or offerers of the Soma, being the five vital airs,
The deity is Apāmnapāt; the Rishi as before; the metre is Trishtubh.

1. Desiring food, I put forth this laudatory hymn: may the sounding and swift-moving grandson of the waters* bestow abundant food upon me his worshipper: may he make us of goodly appearance, for verily he is propitiated by praise.

2. Let us address to him the prayer that is conceived in our hearts, and may he fully understand (its purport); for he, the lord, the grandson of the whom Triti, as a Yogi, suppressed, and compelled to concentrate themselves in the Chakra, or umbilical region, for the attainment of superhuman faculties: this would leave the term avarān unexplained, although the commentator proposes to render it, homanishpādakān mukhyān, the chief offerers of the Soma: his explanation runs thus: pancha-hotpān adhyātmapradāpāndāi pancha vrittyādmanā vartamānān, ata eva homanishpādakān mukhyān, abhāshaye abhilashitasiddhyārtham chakriyā nābhichakreha avarat sandantum āvavartat: svasān-nir jīgamishān prākān svitmadbhimukham āvartayat, he compelled the vital airs, desirous of issuing from himself, to turn back into the presence of himself, and to concentrate with the umbilical chakra, for the entire completion of the rite; (those airs being) the chief offerers of the oblation abiding in the spirit, as prāsā, apāna, and the rest, constituting the five ministering priests: a less mystical interpretation turns upon the sense of chakriyā, with a spear or lance, rishyākhyena dyudhena.

* Apām-napāt, the son of the trees or fuel, which are the progeny of the rains: a different etymology makes the term an epithet of the sun: vol. i. 51, note.
waters, has generated all beings by the greatness of his might.

3. Some waters collect together (from the rain); others, (already collected on earth), unite with them; as rivers, they flow together to propitiate the ocean-fire: the pure waters are gathered round the pure and brilliant grandsons of the waters.

4. The young and modest (waters) wait upon the youth, assiduous in bathing him, and he, although unfed with fuel, yet cleansed with clarified butter, shines with bright rays amidst the waters, that abundance (may be) to us.

5. Three divine females\(^d\) present food to that uninjurable divinity; as if formed in the waters

\(^b\) The Scholiast suggests also a different explanation of the stanza, as referring to two sorts of water; one termed ekadhāndhā, the other vasatiwaryah, apparently the juice of the Soma, as distinguished by their employment in the Agnishomīya sacrifice, after collecting the fat of the victim, and which are to be mixed for the completion of the ceremony: the mantra used on the occasion occurs in the Yajush, vi. 23, where Mahidhara explains the meaning of Vasatiwari; vasatiwari sanjñānām somārthānām aprām grahanam kāryam, the taking of the waters named Vasatiwari, which mean, the Soma is to be observed: more particular detail is to be found in the Sūtras of Kātyāyana, viii. 9; vii. 10.

\(^d\) They are, according to the Scholiast, Ild, Saraswati, and Bhūrati, personifications of sacred prayer or praise.
they spread abroad, and he drinks the ambrosia of the first-created (element).

6. In him is the birth of the horse; of him is (the origin of) the world: do thou, grandson of the (waters), protect the pious worshippers from the malevolence of the oppressor: those who give no offerings, those who practise untruths, attain not the inconceivable deity, whether abiding in the immature or the perfect waters.

7. He, the grandson of the waters, who abides in his own dwelling; of whom is the readily-milked cow; who augments the nectar (of the skies), and (thence) eats the sacrificial food; he, gathering strength in the midst of the waters, shines for the sake of conferring wealth upon his worshipper.

a Kritá iva upa hi prasāvare apsu, they have proceeded or issued, as if made, in the waters, is the explanation of the commentator; but this is all. Sa pīyāsham dhayati pūrvavānām, he drinks the nectar, that is, the Soma, of those first born; the essence of the waters which were the first created things by Brahmade, pūrvam Brahmanah sakād utpannānām apsām sdrabhātah.

b Abhavastra janimā, here, or in him is the birth of the horse; alluding, according to the Scholiast, to the production of Uchchiṣṭavas, the horse of Indra, amongst the precious things obtained by the churning of the ocean: but this is Paurāṇik; apparently not Vaidik; and the birth of the horse from water, whether of the ocean or not, is a legend, the origin of which is yet doubtful.

c Asya cha swah; the last is explained, eu, well, vesāyya, to be chosen: implying, according to the Scholiast, the whole world: that is, the deity residing amidst the waters, or the rains, may be considered as the origin of all earthly things.
8. All other beings are, as it were, branches of him, who, truthful, eternal, and vast, shines amidst the waters with pure and divine (radiance); and the shrubs, with their products, are born (of him).

9. The grandson of the waters has ascended the firmament above (the region) of the tortuously-moving (clouds), arrayed in lightning: the broad and golden-coloured (rivers) spread around, bearing (to all quarters) his exceeding glory.

10. The grandson of the waters is of golden form, of golden aspect, of golden hue, and (shines) seated upon a seat of gold: the givers of gold (at solemn rites) present to him (sacrificial) food.

11. Beautiful is his form (of aggregated lustre, Varga XXIV. Beautiful) is the name of the grandson of the waters; (both) flourish, though hidden (by the clouds); the youthful waters collectively kindle the golden-coloured divinity in the firmament, for water is his food.

12. To him our friend, the first of many (deities), we offer worship with sacrifices, oblations, and prostration: I decorate the high place (of his presence):

A mvar̄dhate-meghāntarhitam sād-mvar̄dhate; increases though concealed by the clouds; is the interpretation of the comment.

*Bahāndam avanāya, the best of many, that is, of the gods, as in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, agnir-vai devānām avanāḥ, that is, according to the Scholiast, devānām madhye prathamah, the first amongst the gods; qualifying the expression as referring to the sacrifice in which oblations are to be presented to Agni, or fire, in the first instance.
I nourish him with fuel; I sustain him with (sacrificial) viands; I glorify him with hymns.

13. Vigorous, he has generated himself as an embryo in those (waters): he is their infant; he sucks them; they bedew him (with moisture); the grandson of the waters of untarnished splendour has descended to this (earth) in the form of a different (fire).

14. The abundant waters, bearing sustenance to their grandson, flow round him with spontaneous movements; when abiding in his supreme sphere, and shining daily with imperishable (rays).

15. I have come, Agni, to thee, (the giver) of good dwellings, for the sake of offspring: I have come with a propitiatory hymn for the sake of the opulent (offerers of oblations): may all the good which the gods defend (be ours); that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily glorify thee at this sacrifice.

Anyasya iṣva iha tamad vivesha, has entered here, verily, with the body of another; the substantive, fire, is understood; that is, fire originally ethereal, has come upon earth as culinary and sacrificial fire.
Sūkta IV. (XXXVI.)

The Rishi and the metre are the same as in the preceding; the deities are various: the first stanza is addressed to Indra, the second to the Maruts, the third to Tvashtarī, the fourth to Agni, the fifth to Indra, and the sixth to Mitra and Varuna; according to the Scholiast, each is associated with a deified month, after the nomenclature of the old kalendar, or Indra with Madha, the Maruts with Madhava, Tvashtarī with Sukra, Agni with Suchī, Indra with Nabha, and Mitra and Varuna with Nabhasya.

1. (The libation) that is being presented, Indra, to thee, comprises the (products of the) cow, and the (consecrated) water; and the leaders (of the rite) have expressed it with stones, and strained it through woollen (filters): a Do thou, Indra, who art the first (of the gods), and rulest (over the world), drink the Soma offered by the Hotri, b and sanctified by the exclamations Svāhā and Vashāt.

2. Maruts, together worshipped with sacrifices, standing in the car drawn by spotted mares, radiant with lances, and delighted by ornaments, sons of a The text has only avibhiḥ, with sheep; the Scholiast amplifies the phrase, aver bālamayair dasāpavrataḥ, with purifying filters made of the hair of the sheep.

b Pība hotrād ā somam: in this and the following verses, hotra and the analogous terms, potra, Agniḥra, &c., are explained, the Ydga, or sacrifice of the Hotri, and the rest, those portions of the ceremony which are assigned to the different officiating priests, or the oblations which each is in turn to present.
leaders in the firmament, seated on the sacred grass, drink the Soma presented by the Potri.

3. Do ye, who are devoutly invoked, come to us together, and, seated on the sacrificial grass, enjoy your rest; and then, Twashtri, who headest a brilliant cohort, (come) with the gods and their wives, and rejoice, being pleased with the (sacrificial) food.

4. Sage Agni, bring hither the gods, and sacrifice to them: invoker of the gods, propitious to us, sit down in the three altars: accept the libation of Soma that is offered to thee, from the A’gnidhra, and be satisfied with thy portion.

5. This (libation), Indra, is the augmenter of thy bodily (vigour), favourable of old to the resistless strength of (thy) arms: it is effused, Maghavan, for thee; it is brought to thee from the Bráhmaṇa; do thou drink and be satisfied.

6. Mira and Varuna, both be gratified with the sacrifice: hear my invocation as the seated Hotri repeats in succession the ancient praises: the (sacrificial) food, encompassed (by the priests), attends the royal pair; drink, both of you, the sweet Soma libation, offered by the Prasástri.

a Bharatasya sánavaḥ: the first is said to be a name of Rudra, as the cherisher or sovereign, bhavitr, of the world.

b The verse occurs in the Yajush, xxvi. 24; and, according to Maháthara, is in the first instance, addressed to the Devapatnyah, the wives of the gods, and then to Twashtri along with them: his interpretation is, in other respects, much the same as Śāyaṇa’s.

SÚKTA V. (XXXVII.)

The deity of the first four stanzas is DRAVÍNODAS; of the fifth, the Aświns; and of the sixth, Agni; the metre and Rishi are the same as before.

1. Be gratified, DRAVÍNODAS, by the sacrificial food presented as the offering of the Hotri; He desires, priests, a full libation; present it to him, and, influenced (by it, he will be your) benefactor: drink, DRAVÍNODAS, along with the Ritus, the Soma, the offering of the Hotri.

2. He, whom I formerly invoked, and whom I now invoke, is verily worthy of invocation, for he is renowned as a benefactor: the Soma libation has been brought by the priests; drink, DRAVÍNODAS, along with the Ritus, the Soma, the offering of the Potri.

3. May these thy bearers, by whom thou art borne along, be satisfied; lord of the forest, be firm, doing no injury, steadfast of resolve; come, and b Somam Dravinirodah piba ritubhih: this is the burthen of the two next stanzas also, and of the last of the hymn: the Scholiast would understand the Ritus, properly the seasons, to be the deities presiding over the months, continuing the series from the preceding Súkta, and adding to the number severally, the months named Isha, Uṛija, Sakas, and Tapasya.

being gracious, drink, Draviñodosas, along with the Ritus, the Soma, the offering of the Neshtri.

4. Whether he have drunk the Soma from the offering of the Hotri; whether he have been exhilarated by the offering of the Potri; whether he have been pleased with the (sacrificial) food presented as the act of the Neshtri; still let Draviñodosas quaff the unstrained ambrosial cup, the fourth offered by the priest.\(^a\)

5. Yoke to-day, Aświns, your rolling car, conveying (you), the leaders (of the rite); and setting you down before us: mix the oblations with the sweet juice: come, you are affluent with (abundant) food, and drink the Soma.

6. Be pleased, Agni, with the fuel; be pleased with the oblation; be pleased with the sacred prayer that is good for man; be pleased with holy praise, asylum of all: Agni, willing (to accept oblations), render all the great gods desircus (of the same), and with them all, and with the Ritu drink the oblation.

Sūkta VI. (XXXVIII.)

The deity is Savitri; the Rishi and metre are the same.

Varga II.

1. In truth, the divine Savitri, the bearer (of the world), has perpetually been present for the generation (of mankind), for such is his office: verily he grants wealth to the pious (worshippers); may he, therefore, bestow upon the offerer of the oblation (sufficient) for his well-being.

2. The divine, vast-handed (SAVITRI), having risen, stretches forth his arms for the delight of all: the purifying waters (flow) for (the fulfilment of) his rites, and this circumambient air sports (in the firmament).

3. The moving (Sun) is liberated by his rapid rays: verily he has stopped the traveller from his journey: he restrains the desires of warriors for combat, for night follows (the cessation of) the function of SAVITRI.

4. She, (Night), enwraps the extended (world) like (a woman) weaving (a garment): the prudent man lays aside the work he is able (to execute) in the midst (of his labour): but all spring up (from repose) when the divine, unwearied Sun, who has divided the seasons, again appears.

5. The engendered domestic radiance of AGNI spreads through various dwellings, and presides over all (sorts of sacrificial) food: the mother, (Dawn), has assigned to her son, (AGNI), the best portion (at

6. The warrior, eager for victory, who has gone forth (to battle), turns back; (for) home is the desire of all moving beings: abandoning his half-wrought toil, the labourer returns (home) when the function of the divine Savitri (is suspended).

7. The animals search in dry places for the watery element which has been collected in the firmament by thee: the woods are assigned (by thee) to the birds: no one obstructs these functions of the divine Savitri.

8. The ever-going Varuna grants a cool, accessible, and agreeable place (of rest), to all moving (creatures), on the closing of the eyes (of Savitri); b and every bird and every beast repairs to its lair when Savitri has dispersed (all) beings in various directions.

9. I invite to this place, with reverential salutations, for my good, that divine Savitri, whose functions neither Indra, nor Varuna, nor Mitra, nor Aryaman, nor Rudra, nor the enemies (of the gods), impede.

10. May he, who is adored by men, the protector of the wives (of the gods), c preserve us; when worshipping him, who is auspicious, the object of meditation, and the all-wise: may we be the beloved of the divine Savitri, that we may (thence be successful) in the accumulation of wealth and the acquisition of cattle.

11. May that desirable wealth which is granted to us, Savitri, by thee, proceed from the sky, from the waters, from the earth; and may the happiness (which belongs) to the race of those who eulogise thee, devolve upon me, repeating diligently thy praises.

Súkta VII. (XXXIX.)

The deities are the Aświns; the Rishi and metre as before.

1. Descend, Aświns, like falling stones, for the purpose (of destroying our foes); hasten to the presence of the wealth-possessing (worshippers), like vultures to a tree: like two Brahmanas\(^a\) repeating hymns, (be present) at the sacrifice, and come like (royal) messengers in the land, welcomed by many people.

2. Moving at dawn like two heroes in a car; like a pair of goats;\(^b\) like two women lovely in form; or like husband and wife; come together, knowing

\(^a\) Brahmdād-iva for Brahmanau; this looks very like a specific denomination, and recognises the existence of the Brahman not merely as the title of an individual superintending priest, but as implying a religious, or priestly order or caste.

(how sacred) rites (are to be celebrated) amongst men, (to bestow) happiness (on the worshipper).

3. Come to us, the first (before other gods), like a pair of horns, or like two hoofs, travelling with rapid (steps); like a pair of Chakravākas, awaiting day; overthrowers of foes, like warriors in cars, able (to perform all things), come to our presence.

4. Bear us across (the sea of life), like two vessels, or (over difficult places), like the poles of a car, the axles, the spokes, the fellies (of two wheels): Be like two dogs, warding off injury to our persons, and, like two coats of mail, defend us from decay.

5. Irresistible as two winds, rapid as two rivers; and quick of sight, come like two eyes before us; like two hands; like two feet; subservient to the well-being of our bodies, conduct us to (the acquirement) of excellent (wealth).

6. Like two lips uttering sweet words; like two breasts yielding nourishment for our existence; be to us like two noses, preserving our persons, and like two ears for the hearing of agreeable (sounds).

7. Like two hands, Aświns, be ever investing us with vigour; like heaven and earth, bestow upon us rain; give sharpness to the praises that are addressed to you, as they whet an axe upon a grindstone. *

8. The Gṛītsamadās have composed this prayer, these praises, Aświns, for your exaltation: be propitiated by them, leaders of ceremonies, and come hither; that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily glorify you at this sacrifice.

Sūkta VIII. (XL.)

The deities are Soma and Puṣhan; the Rāshi and metre as before.

1. Soma and Puṣhan, you two are the generators of riches, the generators of heaven, the generators of earth; as soon as born you are the guardians of the whole world: the gods have made you the source of immortality. b

2. (The gods) propitiate these two divinities at the moment of their birth, for they drive away the disagreeable glooms: with these two, Soma and Puṣhan, Indra generates the mature (milk) in the immature heifers. a

3. Soma and Puṣhan, showerers (of benefits), direct towards us the seven-wheeled car, d the measure of the spheres, undistinguishable from the universe, every where existing, (guided) by five reins, e and to be harnessed by the mind.

a By Soma, it would appear that we are to understand both the moon and the Soma plant, as is more particularly intimated in the fourth stanza.

c That is, the rain in the newly-risen clouds.

d Sdhaka explains saptachakram, the year, consisting of seven seasons, reckoning the intercalary month as an additional ritu, or season.

e Here again, according to the Scholiast, we have a reference to the solar year, reduced, by the amalgamation of the cold and
4. One of them, (Púshan), has made his dwelling above in the heaven; the other, (Sōma), upon earth, and in the firmament: * may they both grant us much-desired and much-commended abundant wealth of cattle, the source to us (of enjoyments).

5. One of you, (Sōma), has generated all beings; the other proceeds looking upon the universe: Sōma and Púshan, protect my (pious) rite: through you, may we overcome all the hosts of our enemies.

6. May Púshan, who is the benefactor of all, be propitious to (this pious) rite; may Sōma, the lord of wealth, grant us affluence: may Aditi, who is without an adversary, protect us, so that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily glorify (you) at this sacrifice.

dewy seasons into one, to five seasons; as by another text, dwādasa vai māsāḥ panchatavo hemantaśiśirayoh samāsenā, the twelve months are verily five seasons by the combination of the cold and dewy seasons.

* In the first, Sōma, as a vegetable, abides on earth; in the second, or the firmament, he is represented by the moon.

* In what way is not explained, and another text, quoted from the ninth Mahādāla.—Somo janitā matinām, Sōma, the generator of the wise or pious, does not supply the information: possibly allusion is intended to the effects of the libations offered in sacrifice as productive of rain, and thence of nourishment, upon which existence depends.
Sūkta IX. (XLI.)

The deities are various: Vāyu is addressed in the two first stanzas; Indra and Vāyu in the third; Mitra and Varuṇa, the Aświns, Indra, the Viśwadevas, Saraswati, and Heaven and Earth, are in succession the divinities of six triplets; the metre is Gayatri, except in the fifth Tīrtha, in which the two first stanzas are in the Anushthubha metre, and the third in the Brihati; the Rishi is, as before, Āritisamadā.

1. Vāyu, whose are a thousand chariots, and the Niyut steeds, come to drink the Soma juice.

2. Vāyu, of the Niyut steeds, approach: this bright (juice) has been accepted by thee, for thou goest to the dwelling of the offerer of the libation.

3. Leaders (of rites), Indra and Vāyu, lords of the Niyut steeds, come and drink to-day the mixture of milk and of the pure Soma juice.

4. This libation is offered to you, Mitra and Varuṇa, cherishers of truth; hear, verily, this my present invocation.

5. Sovereigns, exercising no oppression, sit down

c This also is given in the Yajush, xxvii, 29: Śukra, which Sāyana interprets dīpyamāna, bright, resplendent, as an appellative of the Soma juice, Mahādhara renders by graha, a vessel, a ladle; that is, a ladle or cup of Soma juice.

\textsuperscript{c} \textit{Na yat para nātara:} \textit{para} is rendered by \textit{Sāyaka}, \textit{dārastha}, being at a distance; and \textit{nātara} by \textit{sampawaritī}, one being near; \textit{Mahidhara} understands them to signify relationship, \textit{para} meaning \textit{asambaddha}, unconnected, and \textit{nātara, sambaddha}, connected or related: he explains also the verb \textit{dadharvat} differently, and makes \textit{Indra} the object:—“The \textit{Indra} whom may such a man not overcome,—\textit{yam-Indram na parābhyāt};” but this seems rather inapplicable.

\textsuperscript{d} \textit{Pisanga sandriṣam} is explained by \textit{Sāyaka}, \textit{nāndrūpam}, of many sorts; \textit{Mahidhara}, more literally, gives \textit{pisanga} its ordinary sense of tawny or yellow, and explains the compound, that which is of a yellow colour, or gold.

12. Let Indra, the beholder of all, the conqueror of foes, send us security from all quarters.

13. Universal gods, come hither; hear this my invocation; sit down upon this sacred grass.

14. This sharp, savoury, exhilarating (beverage), is (prepared) for you by the Sunahotras; drink of it at your pleasure.

15. Maruts, of whom Indra is the chief; divinities, of whom Pushan is the benefactor; do you all hear my invocation.

16. Saraswati, best of mothers, best of rivers, best of goddesses, we are, as it were, of no repute; grant us, mother, distinction.

17. In thee, Saraswati, who art divine, all existences are collected: rejoice, goddess, amongst the Sunahotras, grant us, goddess, progeny.

18. Saraswati, abounding in food, abounding in water, be propitiated by these oblations, which the Gṛitésamadas offer as acceptable to thee, and precious to the gods.

Sūkta X. (XLII.)

The deity is a bird, or Indra in the form of one; the Ṛishi is Gritsamada; the metre, Trishūlah; according to the Grihya Sūtras, the hymn is to be silently repeated on hearing the disagreeable cry of a bird; one ominous of misfortune is probably intended.

1. Crying repeatedly, and foretelling what will come to pass, (the Kapinjala)* gives (due) direction

* According to the Scholiast, the objects addressed are the two sakatas, carts or barrows, which are employed to bring the fuel, or the Soma plants, and are placed in front of the hall of sacrifice, north and south of an altar erected outside, and which are considered here as types of Heaven and Earth, who, properly speaking, are the deities of the Trīchā: the Sākatas are requested, according to Śāyāha, to proceed to the west part of the northern vedī, or altar,—uttaravedeh pachimabhāgam pragachchhatām: according to Kṛtydyana, they are also termed Havirīdhānas, oblation-containers, and part of the ceremony consists in dragging them into different positions at different periods, accompanied by appropriate texts, which are given in the Yajur-Veda, v. 14—21.

whatever befall thee from any quarter.

2. May no kite, no eagle, kill thee: may no archer, armed with arrows, reach thee: crying repeatedly, in the region of the Pitris,* be ominous of good fortune: proclaimer of good luck, speak to us on this occasion.

3. Bird, who art ominous of good fortune, the proclaimer of good luck, cry from the south of our dwellings: may no thief, no evil-doer, prevail against us; that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily praise thee at this sacrifice.

Sūkta XI. (XLIII.)

The deity and Rishi as before: like the preceding, the hymn is also a Tricha, or Triad: the metre of the first and third stanzas is Jagati; of the third, Adidekkari, or Ashiti.

1. Let the birds in quest of their food, according to the season, proclaim their circumambulations, like the celebrators (of sacred rites): he utters both notes, as the chanted of the Sāma recites the Gayatri and Trishtubh, and delights (the hearers).

2. Thou singest, Bird, like the Udgātri chanting the Sāma: thou murmurrest like the Brahmaputra* has kapinjalaraupindro devatā: the kapinjala, in ordinary language, is the Francoline partridge.

* The south; for, as observed in the comment on the next verse, the cry of birds on the south is of good omen.

b The same as the Brahmandchanaś, one of the sixteen priests, at sacrifices: like a horse (neighing) when approaching a mare, do thou proclaim (aloud) to us good fortune from every quarter; proclaim aloud prosperity to us from every direction.

3. When uttering thy cry, O Bird, proclaim good fortune: when sitting silently, cherish kind thoughts towards us: when thou criest as thou art flying, let the sound be like that of a lute; so that, blessed with excellent descendants, we may worthily praise thee at this sacrifice.

MANÁDALA III.

SÚKTA I. (I.)

The hymns of the Third Manádala are attributed to Viśwámitra, or individuals of his family; he is the Rishi of the first Súkta, the deity of which is Agni; the metre, Trishêtukha.

Varga XIII.

1. Render me vigorous, Agni, since thou hast made me the bearer of the Soma to offer it in the who sastram sansati, recites the mantra that is not to be sung or chaunted.

a Karkarī-yaṭha: the karkari is said to be a musical instrument.—vādyā vīśesah.

b Viśwámitra is a remarkable person in the traditions of the Hindu religion: according to the historical and Paurāṇik authorities, he was originally a member of the Kshatriya, or royal and sacrifice: honouring the gods who are present, I take hold of the stone (to express the juice); I propitiate them; do thou, Agni, protect my person.

2. We have performed, Agni, a successful sacrifice: may my praise magnify (thee) as worshipping thee with fuel and with reverence: (the gods) from heaven desire the adoration of the pious, who are anxious to praise the adorable and mighty (Agni).

3. The gods discovered the graceful Agni (concealed) amidst the waters of the flowing (rivers), for the purpose of (sacred) acts: Agni, who is intelligent, of purified vigour, and friendly; who from his birth bestowed happiness on earth and heaven.

military caste, and himself for some time a monarch: he was descended from Kuša, of the lunar race, and was the ancestor of many royal and saintly personages, who, with himself, were called after their common ancestor, Kušikas, or Kaušikas: by the force of his austerities, he compelled Brahmd to admit him into the Brahm-anical order, into which he sought admission, in order to be placed upon a level with Vaśishtha, with whom he had quarrelled: his descent, and the circumstances of his dispute with Vaśishtha, are told, with some variation, in the Rāmdya, ch. li.—lxv. (Schlegel’s edition), in the Mahābhārata, Vāyu, Vishā, and Bhāgavat, and other Purāṇas: the details of the Rāmdya are the most ample: the texts of the Rig-Veda intimate a general conformity with those of the Purāṇas as to the family designation of Viśvāmitra, and to occasional disagreements with Vaśishtha, originating, apparently, in their respective patronage of hostile princes: according, however, to the heroic poems, the Purāṇas, and various poems and plays, these two saints were on very amicable terms in their relations to the royal family of Ayodhyā, or to king Daśaratha, and his son Rāma.
4. The seven great rivers augmented in might the auspicious, pure, and radiant Agni as soon as he was born, in like manner as mares (tend) the newborn foal: the gods cherished the body (of Agni) at his birth.

5. Spreading through the firmament with shining limbs, sanctifying the rite with intelligent and purifying (energies), and clothed with radiance, he bestows upon the worshipper abundant food and great and undiminished prosperity.

6. Agni every where repairs to the undevouring, undevoured (waters); the vast (offspring) of the firmament, not clothed, yet not naked, seven eternal, ever youthful rivers, sprung from the same source, received Agni as their common embryo.

7. Aggregated in the womb of the waters, (his rays) spread abroad; and omniform, are here effective for the diffusion of the sweet (juice), like milk kine full uddered: the mighty (Heaven and Earth) are the fitting parents of the graceful Agni.

* See vol. i. p. 88, and note: the seven great rivers of India, or branches of the Ganges, seem to have been known to the Romans in the time of Augustus.

8. Son of strength, sustained by all, thou shinest, possessing bright and rapid rays: when the vigorous Agni is magnified by praise, then the showers of sweet rain descend.

9. At his birth he knew the udder of his parent, and let forth its torrents, and its speech (of thunder): there was no one to detect him, lurking in the deep, with his auspicious associates, (the winds), and the many (waters) of the firmament.

10. He cherishes the embryo of the parent (firmament), and of the generator (of the world): he alone consumes many flourishing (plants): the associated brides (of the Sun, Heaven and Earth), who are kind to man, are both of kin to that pure showerer (of blessings): do thou, Agni, ever preserve them.

11. The great Agni increases on the broad unbounded (firmament), for the waters supply abundant nutriment; and placid, he sleeps in the birth-place of the waters for the service of the sister streams.

12. The invincible Agni, the cherisher of the valiant in battle, the seen of all, shining by his own lustre, the generator (of the world), the embryo of the waters, the chief of leaders, the mighty, is he who has begotten the waters for (the benefit of) the offerer of the libation.

the plants: the gods approached him with reverence, and worshipped the adorable and mighty (Agni) as soon as born.

14. Mighty suns, like brilliant lightnings, associate with the self-shining Agni, great in his own abode, as if in a (deep) cavern, as they milk forth ambrosia into the boundless and vast ocean.

15. I, the institutor of the rite, worship thee with oblations: desirous of thy favour, I implore thy friendship: grant, along with the gods, protection to him who praises thee; preserve us with thy well-regulated rays.

16. Approaching thee, benevolent Agni, and performing all holy acts that are the cause of opulence, offering oblations with earnestness and in abundance, may we overcome the hostile hosts that are without gods.a

17. Thou, Agni, art the commendable announcer of the gods, cognizant of all sacred rites; placid, thou abidest amongst mortals, and, like a charioteer, thou followest the gods, accomplishing (their wishes).

18. The immortal being has sat down in the dwelling of mortals, accomplishing (their) sacrifices: Agni, who is cognizant of all sacred rites, shines with expanded bulk when fed with clarified butter.

20. I address to thee, Agni, who art of old, these eternal as well as recent adorations: these solemn sacrifices are offered to the showerer of benefits, who in every birth is established (amongst men), cognizant of all that exists.

21. The undecaying Játavedas, who in every birth is established (amongst men), is kindled by the Viswámitras: may we, (enjoying) his favour, ever be (held) in the auspicious good will of that adorable (deity).

22. Powerful Agni, (fulfiller) of good works, convey, rejoicing, this our sacrifice towards the gods: Invoker of the gods, bestow upon us abundant food; grant us, Agni, great wealth.

23. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation, the earth, the bestower of cattle, the means of many (pious rites), such that it may be perpetual: may there be to us sons and grandsons born in our race, and may thy good-will ever be upon us.*

Súkta II.

The deity is Agni as Vaiśváñara; the Rishi is Visvámitra; the metre, Jagati.

1. We offer to Agni, who is Vaiśváñara, the Varga XVII.

* This verse, which forms the burden of several subsequent hymns, occurs in the Sáma-Veda, i. 76; it is translated, with some difference, by Benfey and Stevenson, as has been observed in the Preface.
augmenter of water, praise (as bland) as pure clarified butter; and the priests and the worshipper incite by their (pious) rites the invoker of the gods to his two-fold function,* as a wheelwright fabricates a car.

2. By his birth he lighted up both heaven and earth; he was the praise-worthy son of his parents; the undecaying Agni, the bearer of oblations, the giver of food, the guest of men, the affluent in radiance.

3. The gods, (endowed) with intelligence, gave birth to Agni in the multiform rite by the exertion of preserving strength: desirous of food, I eulogise the great Agni, bright with solar effulgence, and (vigorous) as a horse.

4. Desiring excellent food, inflicting no disgrace, we solicit the boon of the adorable (Vaiśvānara) from Agni, the benefactor of the Bhrigu, the object of our desires, who is acquainted with past acts, and shines with celestial splendour.

5. Men with strewn holy grass, and uplifted ladies, place before them this solemnity for the sake of obtaining happiness, Agni, the bestower of food, the resplendent, the benefactor of all the gods, the remover of sorrow, the perfecter of the (holy) acts of the sacrificer.

* To the lighting of the Čārhapatya and Āhavaniya, the domestic and sacrificial fires.

b The text has merely Rudra, which the Scholiast translates dukkhānam drāvakam, the driver away of griefs or pains; otherwise, we might take it as a synonyme of Agni.
6. Agni, of purifying lustre, invoker of the gods, Varga XVIII. men desirous of worshipping (thee), having strewn the sacred grass, repair to thy appropriate abode at sacrifices: bestow upon them wealth.

7. He has filled both heaven and earth and the spacious firmament, he whom the performers of (sacred) rites have laid hold of as soon as born: he, the sage, the giver of food, is brought like a horse to the sacrificer, for (the sake of) obtaining food.

8. Reverence the bearer of oblations (to the gods), him whose sacrifice is acceptable; worship him by whom all that exists is known, who is friendly to our dwellings; for Agni is the conductor of the great sacrifice, the beholder of all, who has been placed in front of the gods.

9. The immortals, desirous (of his presence), sanctified the three radiances of the great circumambient Agni; one of them they have placed in the world of mortals as the nourisher (of all); the other two have gone to the neighbouring sphere.

10. Human beings, wishing for wealth, give brightness, (by their praises); to the lord of men,

a Yajur-Veda, xxxi. 75.

b Tisrah samidhah, literally, the three fuels, but here said to intend the three forms or conditions of fire; as, earthly fire, that of the firmament or lightning, and that of heaven, the sun; or three Vaidik forms, two termed Aghbra, and one Anavyija: the celebration of the latter is rewarded by enjoyment in this world, that of the two former by enjoyment in the firmament and heaven.
the wise (AGNI), as they add lustre, (by polishing), to an axe: spreading everywhere, he goes alike through high and low places, and has taken an embryo (condition) in these regions.①

11. The showerer (of benefits), generated in (many) receptacles, flourishes, roaring in various (places)b like a lion; VAISHVANARA, the resplendent, the immortal, giving precious treasures to the donor (of the oblation).

12. Glorified by his adorers, VAISHVANARA of old ascended to the heaven that is above the firmament, bestowing wealth upon his (present) worshipper, as he did in former times; he travels, ever vigilant, the common path (of the gods).c

13. We implore for present riches, the many-moving, tawny-rayed, resplendent AGNI, whom mighty, venerable, wise, adorable, and dwelling in the sky, the wind (brought down) and deposited (upon the earth).

14. We implore with prayer the mighty AGNI, the giver of food, the unrefusing, (seated on) the
the front of heaven; the radiant in the sacrifice, him who is to be sought (for by all), the beholder of all, the emblem of heaven, the dweller in light, who is to be awakened at dawn.

15. We solicit wealth of the adorable (AGNI), the invoker of the gods, the pure, the single-minded, flame.

c That is, as the sun.
the munificent, the commendable, the beholder of all, who is many-coloured like a chariot, elegant in form, and always friendly to mankind.

Sūkta III.

The deity, Rishi, and metre, are unchanged.

1. Intelligent (worshippers), offer to the powerful Vaiśwánara precious things at holy rites, that they may go (the way of the good), for the immortal Agni worships the gods; therefore, let no one violate eternal duties.

2. The graceful messenger (of the gods) goes between heaven and earth: sitting (on the altar), and placed before men, he ornaments the spacious chambers (of sacrifice) with his rays, animated by the gods, and affluent in wisdom.

3. The wise worship, with (pious) rites, Agni, the sign of sacrifices, the accomplishment of the solemnity, in whom the reciters of (his) praises have accumulated (their) acts (of devotion), and from whom the worshipper hopes for happiness.

4. The parent of sacrifices, the invigorator of the wise, the end (of the rite), the instruction of the priests, Agni, who has pervaded heaven and earth in many forms, the friend of man, wise, (and endowed) with splendours, is glorified (by the worshipper).

* Ketum yajnánám: ketu is, properly, a banner; but it is repeatedly used in the Veda in the sense of prajnápaka, a sign, a signal, that which makes any thing known.
5. The gods have placed in this world the delightful Agni in a delightful chariot, the tawny-hued Vaiswanara, the sitter in the waters, the omniscient, the all-pervading, the endowed with energies, the cherisher, the illustrious.

6. Perfecting in performance the multiform sacrifice of the worshipper, along with the gods to whom solemnities have been addressed, and together with the priests, Agni, the charioteer, the swift-moving, the humble-minded, the destroyer of foes, passes along between (heaven and earth).

7. Agni, praise (the gods that we may enjoy) good offspring and long life: propitiate them by libations; bestow upon us plentiful crops: ever vigilant, grant food to the respectable (institutor of this ceremony), for thou art the desired of the gods, the object of the pious acts of the devout.

8. The leaders (of holy rites) praise with prostration, for (the sake of) increase, the mighty lord of people, the guest (of men), the regulator eternally of acts, the desired of the priests, the exposition of sacrifices, Jatavedas, endowed with (divine) energies.

9. The resplendent and adorable Agni, riding in an auspicious chariot, has comprehended the whole earth by his vigour: let us glorify with fit praises the acts of that cherisher of multitudes in his own abode.

10. Vaiswanara, I celebrate thy energies, whereby, O sage, thou hast become omniscient: as soon as born, Agni, thou hast occupied the realms (of space), and heaven and earth; and hast comprehended all these with thyself.

11. From acts that are acceptable to Vaiśwānarā comes great (wealth); for he, the sage (Agni) alone, bestows (the reward) of zeal in (the performance of) his worship: adoring both his prolific friends, heaven and earth, Agni was born.

Sūkta IV.

The deities are the Āprī; b the Ṛishi and metre as before.

1. Repeatedly kindled, (Agni), c wake up favourably disposed; (endowed) with reiterated lustre, entertain the kind purpose of (granting us) wealth: bring, divine Agni, the gods to the sacrifice: do thou, the friend (of the gods), minister, well-affected, to (thy) friends.

2. Tanunapāt, whom the deities, Mitra, Varuṇa, and Agni, worship daily thrice a day, render this our sacred rain-engendering sacrifice productive of water.

3. May the all-approved praise reach the invoker of the gods: may Ila d first proceed to worship and to praise with prostrations the showerer (of benefits) in his presence: may the adorable (Agni), instigated (by us), worship the gods.

4. An upward path has been prepared for you

b See p. 195.
c Samit-samit, takes the place of the Samiddha, or Susamiddha, as an appellative of Agni in preceding Sūktas.
d The Īrita of preceding hymns, but the construction of the stanza is difficult, and the sense obscure.
both in the sacrifice: the blazing oblations soar aloft: the invoker of the gods has sat down in the centre of the radiant (hall): let us strew the sacred grass for the seats of the gods.

5. The gods who gratify the universe with rain are present at the seven offerings (of the ministering priests), when solicited with (sincerity of) mind: may the many deities who are engendered in sensible shapes at sacrifices come to this our rite.

Varga XXIII.

6. May the adored Day and Night, combined or separate, be manifest in bodily form, so that Mitra, Varuṇa, Indra, or (the latter), attended by the Maruts, may rejoice us by their glories.

7. I propitiate the two chief divine invokers of the gods: the seven offerers of (sacrificial) food, expectant of water, gratify Agni with oblations: the illustrious observers of sacred rites have saluted him in every ceremony as (identifiable), verily, with water.

8. May Bháratí, associated with the Bháratís; Ilá with the gods and men; and Agni; and Sárás-

\[ Agni \text{ and the Barhis, or sacred grass, to which, as in the parallel passages, the stanza is addressed.} \]

\[ b \text{ In preceding Súktas, the doors of the hall of sacrifice are the personifications specified; here are to be understood divinities presiding over the doors.} \]

\[ c \text{ Ritam it ta áhuh is explained by the Scholiast, Agnim eva rita-bhutam áhuh, they have called Agni, verily, rita: rita is usually rendered water, but it may mean truth; the commentator leaves it unexplained, having, in the preceding phrase, ritam bhasanta, rendered it by udakam, desirous or expectant of water.} \] wati with the Saraswatās; may the three goddesses sit down upon the sacred grass (strewn) before them.

9. Divine Twashtṛi, being well pleased, give issue to our procreative vigour, whence (a son), manly, devout, vigorous, wielder of the (Soma-bruising) stone, and reverencing the gods, may be born.

10. Vanaspati, bring the gods nigh: may Agni, the immolator, prepare the victim: let him who is truth officiate as the ministering priest, for, verily, he knows the birth of the gods.

11. Agni, kindled into flame, come to our presence in the same chariot with Indra and with the swift-moving gods: may Aditi, the mother of excellent sons, sit down on the sacred grass, and may the immortal gods be satisfied with the reverentially-offered oblation.

a The Scholiast interprets bhadrabhibh, with the connections of Bharata, or the Sun, bharatasya sūryasya sambandhiniḥbh, perhaps intending the solar rays: Bhadrati he explains by Vāch, speech; Ilā he explains by Bhūmi, the earth; and Sarasvatī by Madhya-mikā vīk; the Sārasvatīs are the Madhyamasthānas, the middle regions, or the firmament: Agni, whose name is rather unconnectedly inserted, is thus identified through their several personifications as goddesses, with heaven, mid-heaven, and earth, or with speech or sound in the three regions; see p. 73, note (c).

b Agnir havih bāmitā kudayāti is the same phrase as occurred in Śūkta III. of the Second Madhala, v. 10: see p. 219.

c Swāhā devām amritā mādayantām: Swāhā is explained Swāhā-kāreṇa yuktāḥ, joined with or addressed by the exclamation, Swāhā. This Śūkta is more complicated and obscure than any of the preceding addressed to the Āprā, except Śūkta III. of the Sūkta V.

The deity is Agni; the Rishis and metre as before.

Varga XXIV. 1. The sagacious Agni, cognizant of the dawn, is awakened to (follow) the paths of the sages: the luminous Vahni, kindled by the devout, has thrown open the gates of darkness.

2. The adorable Agni is magnified by the hymns, the prayers, the praises, of (his) worshippers: emulating the many glories of the sun, the messenger (of the gods) shines forth at the glimmering of the dawn.

3. Agni, the embryo of the waters, the friend (of the pious), accomplishing (all desires) with truth, has been placed (by the gods) amongst men, the descendants of Manu: desirable and adorable, he has taken his station on high, a where the wise Agni is to receive the oblations of the devout.

4. Agni, when kindled, is Mitra; and, as Mitra, is the invoker (of the gods): Varuna is Jātavedas: Mitra is the ministering priest: Damúsas is the agitator (Váyu): Mitra (is the associate) of rivers and mountains. b a Sánwasthāt; sānu, uchchhritam; that is, uttaravedyadhyam; the place called the north altar.

5. The graceful (Agni) protects the primary station of the moving earth: mighty, he protects Second Mathāla, to which it bears the nearest analogy: they are both perhaps of somewhat later date than the others.

b The purport of the stanza is the identity of Agni with Mitra, the sun, and of both with Varuna and Váyu.
the path of the sun: he protects the seven-headed (troop of the Maruts) in the centre (between heaven and earth): he protects the exhilarating (oblations) of the gods.

6. The mighty, divine Agni, knowing all (things) that are to be known, made the commendable and beautiful water, the glossy skin, the station of the diffused slumbering (Agni), and, ever vigilant, preserves it.

7. Agni has taken his station in an asylum, brilliant, much-lauded, and as desirous (of receiving him) as he is (to repair to it): radiant, pure, vast, and purifying, he repeatedly renovates his parents, (Heaven and Earth).

8. As soon as generated he is borne aloft by the plants, which grow flourishing by moisture, as the beautifying waters descend: may he, in the bosom of his parents, protect us.

9. Praised and (nourished) by fuel, the mighty Agni, stationed on the (altar the) navel of the earth, in the form of the firmament, has shone (brightly): may the friendly and adorable Agni who respires in the mid-heaven, the messenger (of the gods), bring them to the sacrifice.

\[^a\] Covering as it were by extinguishing the flame of fire.

\[^b\] Meditarśvan, the Scholiast explains mdtāri, antarikṣhe; svasīti, sūryarūpena cheshūte, who breathes in mid-heaven, or acts in the form of the sun; or mdtāri may imply āranyām, in a forest, he who abides in the woods: the explanations are those of Yādaka—Nir. vii. 26; the more usual sense of Meditarśvan is the wind, as in the next stanza.
10. The mighty Agni, being the best of the heavenly luminaries, sustained the heaven with radiance, when the wind kindled the bearer of oblations, (till then concealed) in a cave from the Bhrigus.

11. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation the earth, the bestower of cattle, the means of many (pious rites), such that it may be perpetual: may there be to us sons and grandsons born in our race, and may thy good will ever be upon us.

Sūkta VI.

Varga XXVI.

1. Devout ministrants, who are to be inspired by prayer, bring forth (the ladle) destined for the worship of the gods, which is to be conveyed to the south (of the fire-altar), and which, charged with (sacrificial) food, pointed to the east, containing the oblation, and, filled with liquefied butter, proceeds to Agni.

2. Agni, as soon as born, occupy both heaven and earth; for thou, to whom sacrifice is to be offered, exceedest in magnitude the firmament and the earth: may thy seven-tongued fires be glorified.

3. The firmament and the earth and the adorable (gods) propitiate thee their invoker, for the (completion of the) sacrifice, whenever the descendants of Manu, pious, and bearing oblations, glorify thy radiant flame.

b The burden of Sūkta XLIV.: see p. 323.

4. The great and adorable Agni is firm seated on his spacious throne between heaven and earth; and the powerful fellow-brides (of the sun), the imperishable, uninjurable (heaven and earth) are the two milk-yielding cows of the wide-extending (Agni).

5. Great, Agni, are the deeds of thee the mighty one: thou hast spread abroad by thy power the heaven and earth; thou hast been the messenger (of the gods); as soon as begotten thou hast become the leader of men.

6. Harness with traces, to thy car, thy long-maned, ruddy (steeds, to come) to the sacrifice: bring hither, divine Jātavedas, all the gods, and make them propitious to the oblation.

7. When, Agni, thou abidest in the woods, consuming the waters at thy pleasure, then thy rays illuminate the heavens, and thou shinest like many former radiant dawns: the gods themselves commend (the brilliancy) of their praise-meriting invoker.

8. The deities who sport in the spacious (firmament); those who are in the luminous sphere of heaven; the adorable Uma, who come when worthily invoked; the horses, Agni, that are fit for thy car.

9. With all these in one chariot, Agni, or in many (chariots), come to our presence, for thy horses are able: bring the three and thirty divinities with their wives, for the sake of (the sacrificial) food, and exhilarate them (all with the Soma libation).

10. He is the invoker (of the gods), whom the spacious heaven and earth glorify, for the sake of increase, at repeated sacrifices: charged with water, they await like holy rites, propitious to the real presence of him who is born of truth.

11. Grant, Agni, to the offerer of the oblation, the earth, the bestower of cattle, the means of many (pious rites); such that it may be perpetual: may there be to us sons and grandsons born in our race, and may thy good-will ever be upon us.

a. Patnivatas-trisatam trischa devds: the first is, literally, having wives, but is sometimes considered as a proper name: for the thirty-three divinities, see vol. i. p. 97, note.

b. Práchik adhwarva tashatur sumeke Ritóvarí rita-jótasya sutye: the passage is obscure, and the commentator has not done much to render it more explicit.
