

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

PROFESSOR ALLEN died very suddenly at his home in Madison, Wisconsin, December 9, 1889. The Introduction to this volume, the Latin text and the commentary were already in type, and now appear, in their characteristic features, essentially as he left them. The indexes were in manuscript and unfinished, but they have been completed in accordance with his intention.

Professor Allen's long and successful experience as a college teacher, his intimate acquaintance with Roman history, and the fascination which he felt in the study of Tacitus and of the character of Tiberius in particular, gave him exceptional qualifications for editing the Annals, and the work was intrusted to him with unusual confidence. His interest in the College Series had been intelligent and helpful, and the editors feel his death as a serious personal loss. In a wider view, his great attainments in several fields of research, his catholic tastes and interests, the openness and alertness of his mind, his joyous readiness in communicating his acquisitions, and the genuine modesty and nobility of his character made him a permanent honor to scholarship and to life.

The text of this volume is based upon that of Halm's fourth edition of Tacitus (Leipsic, 1882). Deviations from this standard consist largely in a closer adherence to the readings of the manuscript. The most important variants are discussed in the Appendix. The orthography of Halm's edition is that of the Medicean manuscript; for the purposes of this edition it has seemed better to adopt, though not with painful consistency, the best-established results of specialists in this field,— notably, of Brambach. A full Index of Names and an Index to the Notes will, it is hoped, add to the usefulness of the book.

As the commentary assumes that the reader is at a somewhat advanced point in his Latin studies, little attention is paid to the commonplaces of grammar; on the other hand, considerable prominence is given to the idiosyncracies of Tacitus' Latinity, and to the changes which the language had undergone since the Ciceronian period. A leading aim in the commentary is to present a connected view of the character and reign of Tiberius, and to trace the constitutional and administrative changes which took place under that emperor. To make the view more complete, the lost portions of the fifth and sixth Books have been, in a measure, supplied by extracts from Dio Cassius, Suetonius, and Juvenal.

The long and concentrated study of Tacitus has accumulated a rich store of illustrative material that is now the common property of scholarship. This material has been freely used for the present edition; but special acknowledgment is due for aid derived from the editions of Furneaux (Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1884), Nipperdey (8th edition, by Andresen, Berlin, 1884), Dräger (4th edition, Leipsic, 1882), and Pfitzner (Gotha, 1884), and also from Dräger's Syntax und Stil des Tacitus (3d ed., Leipsic, 1882), and Gerber and Greef's Lexicon Taciteum (A-M., Leipsic, 1877-88). In the discussion of constitutional and antiquarian questions Mommsen's labors have been of great service; Marquardt and Madvig have also been frequently consulted. Indebtedness to other recent works and monographs is acknowledged at the pertinent points in the Introduction and the notes.

INTRODUCTION.

TACITUS.

1. Very little is known of the life or personality of the historian Tacitus. Even his name is matter of doubt. He is commonly spoken of without prænomen, as Cornelius Tacitus. Sidonius Apollinaris, a Christian writer of the fifth century, calls him Gaius, and the same name is given by some manuscripts of inferior authority. The name Publius, however, contained in the best manuscript of his writings, the so-called First Medicean, is now generally accepted. As to his place of birth, it has been guessed to be Interamna, because this was the birthplace of the emperor Tacitus (A.D. 275-6), who claimed relationship with him.<sup>1</sup> The slighting tone, however, in which he mentions municipali adultero (IV. 3) and oppidanum genus (VI. 15), would make it more probable that he was a native of Rome. The date of his birth can be fixed with only an approach to certainty. His intimate friend, the younger Pliny, who was born A.D. 61 or 62, says (Epp. VII. 20) that they were propemodum aequales; adding, adulescentulus, cum iam tu fama gloriaque floreret, te sequi . . . concupiscebam. He was thus enough older than Pliny to be a man of established reputation when Pliny was a very young man, adulescentulus; a difference of age which can hardly have been less than eight or ten years. The year A.D. 54 is probably as late as we can place his birth. This date is also supported by the facts of his official career. He says of himself (Hist. I. 1) that his course of honors was under the three emperors Vespasian, Titus, and Domitian; it is known that he held the prætorship A.D. 88. As Vespasian died A.D. 79, it is not likely that he was less than twenty-five at this date, this being the earliest age at which the quæstorship, the first of the honores, could be held.

2. In the year 78 Tacitus married the daughter of the eminent soldier Agricola, whose life he afterwards wrote. After his prætorship in the year 88, he was absent from Rome for several years; it is conjectured that he held some governmental office during this interval, perhaps in Germany, where he may have gathered the materials for his work descriptive of that country. During his absence his father-in-law Agricola died. His own death was probably A.D. 116; as the description of the empire given in the Annals (nunc rubrum ad mare patescit, II. 61) corresponds to the condition of things in the last year of Trajan, who died in 117. This includes territories which were annexed to the empire by Trajan, A.D. 115, but immediately surrendered by his successor Hadrian.

3. The works of Tacitus are:—

✓ (1) Dialogus de Oratoribus, a short treatise, in a studied Ciceronian style, so different from that of his later works that its authenticity has been a subject of doubt and controversy.

(2) De vita Iulii Agricolæ, written A.D. 97 or 98: a masterpiece of biographical composition.

(3) Germania, or De origine, situ, moribus ac populis Germanorum, written in the year 98; our best source of information with regard to the ancient Germans.

(4) Historiæ, a history of his own times, from the accession of Galba (69) to the death of Domitian (96). Of the fourteen books of this work there are extant the four first books and part of the fifth, embracing in part the events of the years 69 and 70.

Augusti, serving as an introduction to the Histories, in the author's most mature style, and generally regarded as his masterpiece. It was in sixteen books, of which about one-third, the central portion of the work, is lost.

It may be estimated roughly that about one-third of the writings of Tacitus is extant.

4. The reputation of Tacitus during his own lifetime, both as an historian and an orator, was very high. Pliny says of him (II. 11, 17) that, when engaged in the prosecution of a cruel and unjust governor, he spoke eloquentissime et, quod eximium orationi eius inest, opus, which last word we may render, 'in a stately, earnest style.' Again, in mentioning Tacitus as delivering the funeral oration at the death of the distinguished Verginius Rufus, he says (II. 1) : hic supremus felicitati eius cumulus accessit, laudator eloquentissimus. In another letter (IX. 23) he tells of a conversation held by Tacitus with a chance acquaintance, who asked him after some talk on literary subjects, Tacitus es an Plinius? — a coupling of names which delighted Pliny exceedingly. But during the Middle Ages the name of Tacitus fell into oblivion, and his works seemed entirely lost. In the revival of learning some portions of his writings were rescued. In November, 1425, the distinguished scholar and discoverer of manuscripts, Poggio Bracciolini, received a letter from Germany in which was mentioned the discovery of aliqua opera Cornelii Taciti nobis ignota. But much correspondence and inquiry failed to bring the book, and Poggio died in 1459 without sight of the much desired treasure. Soon after, however, the manuscript, containing the Dialogus, the Germania, and a work of Suetonius, was brought to Italy. The Agricola was discovered at about the same time ; but the original manuscripts disappeared shortly after being copied, so that of these smaller works of Tacitus we have nothing but fifteenth have been used by itself through a misunderstanding. It may be noted that Tacitus himself (IV. 32, 1) speaks of the work as annales.

century transcripts. The extant portions of the larger works are contained in two manuscripts of the ninth, tenth, or eleventh century; one (the First Medicean) containing the four first books of the Annals with what remains of the fifth and sixth, the other (the Second Medicean) the remaining portion of the Annals (Books XI. to XVI.) with the Histories. These manuscripts were brought from Germany to Italy, and are now in the Medicean Library of Florence. The latter portion was printed in 1470; the earlier portion, that contained in the present edition, was brought to Rome in 1508, and printed by order of Pope Leo X. in 1515.

THE ANNALS.

5. The form of the Annals is, as the name indicates, strictly chronological. The events of each year are told by themselves, so that any independent series of events can be read in connection only by taking in succession several detached passages; to this rule there are but one or two exceptions (e.g. VI. 31-37). As has been already said, the extant portions of the work consist of two distinct parts, separated by a gap of four books. This gap covers the reign of Caligula and most of that of Claudius (A.D. 37 to 54), while the two extant portions comprise the reigns of Tiberius and Nero respectively. The accounts of these two reigns are preserved nearly complete. The present edition contains the first part, the reign of Tiberius, comprising the first six books, of which, however, nearly the whole of the fifth book and perhaps a quarter of the sixth are missing. The missing portions contained the year 30 with the greater part of 29 and 31, the reign of Tiberius extending from A.D. 14 to 37. In biographical importance, for estimating the character of Tiberius, and understanding the puzzling events of the closing years of his reign, these lost parts of the work must have ranked among the very highest, for they contained an account of the destruction of the family of Germanicus and the downfall of Sejanus.

TIBERIUS.

6. It is from this history of the reign of Tiberius, supported as it is in most particulars by the testimony of Suetonius and Dio Cassius, that the accepted view of the character of this emperor, as a gloomy and suspicious tyrant, has been derived. This is the view presented by, I believe, all the historians who have treated of this period except Merivale, and by all the editors except Furneaux. Merivale and Furneaux, in part at least, reject the traditional view. Mommsen also, wherever he has occasion to speak of Tiberius, mentions him with respect, giving him the highest praise as a ruler and not condemning him severely as a man. The first attempt of any importance to vindicate the character of the emperor was made by Dr. Sievers in two Hamburg school programmes of 1850 and 1851. He was soon followed by Adolf Stahr, who, in a series of able works, has made himself the foremost German champion of Tiberius; the latest of these is Tacitus' Geschichte der Regierung des Kaisers Tiberius, übersetzt und erklärt von Adolf Stahr (Berlin, 1871). In the same line is Tiberius und Tacitus von L. Freytag (Berlin, 1870). Tiberius has also been defended in England by Prof. E. S. Beesly in Catiline, Clodius, and Tiberius (London, 1878); and in this country by Prof. Fred. Huidekoper, in a chapter of Judaism at Rome (New York, 1876).

7. The modern fashion of whitewashing the disreputable characters of history is one with which I have little sympathy, except so far as it must be admitted that no man is wholly bad, as no man is wholly good. Neither can I agree at all with those who would defend Tiberius by depreciating the motives of his historian. That Tacitus sympathized with Germanicus and Agrippina, as against Tiberius, is no doubt true; it was his right as a patriot and an historian to choose his side. That he constantly imputes to Tiberius sentiments and motives for which the narrative gives no evidence, thus carrying his preconceived theories and prejudices into the interpretation of historical events, is a more serious charge against him, but one which we must admit to be true. But at the same time it must be acknowledged that he carries his prejudice only into the interpretation of historical facts, not into the statement of the facts themselves. His statements constantly afford a corrective to his judgments, and these statements have on the whole withstood all criticism in point of accuracy. An instructive illustration of this is afforded by the case of Gnaeus Piso, Books II. and III. Tacitus appears himself to have believed that Piso was guilty of the death of Germanicus, and has at any rate by his language so completely impressed this belief upon the world, that most historians accept it as a matter of course ; but his narration of the events affords absolutely no evidence for it.

8. The case of Tiberius differs from that of most "rehabilitations" of historical characters, in the fact that there was a distinct crisis in his life, which made him a tyrant, if he was one. If he had died in the year 29, after a reign of fifteen years, he would have come down to posterity as one of the best of the Roman emperors, — not a faultless man, nor a faultless ruler, but a wise, sagacious, and, on the whole, humane prince. It is just at this date that the work of his eulogist, Velleius Paterculus, closes ; and the eulogy passed upon him by this writer is hardly stronger than the known facts up to that time warrant. Even Tacitus, in summing up his character (VI. 51), admits that down to the death of his mother in 29 he was inter bona malaque mixtus, and that he had succeeded in concealing his faults, occultum ac subdolum fingendis virtutibus, until the death of Drusus in 23.

9. The event, or rather the series of events, crowded into the years 29, 30, and 31, which formed a crisis in the life of the unhappy emperor, was the alleged conspiracy of Agrippina and her sons, rapidly followed by the discovery that the trusted Sejanus was false to him, and by the horrible revelation of the murder of his son Drusus by Sejanus in complicity with Livia, the wife of Drusus. Such a succession of blows as this might well unsettle the moral nature of a young man ; how is it with a man of seventy? Professor Beesly puts the case forcibly and conclusively, as against the imputed change in the character of Tiberius after assuming the purple at fifty-six, against the assumption of Tacitus that a man egregius vita famaue, quoad privatus vel in imperiis sub Augusto fuit, all at once became a hypocrite and a tyrant. "I would put it to you, have you in your own experience found that men come out in an entirely new character after fifty-six?" One can only say "no" to this question, for at fifty-six Tiberius was still in the prime of his powers. But it is not so certain that an old man of seventy, broken in body and spirit, betrayed, disappointed, morbidly brooding in solitude upon his wretchedness, knowing no one whom he could trust, that such a man may not have at least allowed the bad qualities which he had hitherto held in abeyance, to get the mastery over him. And this is what I believe to have been the case with Tiberius.

10. Tiberius was by nature cold, reserved, self-distrustful, stern,—characteristics not in themselves bad, but which can easily be mistaken for jealousy, suspiciousness, and harshness, and which indeed easily pass into these unamiable qualities. The innate liberality, justice, and integrity of his character were obscured in the eyes of superficial observers by these less attractive characteristics, especially when they were contrasted with the popular manners and sunny disposition of his brother Drusus and nephew Germanicus. It may readily be believed that the morbid tendencies of his nature were increased when, on the command of Augustus, he was obliged to put away his much-loved wife Vipsania and marry the haughty and licentious Julia, who disliked and despised him. In a fit of moody impatience and disgust he withdrew from the court, and lived in retirement several years at Rhodes ; and this episode, too, may well have developed still further the unamiable side of his nature. And yet Augustus, alienated from him for a time, recalled him to Rome, and designated him as his successor with marks of high confidence and even with terms of affection (Vale incundissime Tiberi, et feliciter rem gere, Suet. Tib. 21), not without expressions, at the same time, which showed that he recognized in him dangerous elements of character. Tiberius himself seems to have been fully aware of the presence of these evil impulses in his nature, and shrank with what we have no right to call an insincere reluctance from the assumption of absolute power. And yet, during the fifteen years from his accession to his retirement at Capri, it is hard to point out a single act of his which was manifestly unjust and cruel. So well was the worse side of his nature kept under by his better qualities.

II. It is most unfortunate that we are left so much in the dark as to the occurrences of the three eventful years described in the lost chapters of the fifth and sixth books. All we can say is, that when we return to the lucid and eloquent narrative of the historian, the emperor seems like a different man. As to the charges of extreme debauchery, they may be passed over as unlikely or at least exaggerated. Such charges are generally brought against persons who live a secluded life, especially when they are unpopular for other reasons. But I do not see how it is possible to acquit him of the charge of cruelty and tyranny in these last years. It is easy enough to explain away, as Stahr does, individual instances, and to show that the list of known victims, spread over the space of six years, does not after all give a high average. But, after making all allowances, it seems impossible to avoid the conclusion, from the detailed accounts of the historians, and the incidental allusions of other writers, that these six years were a veritable reign of terror. Nor is it possible to vindicate the emperor by throwing the responsibility upon his ministers and the senate. What an absolute ruler permits he performs. The decay of literature at this time is significant. The punishment of Clutorius Priscus (III. 49) and Cremutius Cordus (IV. 34) may be excused, and perhaps justified; but it is none the less true that from this time the free expression of thought is silenced, and creative literature is at an end.

12. The explanation of the change is, I believe, to be found in a morbid apprehension of danger by which his mind was at this time mastered. The plots against his life and crown and the stability of his household,—which he believed without question, whether on good grounds or not,—seem to have thrown him into an unreasoning panic, in which he struck wildly at all from whom his distempered fancy apprehended danger. His was a nature prone to panic, lacking in self-reliance and in moral courage. Suetonius calls him praetrepidus (Tib. 63), and gives several examples of this quality. His own expression, in description of his situation, supum se auribus tenere (Suet. Tib. 25) is well known, and helps to explain his vacillation in accepting the throne. Suetonius tells us further (Tib. 65) that, after the conspiracy of Sejanus, per novem menses non egressus est villa quae vocatur Iovis.

13. Tacitus, like the champions of Tiberius at the present day, finds it impossible to believe that his character really changed in his last years; but while his defenders account for the apparent change by denying the stories to his discredit, the historian explains it by declaring him to have been during all his previous life a hypocrite. This theory is harder of belief than either of the others. It is not easy to believe that these stories of cruelty and tyranny are false or exaggerated; it is not easy to believe that a man's character is radically changed at the age of seventy; but hardest of all is it to believe that his real character was concealed under a cloak of hypocrisy until this age, and that then for the first time he showed himself as he really was. It is not necessary, however, to suppose that his character was radically changed, but its unamiable side may have received a sudden and abnormal development from the shocks given to his moral nature. Not so sudden, however, but that we can trace his deterioration for some years before he became thoroughly demoralized. Tacitus himself, accurate in the observation of facts, although unsound and prejudiced in explaining them, marks clearly enough (VI. 51) the stages of this deterioration.

14. If we read impartially the account of the treason trials under Tiberius, it is plain that Libo in the second book, Silanus in the third, and even Cremutius Cordus and Sabinus in the fourth, were justly punished; while in the miserable affair of Piso the emperor acted with dignity and moderation. But from the death of Drusus (IV. 8, A.D. 23) we mark a gradual change; the emperor is no less just, and perhaps no less merciful, but appears suspicious and ungenerous towards the family of Germanicus (IV. 12), and gradually develops moodiness and bitterness of temper. This is especially apparent after he was made acquainted with the lampoons of Votienus (A.D. 25, IV. 42), which appear to have wounded deeply his proud and sensitive nature. The breach with Agrippina the next year (IV. 53), joined with the solicitations of Sejanus, prompted him to withdraw into that sullen seclusion with which his name is most familiarly associated. But even now, while we cannot acquit him of undue suspiciousness and cruelty, he cannot, at least until after the fall of Sejanus, be charged with positive injustice; his victims appear to have been guilty, even if their punishment was excessive. This deterioration of character showed itself also in other acts. In the early years of his reign he would not have been a party to the trick by which the condemnation of Sabinus was secured (IV. 68); his interference with the action of the senate (VI. 3) is not after the model of his conduct on assuming the throne (see I. 25); his greediness for gain (VI. 19) is in painful contrast with his earlier freedom from covetousness (II. 48; III. 18); while his violent and public abuse of Agrippina and her son Drusus (VI. 25, 24) shows the total loss of the dignified reticence which had once characterized him. Even the infamous delator Fulcinius Trio could charge upon him, fluxam senio mentem (VI. 38), and the words attributed to Arruntius, cum Tiberius post tantam rerum experientiam vi dominationis convulsus et mutatus sit (VI. 48), are no doubt a truthful expression of the way his change in character and administration struck a contemporary.

15. The attitude of Tiberius towards the Delations, or criminal informations brought by individuals, throws a very instructive light upon his character. With these delations are associated the worst abuses of the worst periods of the empire, and they are especially notorious under Tiberius and Domitian. The treason trials of the empire, in their wilful disregard of motives, and their straining to derive condemnatory evidence from indifferent actions or incidents, were as fertile a source of injustice as the trials for constructive treason which have at various times disgraced the administration of English law.<sup>1</sup> Their worst feature, however, was after all not the oppressive procedure of the trial, but the encouragement given to private animosity or greed, through the practice of allowing prosecutions to be inaugurated by private individuals, who were to receive a certain proportion of the fines and confiscations as their reward. That Tiberius insisted strongly upon the necessity of employing and rewarding delations by private persons (I. 72, IV. 30), has been a leading reproach against him. It is not always noticed, however, that he gave his reason for this, in the fact that the delations were an essential part of the machinery for criminal justice, and that without them crimes would go unpunished. In truth, the fault was a fundamental one in the Roman judicial system, and the real short-coming of Tiberius was, not in putting in execution the existing machinery, but in not devising some more efficient machinery.

16. The Roman system of criminal justice, having its source in a time which confused the distinction between public and private wrongs, made no provision for bringing malefactors to justice except in the voluntary activity of individuals. There was no public prosecutor. During the Republic the tribunes of the plebs served to a certain extent as prosecuting officers in offences of a political character; but ordinary crimes, and, after the establishment of the quaestiones perpetuae by Sulla, all classes of crimes, were left to the interest or public spirit of individuals. If individuals did not take them up, they went unpunished. Hence the dangerous resource of inviting individuals to search out and indict criminals, by rewarding them in case of conviction; the result of which was that delation in cases of treason became a regular profession. Tiberius, who, as Merivale points out (Vol. IV. p. 130, chap. 44), was very much of a pedant, and who lacked the originality of mind to devise any substitute for this procedure of the Republic, seems to have believed that the only security for justice was to carry out the laws with the utmost rigor, but to mitigate their severity after conviction by the liberal exercise of his power of pardoning or of commuting sentences (II. 50; III. 18, 51, 69; IV. 30, 66), and by reproving or punishing delators who should be actuated by malice or rapacity (III. 19, 56; IV. 31, 36; VI. 30). We note during his first years a constant effort to moderate the severity to which the senate was disposed. In the last part of his reign he seldom showed this merciful or forgiving spirit, and the mischiefs which are inherent in the system of delations had full scope.

THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

17. The Roman Empire at the accession of Tiberius embraced all the lands in the circuit of the Mediterranean Sea except Mauretania, Thrace, Lycia, and Rhodes. Cappadocia was added to the empire during the reign of Tiberius; these other countries, together with Britain, under Caligula and Claudius. The empire was sharply divided into two portions, — the ruling part, or Rome (now extended so as to comprise the whole of Italy, as well as the Roman colonies and municipia outside of Italy), and the subject part, the provinces. The provinces, twenty-eight in number, were administered by governors sent from Rome with absolute authority over all provincials; it is to be understood, however, that within the borders of nearly every province there were not only communities of Roman citizens, but also cities and principalities which had retained their nominal independence as allies of the Roman people, and that neither of these classes was in law subject to the governor. During the reign of Tiberius the number of provinces was increased to thirty by the annexation of Cappadocia, and the division of Germany into Upper and Lower. Of the twenty-eight provinces, eleven were governed, after the method of the Republic, by proconsuls commissioned by the senate; one, Egypt, was in strictness of speech not a province at all, but a kingdom, of which the emperor was king; the other sixteen were placed under the immediate government of the emperor, who administered them by deputies, legati, clothed with complete governmental authority, as his representatives, or by fiscal agents, procuratores.

18. The following is a classified list of the provinces at the death of Augustus :—

A. SENATORIAL PROVINCES.

I. Governed by proconsules consulares.

1. Asia, the richest and most important of the senatorial provinces, comprising the western coast of Asia Minor, having on its east the provinces of Bithynia, Galatia, and Pamphylia, and the free federal republic of Lycia. The island of Rhodes was also an independent republic.

2. Africa, comprising also a portion of Numidia, conquered by Julius Cæsar. This was the only one of the senatorial provinces which had troops regularly stationed in it. It had one legion, and during the insurrection of Tacfarinas (Books II. and III.) received another.

II. Governed by proconsules prætorii

3. Bithynia.

4. Cyprus.

5. Creta et Cyrene.

6. Achaia: Greece proper, including Thessaly and Epirus.

- 7. Macedonia: extending west to the Adriatic, and north to the mountains separating it from Moesia.
- 8. Sicilia.
- 9. Sardinia et Corsica.
- 10. Gallia Narbonensis: extending from the Alps to the Pyrenees, and embracing the valley of the Rhone.
- 11. Baetica: southern Spain, formerly known as Hispania Ulterior.

B. IMPERIAL PROVINCES.

I. Governed by legati consulares.

- 12. Syria: including at this time Judea; extending from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates.
- 13. Moesia: the country between the Danube and the Hæmus Mountains (Balkan).
- 14. Pannonia: the region west of the great bend of the Danube.
- 15. Illyricum: afterwards known as Dalmatia, the country upon the eastern coast of the Adriatic.
- 16. Germania: stretching from the Rhine to the Elbe. The defeat of Varus had forced the Romans to evacuate most of this territory, and it was now placed with the Tres Galliae under Germanicus. It was divided into two military districts, which were afterwards erected into the independent provinces of Germania Superior and Inferior, with their headquarters at Moguntiacum (Menz) and Colonia Agrippina (Cologne).
- 17. Tarraconensis: the northern half of Spain, formerly known as Hispania Citerior.

II. Governed by legati praetorii.

- 18. Cilicia. Usually at this time under the governor of Syria.
- 19. Pamphylia.
- 20. Galatia.
- 21. Aquitania. — 22. Gallia Lugdunensis. — 23. Gallia Belgica. These three provinces, known as the Tres Galliae, had been conquered by Julius Caesar, and were now, together with Germany, placed under the command of Germanicus.
- 24. Lusitania: the modern Portugal.

III. Governed by procuratores, of equestrian rank.

- 25. Noricum.
- 26. Raetia, including Vindelicia.
- 27. Alpes maritimae: a small district on the coast, between Italy and Gallia Narbonensis.

IV. Governed by a praefectus.

28. Aegyptus: really ranking as a kingdom, of which the emperor was king.

19. The power in virtue of which the emperor was invested with the government of his provinces was the imperium proconsulare, which was conferred upon him at the beginning of his reign, and carried with it full military and judicial authority. In the last century of the Republic the consuls, during their term of office, were required to remain in Rome (that is, Italy), within the limits of which they were forbidden to exercise any but civil authority; they could not command armies or pass sentence of death in Italy unless by express permission of the senate. But when, after the expiration of their terms of office, they went into the provinces as proconsuls, the full imperium revived, and they governed the provinces with the irresponsible authority of kings. The dignity of consul, therefore, and the consular power, when conferred upon the emperor, gave him only the exercise of civil administration. The proconsular power enabled him to command armies and administer criminal justice in all parts of the empire except Italy. All the armies of the empire were under his sole rule; for the so-called senatorial provinces were the old, well-ordered parts of the empire, where no troops were required, except in the province of Africa, the proconsul of which had a single legion put at his disposal by the emperor. The title of the emperor, as invested with proconsular power, and thus exercising sole military authority, was imperator, emperor.

20. The Roman legions were stationed exclusively in the provinces, and the proconsular imperium was properly limited to the provinces, although the presence of a large body-guard, the praetorian cohorts, in Italy, and in the reign of Tiberius concentrated in Rome, gave the emperor practically as real a military authority in Italy as in the provinces. The emperor held the consulship from time to time like other citizens; but his civil authority was regularly exercised in virtue of the tribunicia potestas, which was conferred upon him for life, and gave him the powers of the tribunate without the limitations to which this magistracy was subject. The tribunician power, making his person sacred, giving him an unlimited right to prohibit the actions of other magistrates, and making him in a peculiar sense the representative of the people, was the consummation of his authority, being always bestowed after the proconsular power. As pontifex maximus too he possessed the entire control of the organized religion of the state, and the essential powers of the censorship were placed in his hands under the title regimen morum. The title which described the emperor as the possessor of this bundle of powers, military and civil, was princeps,<sup>1</sup> prince; and this is the term usually employed by Tacitus.

21. All the powers thus gathered in the hands of the prince were recognized powers of Roman magistrates. The Empire as a system of government did not, in its first years, contain a single principle which had not already existed under the Republic. What was novel was the combining of all these powers in the hands of one man as a permanent possession. The prince was a magistrate, created by law, and amenable to law; the new magistracy fitted perfectly into the republican scheme. But it was an assemblage of powers so extraordinary and controlling that its possessor was in practice raised far above every other person or body of persons in the state. (See the interesting letter of Tiberius, III. 53.) It may be compared to the dictatorship of the early Republic, which consisted in the bestowal of extraordinary power upon one man, to meet an extraordinary crisis. The crisis had now become chronic, and the dictatorship was made permanent. (See Seeley's first lecture on Roman Imperialism.)

<sup>1</sup> This title of prince is usually associated with the republican dignity of princeps senatus. According to Mommsen, however (Römisches Staatsrecht, II. 734), he was rather chief of the citizens, der gewichtigste und angesehenste Bürger; the title princeps senatus was never given to the emperor until the time of Pertinax (id., III. 971).

22. Besides the emperor, there was no real possessor of power except the senate. The people, the ultimate source of authority in the Republic, were stripped of all effective share in the government; the emperor, by virtue of his tribunician power, may be regarded as embodying in himself the popular element of the constitution. The elections of magistrates were now mostly transferred to the senate (I. 15), while the edicts of the princes and, by degrees, the ordinances of the senate acquired the force of law. The constitution of the empire is described by Mommsen as a Dyarchy, in which the powers of government were shared between the senate and the emperor. But in a partnership like this, in which the exclusive military power and supreme administrative authority were vested in one of the two partners, nothing could prevent absolute power from eventually centring in his hands — a result which was hastened by the servility and obsequiousness of the senate. It was a real monarchy, although obscured under the forms of a republic.

23. As in the Republic, the magistrates were the organs of the senate, being now in a considerable part appointed by that body. The administrative authority of the emperor within the city was exercised through a body of officers, præfecti and curatores, appointed by him and responsible solely to him; and it followed as a matter of course that these officers soon crowded the regular magistrates out of the chief part of their functions. Two of these præfects by the nature of their duties became the leading officers in the state; the præfectus prætorio, who, as commander of the body-guard, exercised chief military authority in Italy; and the præfectus urbi, who, in the reign of Tiberius, was the chief municipal officer. The præfect of the city exercised criminal justice in the name of the emperor, concurrently with the quaestiones perpetuae, presided over by the prætors; but his authority was not long in superseding the quaestiones, which before the end of the second century had disappeared entirely. The prætors who exercised civil jurisdiction, the urbanus and peregrinus, continued for a while to perform the same functions; the others attended to financial matters, or presided over the games. It was important that the magistracies should be regularly filled in order that there might be a sufficient number of consulares and praetorii to hold proconsulships and other offices held only by persons of this rank. But all the magistracies became more and more merely formal and nominal. Tiberius is more than once spoken of by Mommsen as the one who brought the monarchy to completion—der Vollender der Monarchie. He received as a perpetual grant the imperium which Augustus received only for ten years at a time; he systematically maintained and enlarged the privileges of the senate, and its share in the government; while he as systematically ignored the powers of the popular assemblies, and reduced the republican magistracies to a mere shadow.

24. Wholly independent of the powers of the emperor was the divinity with which his office was invested. This is something entirely different from the consecration which converts a king of England into "his sacred majesty"; nor was it in any way connected with the sanctity that attached to his person in virtue of his tribunician power. It was an outgrowth of that sense of the immanence of deity which led the ancients to recognize the action of a divine spirit, numen, in every object and operation of nature; which regarded the entrance upon the future life as the assumption of a divine nature (see Cic. Cat. Mai. 22, 81). Great and noble souls were by this acquisition of divinity placed directly among the greater gods, under the title of demigods and heroes: so it was with Hercules and with Romulus (Hor. Od. III. 3), and with Julius Cæsar, to whom a temple was erected immediately after his death. As this was not a change of nature, but only the passage into a new phase of life, it was not hard to accept the beneficent ruler while living upon the earth as a present god—deus, deus ille, Menaka! And as the native religion of Rome had now lost much of its vitality, it is not strange that the worship of Augustus rapidly became the most wide-spread and popular cult within the bounds of the empire. Augustus, during his lifetime, shrank from a thorough-going acceptance of the divine honors offered to him, and required them to be associated with the Genius of Rome. After his death his worship was celebrated without stint or reserve. Tiberius furthered the worship of Augustus in every way ; but his sober good sense and clearness of vision made him impatient at any effort to bring himself or any other living members of the family within the sacred group. His successors were less diffident, and even as early as Caligula we meet with the grossest and most shameless assertions of divinity.

25. The sacred character thus described belonged to the ruler as such, as incorporating in himself the dignity and sanctity of the State. Of a different nature was the formal apotheosis, resting upon a decree of the senate, by which the deceased prince was not merely recognized as a divine being, but was elevated to a place among the celestial gods. To those who had received this honor the title divus was given, and it is to be noticed that a sense of propriety withheld it from all who were plainly unworthy of it. Of the emperors of the first century it was bestowed only upon Julius, Augustus, Claudius (on the whole a worthy prince, although there may have been here a touch of sarcasm), Vespasian and Titus ; also upon some female members of their families. Each consecrated emperor had his flamen or special priest, and for their worship special colleges were organized. The first establishment of such a college is described in the present work (I. 54) ; its members, at first called Sodales Augustales, were known as Augustales Claudiales after the cult of the emperor Claudius was joined with that of Augustus.<sup>1</sup> The worship of the emperor rapidly spread in the provinces, and became the centre of organized provincial life. In this cult Rome was regularly associated with Augustus, and no very nice distinction appears to have been made between divus Augustus and the reigning emperor, who also was lawfully known as Augustus.<sup>1</sup>

26. It was a matter of course that some of the sacredness of the present deity attached to the members of his family. Augustus, as adopted son of Julius Cæsar, called himself Divi filius; and it may be that here is found in part the explanation of the contempt which Julia, daughter of Augustus, felt for her husband Tiberius (I. 53), for Tiberius was not as yet adopted into the imperial family.

The relations between the several members of this family are shown in the table on page xxix. The following (besides Tiberius) appear prominently in the Annals :

a. Livia, the mother of the emperor, was a woman of great personal beauty, and an ambitious, domineering spirit; apparently not one who would scruple long at any means to secure her ends. She exercised a great ascendancy over her husband, and expected to exercise the same over her son; and nothing in the history of Tiberius is more noteworthy than the effort he made to preserve the due balance between the dutiful affection for his mother, characteristic of Roman family life, and his determination to keep the reins of government in his own hands (see I. 72; II. 34; III. 17. 64; IV. 57; V. 1).

b. Germanicus, son of Drusus, and adopted by his uncle Tiberius. A brave, honorable man, of genial temper and great personal popularity. A good but not a great commander. His early death prevents us from knowing with certainty what his capacities were.

c. Drusus, son of Tiberius, a man of strong will and the capacity to command. He, too, died young, and his death is one of the most pathetic incidents in the narration. If he had lived, it seems certain that he would have been an able and energetic ruler; but the sternness of temper which in Tiberius developed into cruelty only at the very close of his life, was a predominant characteristic of his son from the first, and would probably have made him a tyrant.

d. Agrippina, daughter of Marcus Agrippa and Julia, and wife of Germanicus. A woman of high spirit and ambition, and of unblemished personal character. It is impossible for us to know whether her ambition really carried her to the point of treason, but Tiberius believed it did, and her life ended in disappointment and misery.

e. Antonia Minor, daughter of Mark Antony, the triumvir, and Octavia, sister of Augustus; wife of the elder Drusus and mother of Germanicus. By personal beauty, dignity and purity of character, and an abstinence from intrigue which distinguished her from Livia and Agrippina, she deserves to rank as perhaps the noblest example of her age of a typical Roman matron.

f. Of the children of Germanicus and Agrippina we know too little to judge, except of the infamous Caligula and Agrippina. Nero, the eldest, would seem to have been relatively free from the vices of the others; but he was guilty of great indiscretion (IV. 59), was implicated in his mother's treason (or suspicion of treason), and perished untimely.

THE LANGUAGE AND STYLE OF TACITUS.

27. The student who passes abruptly from the writings of the classical age to those of Tacitus, finds himself dealing with a vocabulary and forms of speech very different from those to which he is used. The new author seems very difficult at first, and indeed his writings can never be called easy. But to a greater degree than in most authors it is found that the difficulties consist in peculiarities of style, which soon become familiar, and cease to give trouble. These peculiarities of Tacitus belong partly to his age, but are chiefly characteristics of his own style.

28. The Latinity of the so-called Silver Age presents no more contrasts with that of the Augustan Age than may be expected in the case of any healthy language in the same space of time. There were about one hundred and fifty years between Cicero and Tacitus, a longer distance of time than that which separates us from Burke, Johnson, and Gibbon. And the change in the language, as shown by a comparison of Cicero with Quintilian or the younger Pliny, was certainly no greater than the English language has suffered in this interval. And the change has been very much of the same general character,—a change in the direction of simplicity and naturalness. The elaborate periods of Cicero may be compared to the ponderous and sonorous sentences of Johnson ; the easy flow of Quintilian to the lucidity and elegance of Prescott. The style of the Silver Age was more colloquial — men wrote more as they talked ; just as is the case with the English of the present day, as compared with that of a century ago.

29. But along with this revolution in the structural features of style, there were changes in vocabulary and syntax which partially obscure the result just pointed out, by cultivating forms of expression and construction which lacked the simple dignity of earlier writers. In other terms, while the flow of words followed a more natural order, corresponding more closely to the natural order of thought, the diction became more strained and artificial. There was of course a constant flux in the vocabulary — old words were dropped and new ones adopted. The acquisitions were from two principal sources : the Greek language, and the usages of the poets ; and from these sources were derived not only new words and new meanings of old words, but, although not so abundantly, new forms of construction. The expressions borrowed from the Greek stand in the Latinity of the Silver Age about as the contributions of French and German stand in the English language, partly assimilated, partly still regarded with a certain degree of suspicion. It is the influence of the poets that is chiefly seen in these writers, especially in Tacitus. It is to be noted that all the Latin poets of high merit and great popularity are later than Cicero — later, at least, than the period in which he formed his style. Their influence was marked upon Livy, who was almost their contemporary : upon Tacitus it was powerful. The same tendency towards a figurative and brilliant style was fostered by the political situation.<sup>1</sup> Except in the courts of law there was no longer any genuine debate, and of course no genuine oratory. The student was trained on artificial rhetorical exercises, which

— as there was no substance of political discussion — necessarily took shape in florid verbiage.

30. As to syntactical changes, it is enough to quote Dräger's remark in relation to the history of the Latin language, that "in the course of nearly eight hundred years it experienced relatively slight changes in its grammatical construction." A few such changes will be pointed out in the notes.

31. The larger part of the peculiarities of Tacitus are his own, not those of his age. He has the characteristics of his age, but they are so inconspicuous in comparison with his individual characteristics as to be almost obscured; he is hardly less strongly contrasted with Pliny and Quintilian than with Cicero and Sallust. If his style does not appear simple and colloquial like theirs, it is because he carried into it not the characteristics of every-day life and conversation, but the qualities of the forensic orator. Furneaux remarks: "The special qualities of his style are no doubt due, in no small measure, to his professional career. As the first forensic orator of the day, we might assume that he had perfected such gifts as were prescribed to a pleader by the prevailing fashion; and he has himself described to us the difference between the rolling periods of Ciceronian eloquence and the style demanded in his own age, when jury and listeners soon wearied of a long harangue, were impatient of the speaker's preamble, and recalled him peremptorily from a digression."

32. This suggestion does not confine itself to his literary style alone, but to his style of thought and manner of presenting his theme. When we consider that Tacitus was not a literary man, but an advocate by profession, we understand better the tone of partisanship which we meet in so many parts of his work. Tacitus was as far removed as possible from the objective standard of historical composition which rules at the present day. He did not consider it his duty in controverted points to present both sides impartially, but to present his own side; and when his own mind was made up, he could not see that the facts, as he gave them himself, did not, as we can see now, always prove his point. In this, as we have said, there appears no trace of insincerity, no attempt to conceal or distort the facts. But his conception of the duties of an historian, was that of his own age, different from ours. I cannot agree with the special defenders of Tiberius, who act as if the only way to vindicate their hero was to impugn the motives of his historian. Tacitus no doubt formed his opinions from a conscientious study of the evidence, even if his judgment may have been warped by his preconceived ideas. But this once done, he ceases to act as a judge, and appears as an advocate, urging his case with an intensity of conviction and a burning eloquence that have seldom been surpassed. He writes as an advocate, but as one who appeals, not as one who aims to convince.

33. He is not in any sense of the word a philosophical historian, even in the sense of tracing the relations of cause and effect in the field of political and domestic affairs. He is not to be classed with Thucydides or Sallust; as great, perhaps, but not of the same order. It is as a painter with words that he excels. No historian surpasses him, perhaps none equals him, in the graphic power of depicting a scene or an action in few words; and when to this picturesqueness we have added the intensity of feeling, the ethical passion, that dominates him, we have a writer who, for instructiveness and tonic power, has no rival, certainly in Roman literature. These qualities make him the most dramatic of historians, the most powerful in the delineation of character. To quote Macaulay<sup>1</sup>: "In the delineation of character" Tacitus is unrivalled among historians, and has very few superiors among dramatists and novelists. By a delineation of character we do not mean the practice of drawing up epigrammatic catalogues of good and bad qualities, and appending them to the names of eminent men. No writer, indeed, has done this more skilfully than Tacitus; but this is not his peculiar glory. All the persons who occupy a large space in his works have an individuality of character which seems to pervade all their words and actions. We know them as if we had lived with them."

34. This dominant characteristic as an historian serves to explain one of his most conspicuous characteristics of style, — fondness for poetical words and phrases, and especially his close relation to Vergil. Vergil, too, was a writer of a lofty ethical tone, and was evidently a favorite with Tacitus, who, as has been often pointed out, copies freely his phrases and turns of speech. So marked is his predilection for poetical words and phrases, that it is hard to say whether his style borrows more from the poets or from the habits of speech of the forensic orator. On the whole, it is only in his diction that he has borrowed from the poets; his abruptness and compression of style, his sententiousness and earnestness, are qualities that he has brought from the court-room. This explains a tenderness of feeling which often goes to the length of sentimentality; in treating of Tiberius, for example, he persistently depicts stern justice as harshness, economy as niggardliness (II. 38), modesty as meanness of spirit (IV. 38), and a peaceful and self-contained policy as a degenerate temper (II. 26; IV. 32).

35. The grammatical and stylistic peculiarities of Tacitus are for the most part such as show the influence of the poets on the working of a poetic temperament. If, as has been said above, the student who passes from Cicero to Tacitus meets with much that is strange and difficult, the student of Vergil finds himself often on familiar ground. Most of these peculiarities will be pointed out in the notes; but it will be of service to enumerate here a few of the most striking and characteristic of them, passing over in general those which may be called regular if unusual forms of expression. It should be noted that most of the usages here pointed out are rather characteristics than peculiarities of Tacitus; that is, they are found also in other writers, but are especially common with him.

a. The fondness for abstract nouns, whether as substitutes for concrete, or in the plural, thus turning them into concretes. This is one of the usages which mark most distinctly the transition to modern turns of expression; for one of the chief points of difference between the ancients and moderns consists in the choice of concrete and abstract forms of speech; e.g. nonanus, sc. miles, the soldiers of the ninth legion, I. 30. 4; matrimonia so pecunias hostium, the wives and moneys of the enemy, II. 13. 3; qui infamias subiere, who underwent infamy [on different occasions], IV. 33. 4.

Sometimes, on the other hand, Tacitus uses a concrete expression where we should expect an abstract; e.g. specie recusantis, with a show of rejecting, I. 3. 2, where the participle serves the purpose of a gerund.

b. The use of simple verbs where the prose writers employed compounds is especially characteristic of the Annals. The greater precision of the compounds fitted them for the uses of prose speech, while the poets, whom Tacitus here imitates, appear to have found a certain freedom and picturesqueness in the simple forms: e.g. posuit for proposuit, put forth, I. 7. 5; verasa for eversa, overturned, II. 42. 4; firmabat for confirmabat, strengthened, I. 71. 5.

Compound verbs are often used with an accusative where the rule would require a preposition or a dative; e.g. pugnam aut vincula elapsi, having escaped from battle or prison, I. 61. 6.

c. Also borrowed from the poets is the frequent omission of the copula. A characteristic illustration of this is found in the second chapter of the first book, where postquam is followed by arma [erant], oppressus [est] and reliquus [erat].

d. The construction of the partitive genitive is carried to a great length, particularly as depending upon abstract nouns or the neuter (usually plural) of adjectives used abstractly, and even masculine and feminine adjectives; e.g. uligines paludum, marshy swamps, I. 17. 5; subiecta vallium, the valleys below, I. 65. 1; (but prominentia montium, the spurs of the mountains, II. 16. 2;) tacita suspicionum, silent suspicions, IV. 41. 1; lubrico paludum, in the slippery marsh, I. 65. 6 ; levis cohortium, the light cohorts, III. 39. 1.

c. The genitive of reference with adjectives is very common ; e.g. furandi melior, better in pilfering, III. 74. 1 ; occultos consilii, reticent about plans, VI. 36. 3.

f. Tacitus shares with the poets a fondness for the dative case, especially the dative of service or purpose (very common in the gerundive), of agency, and the dative as substituted for ad with the accusative ; thus we find it not infrequently as end of motion ; e.g. Gaius Caesar componendae Armeniae deligitur, Gaius Caesar is selected to put in order the affairs of Armenia, II. 4. 2 ; qui tributo aderant, who had come for tribute, IV. 72. 5 ; claris scriptoribus, by renowned writers, I. 1. 4 ; centurionem morti deponit, it [the legion] demands the centurion to put him to death, I. 23. 6 ; altius consuetantibus, in the eye of those who would see under the surface, I. 32. 7 ; paxi firmator, confirmer of peace, II. 46. 6.

g. Purpose or effect is also frequently expressed by an accusative in apposition with a clause of action ; e.g. manus instantes, causam discordiae, threatening with their hands, a cause of discord, I. 27. 1.

h. The use of the accusative, ablative, and locative to express local relations of rest or of motion to or from a place, used regularly only with towns and small islands, is extended by the poets and by Tacitus to the largest islands, and even to countries, and other names of places ; e.g. remeantem Armenia, on his way home from Armenia, I. 3. 3 ; Aegyptum proficiscitur, he proceeds to Egypt, II. 59. 1 ; campo aut litore, on plain or shore, IV. 74. 6.

i. In the use of prepositions his fondness for figurative expressions is very marked ; e.g. apud for cum, and in the sense of 'in' ; inter like an ablative absolute or a clause ; citra for sine (not in the Annals) ; circa and super, meaning "in respect to" ; per, to denote manner ; iuxta, to denote resemblance ; in, to express purpose or result ; e.g. apud Nolam, at

Nola, I. 5. 5; inter temulentos, while they were drunk, I. 50. 7; per ferociam, impatiently, II. 17. 1; in speciem ac terrorem, for display and terror, II. 6. 3; circa bonas artes, in respect to good practices, XI. 15. 1.

He is also fond of rare prepositions (in the Annals, however, only simul), and of placing the preposition after the word which it governs (anastrophe); e.g. Magnetibus simul, together with the Magnesians, IV. 55. 3.

j. In respect to conjunctions, his principal peculiarity is the frequency of asyndeton; e.g. clamore talis, by shouts and weapons, IV. 48. 4; socios regna, allied nations and kings, III. 55. 3.

Notice, too, the fondness for such variety in combination as: Tiberii Gaique et Olandii ac Neronis, of Tiberius, Gaius, Claudius, and Nero, I. 1. 5.

Other usages of conjunctions unfamiliar to the student of earlier Latin are donec, (until), and quamquam, almost invariably with the subjunctive; quamquam also without a finite verb; quamvis equivalent to quamquam; quotiens (whenever); quatenus, equivalent to quoniam; tamquam and similar particles to express an alleged reason; perinde quam; e.g. quamquam multi occidissent, although many had fallen, IV. 73. 6; (but quamquam id quoque dictum est, although that too was said, I. 76. 7); donec detererentur, until they were deterred, I. 1. 4; (but donec fama eadem tulit, until the same report brought word, I. 5. 6); quamquam exercitu contracto, although his army had been got together, I. 48. 1; quamvis domus delaberetur, although the house was falling, II. 38. 10; tamquam auctus liberis Drusus domum Germanici magis argueret, because [as they said] the birth of children to Drusus was another blow to the house of Germanicus, II. 84. 3; quotiens oculos ad multitudinem retulerant, whenever they turned their eyes to the crowd, I. 25. 2.

h. The historical infinitive, though not peculiar to Tacitus, is found very abundantly in his writings; peculiar to him is its use in subordinate temporal clauses; e.g. Ubi Artabanus minitari, when Artabanus threatened, II. 4. 4.

He is very fond of stringing a number of historical infinitives, one after another, in the way of enumeration; e.g. lassivire miles, discordare, pessimi cuiusque sermonibus probare aures, etc., the soldiers fell into lawlessness and disorder, lent their ears to the talk of every mischief-maker, etc., I. 16. 3.

l. The complementary infinitive is common after verbs and adjectives where earlier prose writers would have used a subordinate clause or a gerund; e.g. parfringere ini, attempting to burst through, I. 64. 1; dato sacerdotibus . . . vera discernere, the priests being authorized to distinguish the genuine, VI. 12. 4.

m. In clauses of comparison he commonly omits the correlative eo or tanto, and often uses a positive instead of a comparative in one or both of the clauses; e.g. claris maioribus quam vetustis, ancestors rather distinguished than ancient, IV. 61. 1; quanto incantius efferverat, paucientia patiens, the more indiscreetly he had boiled over with rage, the more patient when his anger was over, I. 74. 7.

n. In the gerund and gerundive there is great freedom in the use of the genitive; e.g. cognoscendae antiquitatis, for the purpose of studying antiquity, II. 59. 1; tuendae libertatis et firmandae concordiae, for the purpose of protecting liberty and establishing harmony, III. 27. 1.

o. There is great freedom also in the use of the participle, especially in the ablative neuter, used absolutely with a word understood, or with a clause or phrase; e.g. concedente, sc. eo, with his permission, VI. 16. 5; addito acutiorum esse, adding that it was sharper, I. 35. 6.

Another common construction is the omission, in ablative absolute, of the subject when it is antecedent to a relative; e.g. provisis quas tempus monebat, having made provision of such things as the exigency demanded, I. 5. 6.

p. Very characteristic also, and conducive to brevity, is the use of the participles (principally in perfect passive), both absolute and agreeing with the subject, to connect one clause with another, sometimes co-ordinated in sense with an infinitive, where the English would use a succession of verbs; e.g. posito triumviri nomine consulem se ferens . . . insurgere paulatim, he laid aside the title of triumvir, appeared as consul, and gradually rose in power, I. 2. 1; Quintilium Varum . . . cernere . . . visus est, non tamen obsecutus et manum intendentis reppulisse, it appeared to him that he saw Quintilius Varus, but yet did not follow him, and repelled the hand which he stretched out to him, I. 65. 2.

q. The combination of a substantive with a participle, adjective, or other substantive, where the English would use an abstract or verbal noun, or a clause, is found in Livy and other historians, but is peculiarly common in Tacitus; e.g. cum occisus dictator Caesar aliis pessimum, aliis pulcherrimum facinus videretur, when some thought the slaying of the dictator Caesar a wicked, others a noble deed, I. 8. 7; exemplum atrox, reus pater, accusator filius, a horrible incident — that a father was on trial, his son the accuser, IV. 28. 1.

r. Nothing is more characteristic of Tacitus than the neglect of concinnity, or uniformity and parallelism of construction. While the early writers regularly aimed to express co-ordinate ideas by similar expressions, Tacitus, in his morbid straining after variety, appears on the other hand to have purposely avoided uniformity of expression; e.g. per acies aut proscriptione, in battle or by proscription, I. 2. 1; dextro lateri . . . in laevum, on the right and left flank, I. 64. 8; consuit comitia habenda utque legionum legati iam tum praetores destinarentur, he proposed that the election should be held and that the commanders of the legions should be immediately appointed to the praetorship, II. 36. 1; plebe valida vel cum patres pollerent, when the plebs or the Senate was strong, IV. 33. 2. s. As purely Greek or poetic constructions may be instanced: immutum fixumque Tiberio fuit, it was immovably fixed in the mind of Tiberius, I. 47. 1; ut quibusque bellum invitis aut cupientibus erat, according as each was opposed to war or desired it, I. 59. 1; falsa exterritum, terrified without reason, IV. 28. 3; minor quadringentorum milium, less than 400,000, IV. 63. 2. See also b, c, f, h.

2. Many words are used only by Tacitus, and others only by him in a certain meaning, e.g. finire, die, VI. 50. 9; inturbidus, undisturbed, III. 52. 1; circumflui, surrounded by, VI. 37. 4.

As the style of Tacitus exaggerates all the characteristics of the Latinity of the Silver Age, so his style in the Annals, his latest work, pushes his own peculiarities to their extreme. It is in this work that his harshness and crabbedness of style are found in their fullest development. Some sentences seem like mere strings of disconnected words, the relation of which to one another can only be discovered by assiduous study and analysis. The Annals stands to the Dialogus, in respect to style, very much as Carlyle's Frederick the Great to his Life of Sterling.

AB EXCESSU DIVI AUGUSTI

LIBER I.

Urbem Romam a principio reges habuere; libertatem et consulatum L. Brutus instituit. Dictaturae ad tempus sumebantur; neque decemviralis potestas ultra biennium, neque tribunorum militum consulare ius diu valuit. Non Cinnae, non Sullae longa dominatio; et libertatem et consulatum: the republic, the second period of Roman history, extending from B.C. 509 to the establishment of the principatus by Augustus, B.C. 27. The following magistracies are named as temporary interruptions of the libertas et consulatus.

1. Urbem . . . habuere: these words form a hexameter verse. Such verses, occurring in prose, were considered faulty by the ancients; nevertheless, the measured rhythm of this sentence affords a stately and worthy introduction to the great history. Livy, too, began with a rhythmical passage, — facturusne operae pretium sim — and Quintilian (IX. 4. 74) remarks that he could not have changed the order of these words without weakening the sentence.

2. ad tempus, temporarily (not to exceed six months); that is, to meet special emergencies. Notice the force of the imperfect, sumebantur.

ultra biennium: in fact, the Decemvirs held their office for more than two years and a half (from May 15, B.C. 451, to Dec. 13, 449). Only two years, however, were legitimate rule, potestas. The third year Livy calls them privati pro decemviris, and adds regnum haud dubie videri (III. 38).

consulare ius: the office of military tribune with consular power is first mentioned B.C. 445; from this time until B.C. 408 tribunes alternated irregularly with consuls; from B.C. 408 until 367 military tribunes were elected every year except two, when there were consuls, and five years in which no magistrates were elected.

3. Cinnae . . . Sullae: Cinna was consul four years in succession, B.C. 87 to 84; Sulla was made perpetual dictator B.C. 82, and laid down his office in 79. The word dominatio, used to designate their despotic authority, is contrasted with the constitutional potestas of the 5 gliscente adulatione deterrerentur. Tiberii Gaique et Claudii ac Neronis res, florentibus ipsis ob metum falsae, postquam occiderant, recentibus odiis compositae sunt.

 6 Inde consilium mihi pauca de Augusto et extrema decemvirs and ius of the military tribunes, as well as with the personal potentia of the first triumvirate, the irregular military power, arma, of the second, and the legally recognized military authority, imperium, of the empire. No doubt, also, Tacitus, here as elsewhere, sought to avoid tautology by the use of synonymous terms.

potentia . . . arma: the so-called triumvirate of Pompey, Crassus, and Caesar (B.C. 60) was simply a coalition of party-leaders, which established a potentia resting upon the personal ability or influence of its members: this power shortly fell to Caesar. The Second Triumvirate, of Lepidus, Antonius, and Caesar (Octavianus), was a commission rei publicae constituendae formally established by law, Nov. 27, B.C. 43, for a period of five years. It was then extended by the triumvirs by their own authority for five years longer, after which time, civil war having broken out between them, they continued their commands without formal authority. Lepidus was forced to submit to Caesar B.C. 36; Antony, in 31.

nomine principis: this is the correct name of the new dignity established B.C. 27, when Caesar (Octavianus) laid down his extraordinary powers, received the name of Augustus, and entered upon his new office. See 9. 6: non regno tamen neque dictatura, sed principis nomine, constitutam rem publicam.

4. sed: there is an ellipsis here: (these early times deserve an historian,) but they have already received worthy treatment.

veteris . . . adversa: the times of the kingdom and the republic.

claris scriptoribus: Intr. 35 f. temporibus . . . dicendis: dative after defuere.

decora ingenia: especially Livy, whose history ended at the death of Drusus, B.C. 9. Also Asinius Pollio, Crematius Cordus (IV. 34), and others.

deterrerentur: Intr. 35 f.

5. Tiberii, etc.: these are the reigns embraced in the present work — heretofore they have received no impartial treatment.

que . . . et . . . ac: an arbitrary confusion in the use of the conjunctions, common in Tacitus. Intr. 35 f.

falsae, which had been falsified. recentibus odiis, while the hatred against them was fresh.

6. pauca . . . et extrema: a few of the closing events only, because the greater part of his reign had tradere, mox Tiberii principatum et cetera, sine ira et studio, quorum causas procul habeo.

Postquam Bruto et Cassio caesis nulla iam publica arma, Pompeius apud Siciliam oppressus, exutoque Lepido, interfecto Antonio ne Iulianis quidem partibus nisi Caesar dux reliquus, posito triumviri nomine already found worthy historians. et is here emphatic: and those, too, the last.

cetera, the rest, i.e. the events which followed, ending with the death of Nero, at which point the Histories of Tacitus begin.

ira et studio: prejudice, either against or for.

2. postquam, etc.: in this long and involved sentence the principal verbs are the historical infinitives insurgere and trahere; the force of the postquam continues through reliquus [erat], and ferens agrees with the subject (understood) of insurgere, referring to Caesar. Notice also the characteristic use of the participle to express the relation of a subordinate clause (Intr. 35 e), the omission of the copula (id. r), and the constant change of construction (id. r).

Bruto et Cassio caesia, etc.: Brutus and Cassius slew themselves after their defeat at Philippi, B.C. 42; Sextus Pompeius was defeated at Mylae, near Sicily (apud Siciliam), B.C. 36, and soon after put to death; the same year Lepidus was deprived of all power, but was suffered to live in private life, still holding the dignity of pontifex maximus, until B.C. 12, when he died. The two remaining triumvirs soon fell out; Mark Antony was defeated at Actium, B.C. 31, and the next year put himself to death.

nulla . . . arma: this was the end of the republic,—the younger Pompey fought for himself rather than for the Senate. "Ce ne furent plus les soldats de la république, mais de Sylla, de Marius, de Pompée, de César." Montesquieu, Considerations.

ne Iulianis quidem partibus: the leaders of the opposite party—Brutus, Cassius, the Pompeys—had perished before. Now, by the death of Antony, the party of Caesar, too, was reduced to a single leader.

Caesar: Gaius Octavius (the emperor Augustus), great-nephew of Julius Caesar, was adopted by him, and took his name, Gaius Julius Caesar. To distinguish him from his great-uncle, he is commonly known as Octavianus; in his own time, however, he was simply Gaius Caesar.

posito triumviri nomine: see note on potentia, 1. 3. Augustus never formally laid down his authority until B.C. 27. He was triumvir from 42 to 33, consul in the year 31, and every year after until 23. For the year 32, therefore, he had no legal authority, unless as triumvir. Mommsen, therefore (Staatsrecht, II. 676), concludes that he continued to act as triumvir after the second term had expired, and that it was only by an afterthought that, in the Monumentum Ancyranum (4. 1) he says, sexvires tresviri duo (cf. Sueton. Oct. 27; triumviratum rei publicae constituendae per decem annos administravit). According to Mommsen, an officer appointed for revising the constitution was not held to any term: certainly Antony did not lay down his office at the end of 33, and was never accused of usurpation for it.

consulem se ferens et ad tuendam plebem tribunicio iure contentum, ubi militem donis, populum annona, cunctos dulcedine otii pellexit, insurgere paulatim, munia senatus magistratuum legum in se trahere, nullo adversante, cum ferocissimi per acies aut proscriptione cecidissent, ceteri nobilium, quanto quis servitio promp-

The office was created, in conformity with an ancient custom of vesting full constitutive as well as governmental powers in a single man or a board, for the purpose of regulating the constitution after the disorders of civil war, and this purpose was expressed in the title triumvir rei publicae constituendae. In like manner Sulla, after the first civil war, B.C. 82, was made dictator rei publicae constituendae. As a matter of course, the triumvirs received the full imperium.

consulem se ferens: implying a certain ostentation in the use of the republican name.

tribunicio iure: Intr. 20. The tribunician authority (summi fastigii vocabulum, III. 56) was given to him B.C. 36. This was the foundation of his office upon its civil side, as the pro-consular power was upon the military side. By it the person of the emperor was made inviolable, sacrosanctus, and through the ius auxilii, which was the starting-point of the power of the tribunes, he was the formal representative and defender of the common people, thus continuing the traditions of the Giacchi, Marius, and Caesar. This office also gave authority to convoke the Senate and the Comitia.

contentum: he rejected the titles of king and dictator.

donis: bounties in money and land. (See note on divisiones agrorum, 10. 1.) The bounties in land were in the form of military colonies, of which he planted twenty-eight in Italy, and others in ten provinces, enumerated in the Monumentum Ancyranum, 5. 35. In money he bestowed (in colonis militum meorum), one thousand sesterces apiece upon about 120,000 men, id. 3. 17.

annona: this refers, says Furneaux, "not to the regular corn dole [which he reduced from 200,000 to 150,000] . . . but to the careful organization of the supply from Egypt and elsewhere, and to special distributions, gratuitous or at a price below cost, in times of scarcity." He says (Mon. Anc. 3. 10): Consul undecimum [B.C. 23] duodecim frumentationes frumento privatum coempto emensus sum. Suetonius says (Oct. 41): Frumentum . . . saepe levissimo, interdum nullo pretio admensus est.

legum: i.e. through his edicts as magistrate, and similar decrees.

proscriptione: of the Second Triumvirate, after the death of Caesar. Cicero lost his life in these proscriptions. Notice how fond Tacitus is of coupling together different constructions: per acies aut proscriptione (Intr. 35 r). Each form has a special fitness in its own case, as frequently elsewhere.

nobilium: Cicero would probably have said nobiles (Intr. 35 d).

quanto quis: the correlative tanto magis is omitted, as frequently in Tacitus.

servitio: = ad servitium, which tior, opibus et honoribus extollerentur ac novis ex rebus aucti tuta et praesentia quam vetera et periculosa malent. Neque provinciae illum rerum statum abnuebant, suspecto senatus populiq[ue] imperio ob certamina potentium et avaritiam magistratuum, invalido legum auxilio, quae vi, ambitu, postremo pecunia turbabantur. Ceterum Augustus subsidia dominationi Claudium Marcel- lum sororis filium admodum adulescentem pontificatu et curuli aedilitate, M. Agrippam, ignobilem loco, bonum militia et victoriae socium, geminatis consulatibus extulit, mox defuncto Marcello generum sumpsit; Tiberium would be more regular (Intr. 35 f.).

tuta, etc., the present with its safety to the past with its perils.

2. neque provinciae: it has been often remarked that the rule of the emperors, even the most tyrannical, was more endurable to the provincials than the practically irresponsible government of the magistrates of the republic. See 76. 4: Achaïam ac Macedoniam onera deprecantis levare in praesens proconsulari imperio tradidit Caesar placuit.

suspecto, regarded with dislike.

legum: the law which established (B.C. 149) the quaestio rerum repetundarum, or court for the trial of extortion in the provinces, and the various laws passed afterwards, to reorganize the court and define its powers. Their efficacy was disturbed by the causes here mentioned.

3. ceterum expresses here, as often, merely a transition from a digression back to the main theme.

dominationi: Intr. 35 f.

sororis: i.e. Octavia. This is the Marcellus addressed by Vergil (Aen. VI. 862 ff.) — tu Marcellus eris. He died in the year of his sedileship, B.C. 23, at the age of twenty. See table, Intr. 26.

ignobilem: the origin of Agrippa was so humble that he chose to drop his father's name Vipsanius, as not being that of any well-known gens. The inscription on the Pantheon, erected by him, reads: M. Agrippa L. f. cos. tertium fecit. See Freeman, Methods of Historical Study, p. 245.

geminatis: he was consul two years in succession, B.C. 28 and 27, a very unusual thing under the empire for any person but the emperor himself.

generum: he married Julia, the daughter of Augustus. See table, Intr. 26.

Neronem et Claudium Drusum privignos imperatoriis 2 nominibus auxit, integra etiam tum domo sua. Nam genitos Agrippa Gaium ac Lucium in familiam Caesarum induxerat, necdum posita puerili praetexta principes iu-ventutis appellari, destinari consules specie recusantis 3 flagrantissime cupiverat. Ut Agrippa vita concessit, Lucium Caesarem euntem ad Hispaniensem exercitum, Gaium remeantem Armenia et vulnere invalidum mors fato propra vel novercae Liviae dolus abstulit, Druso-que pridem extincto Nero solus e privignis erat, illuc cuncta vergere: filius, collega imperii, consors tribuni-privignos: they were sons of his wife Livia, by her former husband. For all these relationships, see Table, Intr. 26.

imperatoris nominibus: the emperors assumed the title Imperator as a praenomen; the use here indicated, however, is that of the republic, as an appellation bestowed after victory. Both Tiberius and Drusus carried on successful campaigns in Germany, and the use of this title by them is attested by inscriptions.

2. nam explains integra: his own house consisted of his grandchildren, Gaius and Lucius; but even during their lifetime he heaped these honors upon his stepsons.

in familiam induxerat: by the regular form of adoption; per asem et libram emptos a patre Agrippa, Suet. Oct. 64, — a remarkable illustration of the survival of primitive forms.

praetexta: the toga praetexta, with a purple stripe about its border, was worn by curule magistrates, and also by boys until they assumed the toga virilis at about the age of sixteen.

principes iuventutis: as he himself was princeps of the state destinari: i.e. to take effect at a future time, — post quinquennium; as to the fact, Augustus says (Mon. Ancy. 14): Gaium et Lucium Caesares honoris mei causa senatus populusque Romanus annum quintum et decimum agentis consules designavit, ut cum magistratum inirent post quinquennium.

(not merely princeps senatus, as is often stated, see Intr. 20), so the acknowledged heir to the throne was made princeps iuventutis, a merely honorary title, carrying with it no duties or privileges. Momm. Röm. St. II. 1047.

recusantis: this use of the present participle in the genitive, agreeing with a noun understood, is common in Tacitus, where a gerund would be more regular; e.g. momenta ipsa deficientis, Agr. 43. Intr. 35 a.

3. Armenia: Intr. 35 k.

Liviae dolus: there is no doubt that Livia was very ambitious, as well for her son as for herself, and perhaps she was not incapable of this crime. Lucius died A.D. 2; Gaius, A.D. 4.

filius, etc.: these express the forciae potestatis adsumitur, omnisque per exercitus ostentatur, non obscuris, ut antea, matris artibus, sed palam hortatu. Nam senem Augustum devinxerat adeo uti 4 nepotem unicum, Agrippam Postumum, in insulam Planasiam proiecerit, rudem sane bonarum artium et robore corporis stolide ferocem, nullius tamen flagitii comper- tum. At hercule Germanicum Druso ortum octo apud 5 Rhenum legionibus imposuit adscirique per adoptionem a Tiberio iussit, quamquam esset in domo Tiberii filius iuvenis, sed quo pluribus munimentis insisteret. ✓ mal acts by which Tiberius was designated as successor to the throne. He was adopted A.D. 4, after the death of Gaius, on which occasion he appears to have laid aside his gentile name (Claudius), as was regularly done by the early emperors. His dignity as crown prince is, like that of the emperor himself, summed up in his association in the proconsular and tribunician powers. The potestas tribunicia was granted to him B.C. 6, was renewed on occasion of his adoption, and given for life A.D. 14. The imperium proconsulare, was probably conferred B.C. 8 (Momm. Röm. St. II. 1051).

omnis . . . ostentatur: there appears to have been no formal presentation of him to the armies as destined to the succession; the reference is to his commands in Germany and Pannonia.

palam hortatu: her designs were no longer concealed.

4. Agrippam Postumum: son of Agrippa and Julia, daughter of Augustus; for his fate, see chap. 6.

Planasiam: Pianosa, near Elba.

5. Druso: the younger brother of Tiberius, and like him a distinguished commander; he died B.C. 9.

octo legiones: four in Upper, four in Lower Germany. The authority of Germanicus extended over all these, the special commanders of the two armies being placed under him; see chap. 31 and Intr. 18. B. 16. and 23.

filius iuvenis: the younger Drusus, son of Tiberius, now about twenty-seven years of age; he and Germanicus were now legally brothers. The age of iuvenis, following adulescentia, extended from about twenty-five to forty-five.

pluribus munimentis: in order to lessen the danger of a vacancy on the throne; non legiones, non classes perinde firma imperio munimenta quam numerum liberorum, Hist. IV. 52.

Igitur verso civitatis statu nihil usquam prisci et integri moris: omnes exuta aequalitate iussa principis aspectare, nulla in praesens formidine, dum Augustus aetate validus seque et domum et pacem sustentavit. Postquam provecta iam senectus aegro et corpore fatigabatur, aderatque finis et spes novae, pauci bona libertatis in cassum disserere, plures bellum pavescere, alii cupere. Pars multo maxima imminentis dominos variis rumoribus differebant: trucem Agrippam et ignominia accensum non aetate neque rerum experientia tantae moli parem; Tiberium Neronem maturum annis, spectatum bello, sed vetere atque insita Claudia fami-rather obliged them to withdraw to the frontier of the Rhine.

cupidine profereendi imperii: Augustus laid it down as a praeceptum imperii not to advance the boundaries of the empire; consilium coercendi intra terminos imperii, II. 7. In fact Tiberius put an end to hostilities after three years of no material success.

7. eadem: i.e. the same as under the republic.

post Actiacam pugnam: the battle of Actium, B.C. 31, in which Octavius defeated Antony. This was the end of the civil wars; the republic had perished already. See note on publica arma, 2. 1.

rem publicam: i.e. in its concrete meaning, the republic.

4. statu, constitution.

prisci et: a closer coupling than if neque had been used — the good old customs; see similar instance in 70. 5. We have here a terse and vigorous description of the changes in temper and feeling as the monarchy was established.

2. provecta senectus: Augustus was seventy-seven years old at the time of his death.

spes novae: i.e. as to what would happen after the death of the emperor.

disserere: this word in Tacitus very often governs the accusative.

3. differebant: made the subject of disparaging talk, picked to pieces (dis- in composition having the meaning asunder).

aetate: Agrippa was twenty-six, Tiberius, fifty-six.

spectatum bello: he had carried on war with great distinction, and had celebrated triumphs over the Pannonians (B.C. 9), the Germans (B.C. 7), the Illyrians, Pannoliae superbia, multaque indicia saevitiae, quamquam premantur, erumpere. Accedere matrem muliebri 5 impotentia: serviendum feminae duobusque insuper adunians, Dalmatians, and Germans (A.D. 12).

superbia: ablative of characteristic. This was an inborn trait of the Claudian gens. When, however, Suetonius proceeds (Tib. 2) to say Claudius omnes . . . optimales assertoresque unicos dignitatis ac potentiae patriciorum semper fuisse, it may be questioned whether the tradition is in accordance with historical fact. Mommsen (see Appendix to Vol. I. of his Roman History) shows that this family was peculiarly free from bondage to tradition, and was, on the other hand, prone to innovation; that its members were "the predecessors of the Gracchi and of Caesar. In this respect the Claudii were justly called to ascend, in combination with the Julian house, the imperial throne, and even on that throne they did not wholly forget the traditional policy of their clan; for it is only in the light of this traditional policy that we can rightly understand why Tiberius and Claudius declined the title of Imperator, and various similar traits."

premantur, suppressed, kept concealed; the verb takes the time of the supposed speakers; as belonging to the indirect discourse, it would properly be in the imperfect.

eductum, educated; education would be the word properly used.

consulatus: B.C. 13 and 7.

triumphos: see note on spectatum bello.

Rhodi: this city was, until the time of Claudius, nominally independent of Rome. Tiberius was therefore, during his residence at Rhodes, legally outside of the bounds of the empire.

iis . . . annis: B.C. 6 to A.D. 2; this was in appearance a voluntary retirement, but as he was not permitted by Augustus to return, he was to all intents and purposes an exile; remansit ergo Rhodi contra voluntatem (Suet. Tib. 12). The cause of this retirement is not certain. Tacitus, chap. 53, attributes it to the infidelities of his wife Julia, daughter of Augustus. Suetonius hints the same, but says that Tiberius himself gave as a reason the fear of exciting the jealousy of Gaius and Lucius Caesar; nihil aliud secessu devitasse se quam aemulationis cum Gaiis Lucioque suspicionem. Velleius (II. 99) gives essentially the same reason; ne fulgor suus orientum iuvenum obstaret iniis. His position at court was certainly a difficult and embarrassing one.

aliquid: see App. I.

5. impotentia, imperious temper; cf. V. 1, mater impotens, uxor facilis. The idea is 'powerless to control one's self.'

duobus adolescentibus: Germanicus and Drusus.

lescentibus, qui rem publicam interim premant, quandoque distrahant.

quandoque distrahant: i.e. in their disputes for the succession, when Tiberius should have died. As a matter of fact, the two princes lived in the closest intimacy and affection, and both died before Tiberius. quandoque = aliquando.

5. agitantibus: Intr. 35 o. Some editors take it as a dative of reference, — also a construction very characteristic of this writer. Intr. 35 f.

scelus uxoris: the current story was that she put poison in some figs still hanging on the tree, which he then plucked and ate.

3. ex eo: construed with spem (fuisse).

Marciae: she was a cousin of the emperor, her mother Atia being a sister of his mother.

4. gnarum = notum: a frequent usage in Tacitus.

dubium an, perhaps; Tacitus is very fond of parenthetical expressions of this kind.

quaesita (sc. a se), voluntary.

5. utcumque se ea res habuit: the whole story is very improbable, considering the age and infirmity of Augustus, and the suspicious watchfulness of Livia.

Illyricum: this province, occupying the eastern coast of the Adriatic Sea, had been extended by the wars of Tiberius (B.C. 12–9) so as to include the valleys of the Save and Drave, by which an easy passage conducted from the Adriatic into the valley of the Danube; it was now divided into Upper Illyricum, or Dalmatia, and Lower Illyricum, or Pannonia. The latter was afterwards extended to the Danube. The name Illyricum was, in the later empire, given to a praefecture, or governmental district, embracing part of Moesia, together with Macedonia and Greece.

spirantem: Suetonius says (Tib. 21) that he found him still alive, fuitque una secreto per totum diem. So also Velleius, II. 123. 3; Dio (LVI. 31) follows Tacitus.

apud, in. Intr. 35 i.

Nolam: an important city in Campania.

6. namque: this word regularly begins a sentence, but is used as an enclitic (like enim) in the poets and the later historians.

provisus quae: Intr. 35 e.

6. caedes: according to Suetonius (Tib. 22), this murder too was effected before the announcement of the death of the emperor.

aegre confecit: this appears to refer to the determined resistance of the vigorous young man (cf. robore corporis, 3. 4). According to Suetonius his death warrant was first read to him.

2. patris iussa: Suetonius says that it was doubtful whether it was Augustus that issued the orders or Livia; and, if she, whether it was with the knowledge of Tiberius or not.

custodiae: best taken as dative of the end, — placed over him as a guard.

quandoque, as soon as — properly whenever.

3. saeva questus: according to Suetonius (Oct. 65), he spoke of him and the two Julias — his daughter and her daughter — as tres vomicas ac tria carcinomata sua.

duravit, hardened himself.

propius vero: we have seen that Suetonius partly confirms Tiberius' own statement, that the act was ordered by Augustus; but the most probable theory is that the responsibility was assumed by Livia, and that Tiberius was obliged to acquiesce in a crime committed for his benefit.

5. centurioni: according to Suetonius, it was a tribune, probably the one who had given the orders to the centurion. The answer of Tiberius is given by Suetonius in almost the same words.

6. Sallustius: a great-nephew of the historian, adopted by him as his heir; see III. 30.

subderetur: in this compound of sub lies the idea that the charge would have been false.

periculoso: ablative, the subject being the clause that follows.

seu: the first seu is omitted, an omission common in Tacitus.

ut non, etc.: under the present system of government there could be no divided responsibility; to bring the matter before the senate as Tiberius proposed would put an end to his authority (vim princi-patus resolveret). In ratio constat, etc. (cf. rationem reddendam 5), there is an allusion to the auditing of accounts (Furneaux).

7. eques: collective, the equestrian order.

2. laeti, cheerful; sc. essent. The thing to be avoided was of course the appearance rather than the reality of gladness.

primordio: the accession of Tiberius.

3. primi: as chief magistrates, they took the oath independently; after which the praefects, who were not magistrates in the strict sense of the term, but officers of the emperor, took it at their hands (apud eum).

in verba iuravere: this is the form of the military oath of the republic; it was taken personally to the possessor of the imperium.

eos Seius Strabo et C. Turranius, ille praetoriarum cohortium praefectus, hic annonae; mox senatus milesque et populus. Nam Tiberius cuncta per consules incipiebat, 4 tamquam vetere re publica et ambiguus imperandi; ne edictum quidem, quo patres in curiam vocabat, 5 and that was, under the empire, solely the emperor. It was therefore equivalent to an oath of allegiance to him as supreme ruler. It was now exacted once a year, and was moreover extended to all classes — senatus milesque et populus. See chap. 34; also Momm. Röm. St. II. 749.

Seius Strabo: the father of Sejanus, who was afterwards associated with him in this office.

The praetorian prefect, praefectus praetorio, at first merely commander of the emperor's body-guard, was afterwards the most powerful officer in the state. The praetorian cohorts were nine in number, each of a thousand men commanded by a tribune, the whole body being regularly commanded by two praefects (at this time only one). Three of these cohorts were stationed in the city, the rest in other parts of Italy; but Sejanus concentrated the whole body in a fortified camp just outside the city walls. This praetorian camp served as a fortress to keep the city in subjection.

annonae: the office of praefectus annonae was established in the last part of the reign of Augustus; the date is not certainly known. The first incumbent was Gaius Turranius, who was still holding the office, A.D. 48 (XI. 31). As the title praefect implies, he had no independent authority, but was only the representative of the emperor, who in person had the cura annonae, as well as the imperium over the whole empire (Momm. Röm. St. II. 966). The praefectus annonae was taken from the equestrian order, and appointed for an indefinite term; at this time his office ranked as the first of the equestrian dignities, but it afterwards stood third in rank among these (Hirschfeld, Untersuchungen, p. 135). His duties were to provide the markets of the capital with grain and other necessaries, and to oversee the sailors, bakers, etc., who performed the labor in detail.

The praefectus praetorio and praefectus annonae were, in the early empire, the highest regular offices under the emperor; that of praefectus urbi being at this time only occasional; see VI. 11.

4. incipiebat: the use of the imperfect here is not to denote customary action (was in the habit of beginning), but to describe his policy at this time, when he had not yet in strictness of speech begun to reign, following the Latin usage of expressing by a verb what the English expresses by an abstract noun (Intr. 35 a), — at this time he did all these things through the consuls, the regular constitutional channels. Whatever he did himself he did by virtue of the tribunician and proconsular powers, which he already possessed.

vetere re publica: not ablative absolute, but of circumstance, — as if the republic were still in existence.

ambiguus imperandi, as if he had not yet made up his mind to accept the imperium.

5. edictum: every magistrate had the right of issuing edicta or proclamations, and the tribunes had posuit: for proposuit; Intr. 35 b.

6. neque abscedere: he owed this service to his adoptive father.

id: relates to de . . . consulturum; this duty he took upon himself.

7. signum: the military password.

ut imperator: having the proconsular imperium; see note to filius, 3. 3.

cetera aulae, everything else that belongs to a court.

8. cunctabundus, showing hesitation.

loqueretur: for this subjunctive of repeated action, common in the post-classical writers; see A. and G. § 309. b.

9. causa praecipua: he wished by this show of hesitation to force the senate to a formal offer of the throne; armed with this legal authority, he would be freed from fear on account of the popularity or military force of Germanicus. In the meantime he promptly exercised the powers which he already possessed. With the words nam Tiberius Tacitus begins to describe the hesitation and apparent reluctance of Tiberius to assume any new title or power; he already having the tribunician power and the imperium. With sed defuncto, etc., he shows that in spite of this hesitation to assume new powers, he exercised his old powers promptly and vigorously, and thus was princeps in all but name; the reason for both is the fear of Germanicus.

tot legiones: see note to chap.

3. 5. These eight legions made about 40,000 men, to whom must be added fully as many auxiliaries.

exspectare: as adopted son and successor; see 3. 5.

10. dabat et famae, he had regard also, etc.; i.e. his dignity and reputation required that he should assume the purple by a constitutional grant, and not by an informal act, which would have the look of usurpation.

uxorium, etc.: the influence exerted upon the aged Augustus by his wife Livia.

11. inductam, put on, assumed. verba, vultus: of others.

recondebat, store up, lay up, as a grudge. Tacitus' explanation of facts and imputation of motives must not be accepted as of equal authority with his statements of fact. (Intr. 13.) Hesitation and indecision were prominent traits of character in Tiberius, and may perhaps afford a sufficient explanation of his demeanor on this occasion.

8. per virgines Vestae: it was common to deposit wills, treaties, etc., in temples, and especially with the Vestal virgins. Caesar's will was deposited with them.

heredes: Tiberius two thirds, ex parte dimidia et sextante, Livia one third, as we learn from Suetonius, Oct. 101.

2. Augustum: an adjective. From this time she is regularly known as Augusta.

in spem secundam = secundas heredes: Drusus, son of Tiberius, one-third, Germanicus and his male children ex partibus reliquis. This appointment of second and third heirs was to take effect only in default of first heirs, or in case the first heirs should fail to qualify, cernere; for the heir had the option of declining the inheritance.

primores: sc. quosdam. Suetonius says propinquos amicosque complures.

gloria, love of glory.

3. civilem: becoming a private citizen.

quadringentiens triciens quinquens: this is given by Suetonius as two separate legacies, legavit populo Romano quadringentis, tribus tricies quinquis sestertium (Oct. 101), tribubus being used by him as equivalent to Tacitus' plebi. This is usually explained as meaning that quadringentiens [sc. centena milia sestertium] = $2,000,000 went into the treasury, while triciens quinquens, $175,000, was distributed virilis. It is hard to understand, if this is the case, why Tacitus should give them as one legacy; moreover, three and a half million sesterces divided among the 200,000 persons entitled to gratuities would make the paltry sum of 17½ sesterces = 87½ cents apiece, while it is known from Dio Cassius quingens, praetoriarum cohortium militibus singula nummum milia, urbanis quingenos, legionariis aut cohortibus civium Romanorum trecenos nummos viritim dedit.

4 Tum consultatum de honoribus; ex quis maxime in-(LVII. 14) that the sum actually received by each beneficiary was 260 sesterces = $13.00—too great a discrepancy, even if we are to suppose that Tiberius added something from his own purse. We must assume, therefore, with Marquardt (Röm. Staatsverw. II. 126) that the whole amount was distributed viritim, and find the distinction between populus and plebs [tribubus] in the peculiar organization of the tribes for alimentary donations during the empire. At this period, as Mommsen says (Röm. Staatsv. III. i. 445), "wherever the Tribes appear as corporations, it is of this plebs frumentaria," consisting of a limited number of persons, chiefly freedmen, membership being a special and personal privilege. The tribes, as thus organized (not to be confounded with the voting tribes), continued in existence into the fourth century. Note that, the number of tribes being 35, the legacy of 3,500,000 sesterces made 100,000 sesterces to each. The sesterce (sestertius) was a coin, originally of silver, but under the empire of copper, of the value of a little over four cents; the denarius was four sesterces. The sestertium was not a coin, but a value of 1000 sesterces. In payment of large sums gold was of course used (the aureus was of the value of 100 sesterces); but, as the ratio of gold to silver has since risen about one third (from about 12:1 to 16:1), it follows that the present value of the sesterce in gold is over five cents. As all these values are approximate, we will follow Mom-

praetoriarum cohortium, etc.: the large sum to the soldiers agrees with the statements of Suetonius and Dio Cassius (LVI. 32), except that the text of Tacitus omits the five hundred sesterces apiece to the soldiers of the city cohorts (urbanis quingenos), and mentions the cohorts of Roman citizens, omitted by the other two. The present value of these sums was about $50 apiece to the praetorians, $25 to the urbani, and $15 to the members of the citizen cohorts.

urbanis: the city cohorts were three in number, one thousand men in each. They belonged to the guard of the capital, and were numbered X., XI., and XII., as if belonging with the praetorian cohorts; they were, however, under the command, not of the praetorian praefect, but of the praefectus urbi. See App. I.

cohortibus civium Romanorum: these were cohorts of volunteers, 32 in number, raised in Italy, while the legions were regularly recruited in the provinces. They ranked with the legionary cohorts, although not assigned to any legion, and thus received the same donation. For this reason, probably, they are not mentioned by Suetonius and Dio.

4. de honoribus: see last chapter, de honoribus parentis consulturum.

insignes: sc. honores, object of censuere. See App. I.

Gallus Asinius: a son of the eminent orator Asinius Pollio. The practice of putting the cognomen before the nomen was common under the empire. In this case the praenomen was regularly omitted.

laturum: sc. ab Augusto.

5. interrogatusque, etc.: Tiberius steadily declined ostentations and adulatory honors, at least in the early years of his reign.

ea: the show of independence.

6. umeris senatorum: Sulla was the first who received this honor. remisit, excused (cf. III. 55. 1).

This does not mean that he prohibited it, and we learn from Suetonius and Dio that the proposition was carried out.

turbassent: the speech of Mark Antony at Caesar's funeral so fired the people that they broke to pieces the benches, and burned the body of Caesar in the forum.

sede destinata: Augustus had built a mausoleum for himself and his family upon the Campus Martius, the remains of which may be still seen. It was a circular building, and was surrounded with pleasure grounds: inter Flaminiam viam ripamque Tiberis . . . circumiecitasque silvas et ambulationes in usum populi iam tum publicarat. Suet. 9. vana mirantibus : the idle commenting upon coincidences.

idem dies : Aug. 19 [= a. d. xiv. Kal. Sept.]. His first consulship (as consul suffectus after the death of Hirtius and Pansa) began Aug. 19, A.D. 43; he had, however, received by a special vote of the Senate early in the same year, the imperium pro praetore simul cum consubus (Mon. Anc. ch. i. 5). This imperium pro praetore was inferior to the consular imperium, so that his exercise of full authority began with his consulship on the date assigned. Some late writers reckoned the reign of Augustus from this event, and the present passage may perhaps be taken to show that Tacitus so understood it, although he does not speak of the imperium as continuous. According to Mommsen (Hermes, Vol. XVII., 1882, p. 638), this was the interpretation of Au-

2. simul aequaverat : he had held the consulship thirteen times, Valerius Corvus six times, Marius seven times.

septem et triginta annos : more exactly thirty-six years and two months, from June 27, B.C. 23.

nomen imperatoris : this refers to the usage of the republic, when a commander was saluted as imperator by his soldiers after a victory. These victories of Augustus were of course for the most part gained by his officers, but acting under his imperium. The first of these twenty-one occasions was probably after the victory at Philippi, B.C. 42.

honorum : Intr. 35 d.

4. hi : sc. dicentibus. The opposing views are introduced by dicebatur contra in the next chapter.

parentem : Julius Caesar, his father by adoption, whose death he avenged.

5. concessisse: Suetonius says, on the other hand (Oct. 27): restitit aliquandiu collegis, ne qua fieret praescriptio, sed inceptam utroque acerbius exercuit.

6. principis: see note on nomine principis, I. 3, and Intr. 20. He selected by preference a civil title, and one having associations with the republic. Sulla and Caesar had been perpetual dictator, and the title of king was very offensive to the Romans. The advice of Maecenas to avoid the title of king is well known.

omnibus longinquis: the Rhine, Danube, and Euphrates.

saeptum: i.e. from the rest of the world. It was the policy of Augustus to define the empire by fixed and, where possible, natural boundaries.

conexas: this refers to the efficient postal system of the empire.

magnifico ornatu: he had repaired eighty-two temples, and built numerous others, besides theatres, aqueducts, etc. He boasted that he had found Rome of brick and left it of marble.

10. tempora, exigencies.

largitionem: Cicero says (ad Att. XVI. 8. 1) quingenos denarios dat; this would be about $10.00 apiece.

paratum... exercitum: he says himself (Mon. Anc. chap. 1) annos undeviginti natus exercitum privato consilio et privata impensa comparavi. This was after the death of Julius Caesar, when the young Octavius first sided with the Senate (simulatam Pompeianarum gratiam partium) and gained over Antony's troops; after which he treacherously united with Antony, and formed the triumvirate with him and Lepidus.

consulis: i.e. Antonii; his legions revolted to Octavius.

ubi decreto patrum fasces et ius praetoris invaserit, caesis Hirtio et Pansa, — sive hostis illos, seu Pansam venenum vulneri adfusus, sui milites Hirtium et machinator doli Caesar abstulerat, — utriusque copias occupavisse; extortum invito senatu consulatum, armaque quae in Antonium acceperit contra rem publicam versa; proscriptionem civium, divisiones agrorum, ne ipsis quidem qui fecere laudatas. ius praetoris: the praetorian power, carrying with it the authority to command troops, was bestowed upon him by the Senate; Cic. Phil. v. 17. 46. It was strictly an unconstitutional act, Momm. Röm. Staatsrecht, II. p. 621.

caesis: at the battle of Mutina, March 13. The suspicion here expressed (seu Pansam, etc.) is alluded to by Suetonius (Oct. 11): Pansae quidem adeo suspecta mors fuit ut Glyco medicus custoditus sit, quasi venenum vulneri indidisset.

invito senatu: probably dative. According to Suetonius (Oct. 26) it was demanded nomine exercitus; his messenger, the centurion Cornelius, pointing to his sword, said, hic faciet, si vos non feceritis.

proscriptionem: each of the triumvirs made out a list of those whom he wished put to death; the list was then posted, proscriptum, and whoever would might kill them.

divisiones agrorum: after the victory of Philippi, B.C. 42, grants of land were made to the veterans, municipalibus agris (Suet. Oct. 13); according to the same authority, the veterans were much dissatisfied, for which reason some have proposed to change fecere into ceperunt. These were the grants referred to in Vergil's first eclogue.

2. sane: concessive, it is true.

Brutorum: i.e. Marcus and Decimus.

quamquam, and yet. Their death was an act of vengeance, which, however, might well have been spared on public grounds.

Pompeium, etc.: the terms agreed upon with Sextus Pompeius at the treaty of Misenum, B.C. 39, were not fulfilled. The allusion to Lepidus refers to his being gradually crowded out of his authority, rather than to any specific act of bad faith.

post: here an adverb. This relates in time only to poenas exsolvisse, as the treaties here mentioned came before the overthrow of Pompeius and Lepidus, both of which events took place B.C. 36.

sororis: Antony married Octavia, sister of Octavianus, but afterwards deserted her for Cleopatra, queen of Egypt. The marriage was arranged in the treaty of Brundisium, B.C. 40, which by reason of this association is mentioned after that of Tarentum, which took place in 37.

3. clades: both of these were in Germany: the defeat of Lollius, B.C. 16; that of Varus with great loss (the famous battle of the Teutoburg forest, against Arminius, 60. 5), A.D. 9.

interfectos: there does not appear to have been any just ground for censure in these acts. The plural, Varrones, etc., is used to indicate that these are only instances. Varro and Egnatius were put to death for conspiracy, B.C. 23 (or 22) and 19 respectively; Iulus (a son of Mark Antony), for adultery with Julia, was obliged to put himself to death, B.C. 2.

4. abducta . . . uxor: Livia, mother (by Nero) of Tiberius and Drusus, and, as Tacitus represents, gravis mater to the state, upon which she imposed her son Tiberius as ruler; and gravis noverca to the house of Caesar, being suspected of causing the death of the young princes Gaius and Lucius.

Vedii Pollionis: see App. I. This Vedius Pollio, a friend of Augustus, used to throw his condemned slaves to the lampreys in his fish-pond. His immense house was torn down by his heir, Augustus, and the Livian portico constructed in its place, quia luxuria visa nocere sua, Ovid, Fast. VI. 644. See Seneca, de Ira. III. 40.

5. se coli: the craving of Augustus for divine honors, ascribed to him here, appears to be shown also by inscriptions. "According to all appearance, the worship of the living ruler, making its appearance simultaneously throughout Italy, was, if not directly instigated by him, at least expressly authorized." (Mommson, Hermes, XVII. p. 641. See also 'The Caesareum at Alexandria' by Prof. A. C. Merriam, Trans. of Am. Phil. Ass., 1883.) Tiberius constantly refused it (Intr. 24). Augustus, too, in the city, according to Suetonius (Oct. 52), declined it: nam in urbe quidem pertinacissime abstinuit hoc honore; and in the provinces insisted upon being associated with the goddess Roma, communi suo Romaeque nomine. This cult became the leading religion of the provinces, as is abundantly shown by inscriptions; being in each city in the hands of a college of priests called Augustales (Intr. 24).

per flamines: the flamen was a priest of a special deity or a special cult.

7. tribuniciam potestatem: the tribunician power was granted to the emperor by a vote of the people, upon recommendation of the Senate; to a colleague, however, as in the case of Tiberius, it was granted directly by the prince, according to the rules of cooptation, but usually after consulting the Senate. Collegam sibi cooptavit. (Suet. Oct. 27.) Mommsen. Röm. St. II. 1058.

habitu, cultu, institutis: referring respectively to body, dress, and manners. According to Suetonius (Tib. 68), Augustus said of him naturae vitia esse non animi. The description of Suetonius represents him as of stern countenance, and sparing in speech — adducto fere vultu, plerumque tacitus. His busts and statues show him to have been handsome and dignified, but with a peculiarly compressed mouth, in which suspicion and cruelty might lurk. See frontispiece.

quamquam: Intr. 35 f.

8. ceterum, now, or however: expressing a return from a digression to the main subject.

templum: this was erected by Livia upon the Palatine.

decernuntur: this vote was passed Sept. 17. Augustus was now ranked among the greater gods: an inscription cited by Marquardt (Röm. Staatsverw. III. 443) reads: Augustus optumus maximus ac divus Augustus ceterisque omnes di immortales. See Intr. 25.

11. 3. non: instead of ne, in order to qualify ad unum, by way of contrast to plures. He seems to have had in mind some such scheme as that actually adopted by Diocletian, three hundred years later, of a division of the sovereign power between two or three colleagues of equal dignity; not, as in the case of the consuls, with precisely equal powers, but with specially defined functions. See the next chapter.

4. occuleret: subjunctive of characteristic.

magis: sc. even than usual.

5. intellegere, see through him.

cum: introducing a positive statement of time, nearly equivalent to and then. A. & G. 325 b.

libellum: this schedule (breviarium totius imperii) was one of three papers which were deposited by Augustus, together with his testament, with the vestal virgins (Suet. Oct. 101). A second contained directions for his burial, the third contained indicem rerum a se gestarum, quem vellet incidi in aeneis tabulis, quae ante Mausoleum statuerentur, of which the well-known Monumentum Ancyranum is a copy. Dio (LVI. 33) adds τὸ πλεον τῶν ἐν τοῖς θεσφατοῖς χρημάτων; also, that there was a fourth paper, containing rules and directions of government.

6. civium sociorumque: legionary troops and auxiliaries.

regna: probably countries like Cappadocia and Mauretania, still in name independent kingdoms, although ready to be incorporated in the empire as soon as the occasion should come. Perhaps in this class is comprised Egypt, which, although a part of the empire, was never reduced into the form of a province, but was governed directly by the emperor as a kingdom (Intr. 18. 28).

tributa . . . vectigalia: the tributa were levied directly upon the provinces, the vectigalia were indirect taxes, such as portoria (customs-duties) and decumae (tithes). See Marquardt, Adm. Staatsv. II. 178 n.

necessitates ac largitiones: necessary expenses and donations.

7. terminos: the present boundaries. This rule of policy is mentioned by Dio among the contents of the fourth document.

per invidiam: that none of his

12. dixit forte, dropped the remark, casually, as it were.

ut . . . ita, although . . . yet.

quaecumque pars: according to Dio Cassius (LVII. 2), he suggested a division into three parts — Rome and Italy, the armies, and the subject provinces, οἱ λοιποὶ ὀρέκκοι. This was a division based upon historical relations. Rome, including Italy, stood to the provinces in the time of the republic, as governor to governed, while the provinces themselves were divided by Augustus into the two classes here described — those which required a military force (the imperial provinces), and those which did not (the senatorial).

3. collecto animo, recovering his presence of mind.

nequaquam . . . mallet: Dio makes his reply to have been that it was unbecoming that the one who made the division should also select his share, τὸν αὐτὸν καὶ νέμειν τὴν καὶ αἰεῖσθαι.

cui: governed by excusari, a rare but perfectly natural construction (Intr. 35 f).

5. in toga: contrasted with victoriarum (Intr. 35 r). The toga, the distinctive Roman garment (gens togata), was only worn by citizens in their civil capacity, and is, therefore, regularly used to contrast peaceful with warlike relations.

6. ideo, thereby; that is, by this excuse.

tamquam, on the ground that, a common use in late writers (Intr. 35 f).

Vipsania: daughter of Agrippa. Her mother was daughter of Cicero's friend Atticus. Her divorce, which was for political reasons, was a ferociam, high spirit. Pollio, although he submitted himself to the imperial rule, never accepted it cordially, but displayed an independence of spirit, sometimes amounting to opposition. Pliny (N.H., XXXVI. 4, 10) calls him acris vehementiae. For the son's character, see the next chapter.

18. L. Arruntius: a leading statesman of the time; his death by his own act is related VI. 48.

divitem, etc.: these adjectives, agreeing with the object of suspectabat, express reason, because he was rich, etc.

2. suffecturi, although they would be equal to it.

vel: Intr. 35 r.

M'. Lepidum: probably grandson of the triumvir, invariably spoken of by Tacitus with the highest respect; on occasion of his death (VI. 27), he says, de cuius moderatione atque sapientia . . . satis collocavi.

3. Cn. Pisonem: a man ingens violentum et obsequii ignarum (II. 43). His grandfather was legatus of Pompey in his eastern wars. He is represented as a bitter enemy of Germanicus, and was suspected of having poisoned him; the accusation, whether true or not, was the cause of his own death (III. 15).

death (VI. 23). The death of Arruntius, on the other hand, Tacitus admits to have been due to the enmity of Macro, and perhaps not even known to the emperor (VI. 47). The death of Piso was the result of an open criminal prosecution; the charge of Tacitus is, therefore, without foundation, unless, perhaps, in relation to Gallus.

4. Q. Haterius: a distinguished orator (IV. 61), but of a mean nature; Mamercus Scaurus, insignis nobilitate et orandis causis, vita probus (VI. 29). The character of the man sufficiently explains Tiberius' displeasure.

relationi: the technical term for the action of the magistrate in bringing business before the Senate; as the act of a magistrate it could be forbidden by the tribunes.

quod non intercessisset: the relatio here in question was in reference to a law investing Tiberius with the dignity of princeps. As he already had the proconsular imperium and the tribunician power, in which two powers were summed up the military and civil authority of the imperial office, the law on this occasion had the effect of formally placing in his hands the headship of the state. A portion of the corresponding law for Vespasian is extant.

5. implacabilius: because his words implied that he did not believe Tiberius to be sincere in his opposition.

6. flexit: magis ratione quam honore victus est, Vell. II. 124.

7. Palatium: originally identical with Palatinus, as the name of the hill. Augustus built a splendid house here, and the name of the hill became especially associated with the imperial residence, which hence became known as palatium. From this the word 'palace' has passed into most modern languages.

genua: adjective is properly followed by the dative, but compound verbs regularly construed with other cases are frequently used by Tacitus with the accusative.

an: the ellipsis of dubium est an had become so common that an now merely expresses an alternative.

impeditus prociderat. Neque tamen periculo talis viri mitigatus est, donec Haterius Augustam oraret eiusque curatissimis precibus protegeretur.

Multa patrum et in Augustam adulatio. Alii pa-<sup>14</sup> rentem, alii matrem patriae appellandam, plerique ut nomini Caesaris adscriberetur 'Iuliae filius' censebant. Ille moderandos feminarum honores dictitans eademque se temperantia usurum in iis quae sibi tribuerentur, ceterum anxius invidia et muliebri fastigium in deminutionem sui accipiens ne lictorem quidem ei decerni passus est aramque adoptionis et alia huiusce modi prohibuit. At Germanico Caesari proconsulare imperium petivit, missique legati qui deferrent, simul maestitiam eius ob excessum Augusti solarentur. Quo minus idem pro Druso postularetur, ea causa quod designatus consul Drusus praesensque erat.

prociderat: this is probably the incident related by Suetonius (Tib. 27) to illustrate Tiberius' hatred of flattery: . . . consularem satisficientem sibi, ac per genua orare conantem, ita suffugerit, ut caderet supinus.

14. 2. alii . . . censebant: neglect of concinnity (Intr. 35 r).

Iuliae filius: an appellation which in earlier times would have sounded grotesque in Roman ears.

3. moderandos: so Suetonius (Tib. 50), admonuit maioribus nec feminae convenientibus negotiis abstinere. Livia was an intriguing woman, and, no doubt, like many modern queen mothers, would have liked to rule in her son's name. On several occasions he gave way to her; generally Tiberius showed himself firm in repressing such ambition, velut partes sibi aequas potentiae vindicantem (Intr. 26 a).

eademque, etc.: this assertion is evidently sincere; Tacitus (IV. 37. 2) calls him validus spernendis honoribus. See Intr. 24, and III. 47. 5.

lictorem: the vestal virgins were accompanied in public by lictors, but there were no precedents for these symbols of empire to accompany a private woman. Livia had, however, a lictor when officiating as priestess of Augustus, and afterwards two lictors were granted by the Senate to the younger Agrippina (XIII. 2).

aram adoptionis: i.e. to commemorate her adoption by Augustus, see 8. 2. Such altars were not unusual, and implied no personal sacredness.

4. Germanico Caesari: see 3. 5. proconsulare imperium: this was granted by the Senate. Its possession made him the colleague of the emperor, and designated him as successor: see Mom. Röm. St.

II. 1051. He had not yet received the tribunician power.

5. designatus consul: this is usually explained as meaning that, as consul designatus, he must have voted first in his own case. Furneaux, however, is of opinion that this objection might have been waived (cf. III. 22. 6), and that the real reason was that the proconsular imperium, which belonged exclusively to the provinces, would for any but the prince himself have been inconsistent with the purely civic office of consul, which he was to hold the next year.

6. candidatos duodecim . . . nominavit: this was the whole number of praetors to be elected; and, as this nominatio is contrasted with the absolute right of appointing (commendation) four praetors, sine repulsa et ambitu, described a few lines below, it follows that it had in law only the force of testing qualifications and admitting to candidacy. That the presiding magistrate, the consul, had exactly the same power, of admitting to candidacy, is shown (in relation to the consulship) by 81. 3: passu et alios proferi: of course, however, a nomination by the emperor was in most cases equivalent to an election. The proposition of the Senate that he should nominate more than twelve (ut augeret) would really have the effect of limiting the em-

obstrinxit: used absolutely — bound himself; cf. IV. 31. 5, and flexit, 13. 6.

15. e campo . . . translata sunt: this refers only to the election of praetors; the consuls continued in form to be elected by the people at least until the time of Vespasian. (Momm. Röm. St. II. 865.) Velleius (II. 124) speaks of this as ordinatio comitorum, quam manu sua scriptam divus Augustus reliquerat. The place for holding the comitia was the Campus Martius. Velleius (II. 126) says of this: revocata in forum fides, sum-mota e foro seditio, ambitio campo, discordia curia.

potissima, the most important: although the elections were free, Augustus made use of nomination where he thought fit.

tribuum: i.e. the people as organized in tribes. It will be remembered that the tribal organization was not confined to the tribal assemblies, but that the centuries also were grouped by tribes in the reformed comitia centuriata, as re-organized between the First and Second Punic Wars. Suetonius says of Augustus (Oct. 56), ferrebat et ipse suffragium in tribubus, ut unus e populo.

2. senatus: because all the important magistracies must be held by seditionis ministris velut contionabundus interrogabat, Tiberius (12-9 B.C.), and organized as a province a few years later, comprised at this time the country upon the rivers Drave and Save. It was afterwards extended north to the great bend of the Danube below Vienna, and was always one of the most important provinces from a military point of view. Between the three legions posted here and the eight legions upon the Rhine (that is, in the provinces of Rætia and Noricum), there were no troops except a few scattered garrisons of auxiliaries. The mutiny in Pannonia, therefore, followed by that of the German legions, threatened to strip the entire northern frontier of its defences.

mutatus princeps: Intr. 35 g.
 2. castris aestivis: this was in the open country, a castra stativa at Poetovio (Pettau), on the Drave. (Mommsen, Provinces of the Roman Empire, I. p. 26.) When they went into winter quarters (30. 3), it was within the walls of the town.

tres legiones: the VIII. (Augusta), IX. (Hispana), and XV. (Apolinaris).

Iunio Blaeso: uncle of Sejanus, and a very capable officer.

iustitium, mourning: originally a closing of the courts of justice for any public cause. As a public mourning was a principal occasion of such interruption, the word came in the time of the empire to mean this exclusively.

4. operarum: hired applauders, claqueurs. In Pliny (Ep. VII. 24), their service is itself called theatralis opera.

5. dilapsis, etc., when the better minded had scattered to their tents.

17. aliis . . . ministris: others besides himself, as agents of sedition.

senators, who had heretofore been obliged to canvass for votes (largitionibus ac precibus sordidis).

tenuit: sc. ius.

plures . . . candidatos: sc. praeturae. These were called candidati Caesaris. The commendatio sine repulsa et ambitu was equivalent to an appointment, and grew out of the formal and official suffragatio, or personal canvassing of the republic. Augustus had continued the republican form of suffragatio: tribus cum candidatis suis circumibat, supplicabatque more sollemni (Suet. Oct. 56). Velleius (II. 124) relates an interesting fact, in relation to this commendation: michi fratrique meo, candidatis Caesaris . . . destinari praetoribus contigit, consecutis, ut neque post nos quemquam divus Augustus, neque ante nos Caesar commendaret Tiberius.

3. Augustales: these games had been celebrated from time to time Oct. 12 by order of the senate, but were now made annual and extended so as to last from Oct. 3 to 12, thus coming between the Great or Roman Games in September, and the Plebeian Games in November. The cult of Augustus in the city was distinct from, although closely connected with, that in the provinces, mentioned 10. 5. As is stated in the note on that passage, Augustus refused to have it established in the city during his lifetime. It now became one of the principal forms of worship, and a powerful instrument in the maintenance of the imperial authority (Intr. 24).

vocarentur: subjunctive, as being part of their request.

4. decreta pecunia: to carry on the games at their own expense would have gained them too much popularity. Notice the ut clause depending upon decretum, implied in decreta.

triumphali veste: the toga picta, embroidered with gold, and the tunica palmata, embroidered with palm leaves in gold.

curru vehi: this honor belonged to the praetors, to whom the tribunes were inferior in dignity.

praetorem cui, etc.: commonly known as praetor peregrinus, a term which is not found in classic authors.

evenisset: the pluperfect tense here represents the future perfect indicative of the direct discourse.

16. Pannonicas: Pannonia, or Illyricum superius, conquered by cur paucis centurionibus, paucioribus tribunis in modum servorum oboedirent. Quando ausuros exposcere remedia, nisi novum et nutantem adhuc principem precibus vel armis adirent? Satis per tot annos ignavia peccatum, quod tricena aut quadragena stipendia senes et plerique truncato ex vulneribus corpore tolerent. Ne dimissis quidem finem esse militiae, sed apud vexillum tendentes alio vocabulo eosdem labores perferre. Ac si quis tot casus vita superaverit, trahi adhuc diversas in terras, ubi per nomen agrorum uligines paludum vel inculta montium accipiant. Enimvero militiam ipsam gravem infructuosam: denis in diem assibus animam et corpus aestimari; hinc vestem arma tentoria, hinc saevitiam centurionum et vacationes munerum redimi. At hercule verbera et vulnera, duram hiemem, exercitas aestates, bellum atrox aut sterilem pacem sempiterna.

paucis, etc.: there were six tribunes and sixty centurions to a legion.

3. ignavia peccatum: they had lost their rights by their own negligence.

tricena aut quadragena: the regular time of service for legionaries was twenty years; for praetorians, sixteen. At the end of this time they were entitled to honorable dismissal, honesta missio, with a bounty; but they were generally obliged, even after this discharge (dimissio), to continue in service as a privileged body of veterans, veterani, — known also as vexillarii (apud vexillum) from the standards, vexilla, to which each corps was attached.

4. eosdem labores: this is an exaggeration, for they were exempted from the heaviest duties, such as foraging, trenching, etc.

5. adhuc = insuper.

per nomen agrorum: the grants of land made to veterans at their discharge by way of bounty. The distance and worthlessness of these lands, they asserted, made the bounty more of a burden than a benefit to them, and they would have preferred bounties in cash, such as had formerly been given (isdem in castris praemium pecunia solveretur).

uligines paludum: Intr. 35 d.

6. denis assibus: the as was worth about a cent.

vestem arma tentoria: sc. emi; implied in redimi by a kind of zeugma. These the soldier was obliged to purchase out of his pay; food he seems to have received.

vacationes munerum, furloughs. redimi is used in a different sense with the two subjects, — buying off the cruelty by buying furloughs; cf. Hist. I. 46: locupletissimus quisque miles labore ac sacvitia fatigari, donec vacationem emeret.

8 Nec aliud levamentum quam si certis sub legibus militia

3 agitaverint. Depulsi aemulatione, quia suae quisque

8. certis . . . legibus, well-defined conditions.

singulos denarios: their pay (see above) was ten asses a day. The as was a copper coin; the denarius was originally a silver coin, as its name implies, worth ten asses; see note on quadringsiens, 8. 3. In the time of the Second Punic War the standard of the copper currency was lowered, so that it took sixteen asses to make a denarius; but the silver currency remained unaltered, so that now the as was worth about one cent, and the denarius nearly twenty cents.

sextus decimus stipendii annus: this had formerly been the term of service for the legionaries, as it still was for the praetorians.

9. binos denarios: the pay of the praetorians was legally double that of the legionaries; but by paying them in silver, while the legionaries were paid in copper, their pay was really more than three times as great — two denarii being nearly forty cents, while deni asses were only ten cents. The not unreasonable demand of the mutineers was the reduction of their term of service to its former length, payment according to the spirit of the law, cash bounties promptly paid, and the abolition or regulation of the nominally voluntary service after discharge.

10. non obtrectari, etc.: ironical — they have no disposition to belittle the hardships of service in the city.

11. contuberniis, etc.: i.e. were before their very eyes.

12. exprobrantes, displaying, by way of reproach.

2. eo, to that point or degree. The genitive after adverbs of place is common in the writers after Cicero.

miscere in unam: this would have been to destroy all discipline and organization: see 34. 4, where the first act of Germanicus was to order the mutineers discedere in manipulos. The object of the move was probably like that of a round-robin, to avoid individual responsibility.

legioni eum honorem quaerebant, alio vertunt atque una caespites, exstruunt tribunal quo magis conspicua sedes

Properantibus Blaesus advenit, increpabatque ac retinebat singulos, clamitans: 'Mea potius caede imbuite manus; levioze flagitio legatum interficietis quam ab imperatore desciscitis. Aut incolumis fidem legionum retinebo, aut iugulatus paenitentiam accelerabo.' Aggerabatur nihilo minus caespes, iamque pectori usque accreverat, cum tandem pervicacia victi inceptum omisere. Blae-sus multa dicendi arte non per seditionem et turbas desideria militum ad Caesarem ferenda ait, neque veteres

3. eum honorem: i.e. of being the one — retaining its individual organization, absorbing the other legions into itself, and giving its name to the united body.

alio: i.e. have recourse to another plan.

tres aquilas, etc.: the silver eagle was made by Marius the standard of each legion. Besides this each manipulus had a signum. It has been questioned whether a cohort had a separate standard, and the present passage has been explained as meaning the three manipular standards of the several cohorts. Caesar, however (B. G. II. 25), says: quartae cohortis . . . signifero interfecto, signo amisso, which seems to prove that the cohort had a standard and standard-bearer of its own.

4. tribunal: this was a raised platform used in Rome by the praetors and other magistrates for the administration of justice. As the consul and military tribunes exercised judicial power, there was a tribunal in every camp made of turf, which was used also for the purpose of addressing the soldiers; this was in the middle of the camp, at the left of the general's tent, praetorium. On this occasion the soldiers seem to have erected a new tribunal, probably in the middle of their own quarters.

sedes: the place where they collected their standards.

5. properantibus: best taken as dative.

levioze flagitio, etc.: a very condensed expression, — It will be a lighter fault for you to, etc.

legatum, commander: i.e. Blaesus. As governor of the province, and commander of its forces, his full title was legatus Augusti pro praetore, 'deputy of the emperor with praetorian powers' (Intr. 17).

19. aggerabatur: the manuscript reads aggerebatur, a much weaker expression: moreover, the compound, according to the usual orthography of the manuscript, should be adgerebatur.

2. multa . . . arte: ablative of quality.

veteres: i.e. in the time of the Republic.

ab imperatoribus priscis neque ipsos a divo Augusto parum in tempore, very inopportunately.

3. tenderent, meditentur: this change to present time in indirect discourse is common in Tacitus.
 Dräger attributes it to a desire to avoid similarity of ending; Pätzner, to the effort of the writer to place himself in imagination in the time of the occurrence, — a more probable explanation.

se coram, in his presence — as a regular, orderly delegation.

mandata, their message.

4. ut . . . fungeretur: hortatory subjunctive in indirect discourse.

ab sedecim annis, after sixteen years of service.

5. filius . . . orator, the fact that, etc. (Intr. 35 q).

expressa, extorted, agrees with the antecedent implied in quae.

20. Nauportum: Ober Laybach in Carniola. Lying upon the upper waters of the Save, it occupied the entrance to the province of Pan-nonia.

turbatum: sc. esse; object of accepere.

vexilla: bodies of troops detached on special service had as their standards vexilla, made of cloth, instead of metal signa, used in the legion. These standards were fixed in the ground, and to pull them up, convellere, was the signal for moving.

municipii instar: the municipium was a town which had received Roman citizenship, still retaining the management of its own local concerns. This municipal organization was gradually extended from Italy into the provinces; but as Pannonia had been only recently organized as a province (A.D. 10), the town in question had not yet received municipal privileges, alcipii instar erat, retinentis centuriones irrisu et contumeliis, postremo verberibus insectantur, praecipua in Aufdientum, Rufum praefectum castrorum ira, quem deréptum vehiculo sarcinis gravant aguntque primo in agmine, per ludibrium rogitanter an tam immensa onera, tam longa itinera libenter ferret. Quippe Rufus diu manipularis, dein centurio, mox castris praefectus, antiquam duramque militiam revocabat, vetus operis ac laboris et eo immitior, quia toleraverat. Horum adventu redintegratur seditio, et vagi circumiecta populabantur. Blaesus paucos, maxime praeda onustos, ad terrorem ceterorum affici verberibus, claudi carcere iubet; nam etiam tum legato a centurionibus et optimo quoque manipularium parebatur. Illi obniti trahentibus, though large enough for this purpose (municipii instar), and probably having a forum, or market-place, and Roman inhabitants. After being pillaged on this occasion, Nauportus never recovered its prosperity, and the colony of Emona, Laybach, shortly afterwards founded about fifteen miles to the northeast, prospered at its expense.

praefectum castrorum: praefectus is not the title of any special magistrate or officer, but is a general term for any officer, civil or military, appointed in charge of a special service, as a centurion or tribune placed in command of a camp, a detachment, a body of cavalry or of auxiliaries. The praefectus castrorum was appointed from among the primipilares, or chief centurions, with powers similar to those of a quartermaster. After the time of Domitian there was one for each legion, and he afterwards became the regular commander of the legion in place of the legatus. Marquardt, Röm. Staatsverwaltung, II. 443. The word is here a substantive, governing the genitive; below it is used with its participial construction, governing the dative.

onera: the regular load of the common soldier was sixty pounds; the day's march, twenty miles.

2. manipularis: a common soldier, member of a manipulus. There were thirty manipuli in a legion, each commanded by two centurions.

centurio: the centurions, like our non-commissioned officers, were taken from the ranks, and rarely reached any higher grade. The tribunes were taken from the aristocratic classes.

vetus operis, an old hand at the work (Intr. 35 e). Cf. scientiae caerimoniarumque vetus VI. 12. 2, and vetus regnandi, VI. 44. 1.

21. 2. etiam tum: afterwards the mutiny reached such a height that the centurions had to flee for their lives.

3. illi: those who were arrested.

prensare circumstantium genua, ciere modo nomina singulorum, modo centuriam quisque cuius manipularis erat, cohortem, legionem, eadem omnibus imminere claustrantes. Simul probra in legatum cumulant, caelum ac deos obtestantur, nihil reliqui faciunt quo minus invidiam misericordiam metum et iras permoverent. 5 Accurritur ab universis, et carcere effracto solvunt vincula desertoresque ac rerum capitalium damnatos sibi iam miscent.

22 Flagrantior inde vis, plures seditioni duces. Et Vibulenus quidam gregarius miles, ante tribunal Blaesi adlevatus circumstantium umeris, apud turbatos et quid pararet intentos 'Vos quidem' inquit 'his innocentibus et miserrimis lucem et spiritum reddidistis: sed quis fratri meo vitam, quis fratrem mihi reddit? quem missum ad vos a Germanico exercitu de communibus commodis nocte proxima iugulavit per gladiatores suos, 2 quos in exitium militum habet atque armat. Responde, Blaese, ubi cadaver abieceris: ne hostes quidem sepultura invident. Cum osculis, cum lacrimis dolorem meum nomina singulorum, individuals by name, contrasted with centuriam, which was appealed to as a body.

quisque: taken with the subject of ciere: cuius relates to centuriam, each man on the century to which he belonged. The more usual order would be cuius quisque.

4. nihil reliqui faciunt, leave nothing undone.

5. universis, all in a body. iam, already: i.e. they have reached this point of demoralization.

22. tribunal Blaesi: the regular tribunal of the camp, not that constructed by the mutineers (18.4). turbatos, intermingled, as a mob.

quid pararet: depending upon the idea of inquiring implied in intentos, watching eagerly to see.

a Germanico exercitu: a lucky guess of Vibulenus; the German army had revolted, although he could not have heard of it.

gladiatores: bodies of gladiators were kept by governors of provinces for purposes of entertainment and display.

2. sepultura: ablative of specification or possibly of separation, after the idea of withholding implied in invident, grudge. We should expect also a dative of the person; but the construction here found is common in writers of this period.

implevero, me quoque trucidari iube, dum interfectos nullum ob scelus, sed quia utilitati legionum consulebamus, hi sepeliant.' Incendebat haec fletu et pectus <sup>23</sup> atque os manibus verberans. Mox disiectis quorum <sup>2</sup> perumeros sustinebatur, praecipit et singulorum pedibus advolutus tantum consternationis invidiaeque concivit, ut pars militum gladiatores qui et servitio Blaesi erant, pars ceteram eiusdem familiam vincirent, alii ad quaerendum corpus effunderentur. Ac ni propere neque <sup>3</sup> corpus ullum reperiri et servos adhibitis cruciatibus abnuere caedem, neque illi fuisse umquam fratrem pernoctasset, haud multum ab exitio legati aberant. Tribunos tamen ac praefectum castrorum extrudere, sarcinae fugientium direptae, et centurio Lucilius interficitur, cui militibus facilius vocabulum 'Cedo alteram' indiderant, quia fracta vite in tergo militis alteram clara voce ac rursus aliam poscebat. Ceteros latebrae <sup>5</sup> ere, uno retento Clemente Iulio, qui perferendis militum mandatis habebatur idoneus ob promptum ingenium. Quin ipsae inter se legiones octava et quinta <sup>6</sup>

3. interfectos: himself and his brother.

23. incendebat, etc.: the tears and other expressions of grief added fire to his words; "incendiary talk."

fletu . . . verberans: Intr. 35 r.

2. disiectis: agrees with his understood, antecedent of quorum. He pushed apart the men on whose shoulders he was standing, and dropped to the ground.

pedibus advolutus: cf. 13. 7. familiam, body of slaves.

3. aberant: the indicative of apodosis is joined with the pluperfect subjunctive of protasis, to indicate that the action was actually begun, and on the point of being completed. So with parabant, 6.

4. vocabulum, nickname.

Cedo alteram: sc. vitem, Give us another; the old imperative, common in colloquial language.

vite: branches of vine were used in the army for flogging Roman citizens; cudgels, for other soldiers. Livy says of Scipio at Numantia: si Romanus esset, vitibus, si extraneus, fustibus cecidit (Ep. 57). The vine-stick was the badge of the centurion's office.

poscebat: it was his habit.

5. perferendis . . . mandatis: dative with idoneus, a post-Augustan usage. See 26. 1.

decima ferrum parabant, dum centurionem cognomento Sirpicum illa morti deprecatur, quintadecumani tuentur, ni miles nonanus preces et adversum aspernantis minas interiecisset.

praetoriis cohortibus: see note on Seius Strabo, 7. 3.

2. delecto milite: i.e. out of the other praetorian cohorts.

3. praetoriani equitis: a turma equitum was attached to each century of these praetorians.

robora Germanorum: these were mounted guards composed of German mercenaries. Augustus dismissed them after the defeat of Varus; perhaps he recalled them into service, or this may have been done by Tiberius.

Aelius Seianus: he succeeded his father as praetorian prefect, and ruled the empire for several years in the name of Tiberius. See IV. 1 ff, and, for his death, the passage from Dio, which follows Book V.

iuveni: depending upon rector, where the genitive might be expected. imperatori and ceteris are in a similar construction. (Intr. 35 f.)

ceteris: i.e. the soldiers; periculorum: i.e. punishments, in case they should misbehave. The context seems to show that it is the praetorians, not the legionaries, that are referred to.

4. quasi per officium, as if to show him honor, relating to what follows. This was, nevertheless, nothing but their duty as soldiers.

insignibus: decorations and badges of individual soldiers.

Responsum est a contione, mandata Clementi centu- 26 rioni quae perferret. Is orditur de missione a sedecim a annis, de praemiis finitae militiae, ut denarius diurnum stipendium foret, ne veterani sub vexillo haberentur.

imitarentur: subj. after quamquam (Intr. 35 f.).

contumaciae propiores: really in a spirit of defiance manifested in their looks.

25. firmant and iubent: the mutineers. The praetorians were kept out (cf. 30. 1).

2. stabat: emphatic and picturesque from its position. A statue in the Louvre, in the attitude here described, is believed by Stahr to represent Drusus on this occasion.

illi: the ringleaders who stood in front.

3. plurima bella: Tiberius had conquered Pannonia in four campaigns (B.C. 12-9), and had afterwards, with Germanicus, suppressed a formidable insurrection there and in Dalmatia, known as the Batonian War (A.D. 6-9), gravissimum omnium externorum bellorum post Punicam, Suet. Tib. 16.

senatui: Tiberius, as we have seen, was careful to observe the forms and maintain the still surviving powers of the Republic; it belonged to the Senate to reward and to punish (neque gratiae neque severitatis expertem haberi).

26. 2. orditur: in relation to these demands see notes to chap.

arbitrium . . . obtenderet: i.e. gave as an excuse for not acting the fact that the decision lay with them.

3. necem cunctis permitti: not strictly true, of course, for the death penalty could be inflicted only by the legatus, exercising the emperor's imperium.

olim: when he was their commander.

4. rettulisse, repeated. It was the same old trick, never to send a representative who had the power to redress grievances.

5. filios familiarum: the technical term to describe sons who were in potestate patris, which condition continued during the life of the father, unless relaxed by an act of emancipation. There is, therefore, a tone of bitter contempt — not only the son instead of the father, but himself not master of himself, sui iuris. This is of course merely an insult, and has nothing to do with the limitation of Drusus' power, because public and private relations were kept wholly distinct, and a son in potestate might exercise authority over his father: see the interesting anecdote about Fabius Maximus, Liv. XXIV. 44.

id: relates to what follows. The emphasis is upon commoda; punishments and hardships he could decide upon himself, but favors must be referred to the Senate.

6. an, or, as if the preceding clause were put in interrogative form.

sub dominis: for penes dominos.

27. ut quis . . . occurreret: the subjunctive expresses repeated action, the clause being connected with what follows, — using threatening gestures as they met any of the supporters of Drusus. Only a few of the praetorians were in the camp; cf. 25. 1 u.

manus intentantes, threatening (stretching their hands towards, = shaking their fists).

causam: Intr. 35 g; cf. 30. 1, documentum fidei; II. 64. 6, causas bello. There are a few examples in earlier writers (e.g. Hor. Sat. I. 4. 10, ut magnum); but the classical writers regularly used a relative clause in such cases. Drä-

Cn. Lentulo, quod is ante alios aetate et gloria belli firmare Drusum credebatur et illa militiae flagitia primus aspernari. Nec multo post digredientem cum Caesare ac provisu periculi hiberna castra repetentem circumsistunt, rogitantes quo pergeret, ad imperatorem an ad patres, ut illic quoque commodis legionum adversaretur; simul ingruunt, saxa iaciunt. Iamque lapidis ictu cruentus et exitii certus accursu multitudinis quae cum Druso advenerat protectus est.

Noctem minacem et in scelus erupturam fors lenivit; nam luna claro repente caelo visa languescere. Id miles rationis ignarus omen praesentium accepit, suis laboribus defectionem sideris adsimulans, prospereque cessura quae pergerent, si fulgor et claritudo deae redderetur. Igitur aeris sono, tubarum cornuumque concentu strepere; prout splendidior obscuriorve, laetari aut mae-ger (Historische Syntax, § 309) calls it a Græcism.

Lentulo: his death is related IV. 44. 1. He was probably consul B.C. 18, which, if the legal age for the consulship during the empire was thirty-seven, as Mommsen thinks probable (Röm. St. I. 473), would make him now nearly seventy. The expression ante alios aetate would hardly apply to the Gnaeus Lentulus who was consul B.C. 1.

2. digredientem cum Caesare: Drusus was probably accompanying him to the gate outside of which the praetorians, multitudo quae cum Druso advenerat, were stationed; these troops, seeing his danger, came to his rescue, as afterwards described.

provisu: a word used only in the ablative, and peculiar to Tacitus.

hiberna castra: see note on castris aestivis, 16. 2. It was probably within the walls of Pœtiovio.

28. erupturam, ready to break out.

visa languescere: this eclipse took place Sept. 26.

2. quae pergerent: see Appendix I.

aeris sono: the familiar custom of ignorant people, who think that the evil spirit which is obscuring the heavenly body can thus be driven away.

3. ve . . . aut: i.e. (with the usual distinction between these conjunctions) whether the moon was brighter or more obscure, in either case their spirits went with it; in one case they exulted, in the other they lamented.

4. in sapientiam, to the account of good sense.

5. vigiliis, watch, patrol; stationibus, posts, pickets; custodiis, guards.

6. Percennione, etc.: the oath of the Roman soldier was taken personally to his commander.

emeritis, after discharge.

Neronibus et Drusis: not merely alluding to the illustrious families — the Claudian and Livian gentes, to which the Neros and Drusi belonged: we see besides this the tacit recognition of an imperial or royal family.

7. novissimi in culpam: they either were, or were adroitly represented as being, less guilty than the others.

in culpam . . . ad paenitentiam: Intr. 35 r.

tarda: i.e. of fulfilment; the advice is, do not wait to negotiate in a body: make your peace individually (privatam).

mereare and recipias are apodosis to a protasis implied in privatam: if you make your submission as individuals, you earn and you receive favor at once.

29. rudis, untrained.

dicendi, nobilitate ingenua incusat priora, probat praesentia; negat se terrore et minis vinci: flexos ad modestiam si videat, si supplices audiat, scripturum patri ut placatus legionum preces exciperet. Certatum inde sententiis, cum alii opperiendos legatos atque interim comitate permulcendum militem censerent, alii fortioribus remediis agendum: nihil in vulgo modicum; terrere, ni paveant; ubi pertimuerint, impune contemni; dum superstitio urgeat, adiciendos ex duce metus sublati seditionis auctoribus. Promptum ad asperiora ingenium Druso erat; vocatos Vibulenum et Percennium interfici iubet. Tradunt plerique intra tabernaculum ducis obrutos, alii corpora extra vallum abiecta ostentui. nobilitate ingenua: he had the dignity of bearing which often accompanies the consciousness of high birth. The busts and statues of Drusus represent him as strongly resembling his father, especially in the characteristic compression of the lips.

2. orantibus: ablative absolute, with no expressed subject: at their request (Intr. 35 o).

rursum idem: the younger Blaesus, who had been their messenger before.

cohorte, suite; see VI. 9.

Iustus Catonius: he was praetorian praefect under Claudius, and was put to death by the intrigues of the Empress Messalina.

primi ordinis: i.e. of the first cohort of the legion, which outranked the others. The first cen-turion of the first cohort was called primus pilus, and ranked with the higher officers.

3. certatum inde: i.e. among the counsellors of Drusus.

nihil . . . modicum, no half-way measures.

terrere . . . paveant: cf. pavebant terrebantque, 25. 2.

ex duce: proceeding from, or inspired by, the commander. There would be an ambiguity in ducis, which would naturally be a subjective genitive.

4. promptum ad asperiora, etc.: Tacitus calls him (76. 5) vis sanguine nimis gaudens. According to Dio Cassius (LVII. 13), Tiberius frequently reproved the intemperate and brutal disposition of his son, — ἀσελγέστατος καὶ ἀμύτατος. He adds that the sharpest swords were called Apogeuand. Nevertheless, many amiable traits appear in him, especially his constant affection for his cousin and adopted brother Germanicus, of whom he might easily have been jealous.

80. documentum: cf. causam, 27. 1 n.

3. nec frustra, etc.: this is the reasoning of the soldiers, as is shown by the construction (indirect discourse).

piaculo, guilt; cf. Verg. Aen. VI. 569, commissa piacula.

4. epistulas: for epistulam, after the analogy of litteras.

desolatus, abandoned.

5. considerant = consederant: an archaic form.

81. Germanicae legiones: this mutiny was even more formidable than that of Pannonia; the army was larger, there was an active and warlike enemy watching for an opportunity, and the commander of the province, Germanicus, by his personal qualities, and his official authority, as well as by his relation to the imperial family, might have been a formidable rival to the unpopular emperor (Intr. 26 δ). The authority of Germanicus extended over the tres Galliae (Intr. 18. 16), and also over what was left of the province of Germany (Intr. 18. 21. 23), established by Drusus (B.C. 12), and reconquered by Arminius (A.D. 9). The army of Germany consisted of eight legions, with their quota of auxiliaries, stationed upon the left bank of the Rhine.

quirit daretque se legionibus vi sua cuncta tracturis. Duo apud ripam Rheni exercitus erant; cui nomen superiori, sub C. Silio legato, inferiorem A. Caecina curabat. tracturis: see Appendix, 1.

2. superiori . . . inferiorem: Intr. 18. 16. The army of Upper Germany took no part in the mutiny.

C. Silio: for his death, see IV. 18, 19.

agendo censui: i.e. levying the tribute, which was based upon an assessment of property, census. An annual tribute, stipendium, of forty million sesterces ($2,000,000), had been imposed by Julius Caesar upon the conquered Gauls. The plural Galliarum is used to designate the three divisions of Gaul.

3. quibus Silius moderabatur: i.e. those of Upper Germany.

alienae: i.e. of the army of Lower Germany.

unetvicesimanis, etc.: the legions of Lower Germany were the I. (Germanica, afterwards Minervia); V. (Alauda, afterwards Macedonica); XX. (Valeria Victrix), and XXI. (Rapax).

Ubiorum: this German tribe or nation had entered into alliance with Caesar (B. G. IV. 16), and had been settled by Agrippa on the left bank of the Rhine, where their chief town was afterwards made a Roman colony, Colonia Agrippina (Cologne), named in honor of the granddaughter of Agrippa, the younger Agrippina. This was the first example of a policy, which afterwards became common, of settling German tribes upon lands on the frontier, on the condition of rendering military service. Such settlers were in the later times of the empire called laeti, and their lands terrae laeticæ.

4. vernacula: this word has generally been interpreted in this passage to mean the lower classes of the city, as Dio says (LVII. 5), ἐκ τοῦ ἀστυκῆς ὄχλου . . . οἱ πλείους ἦσαν. This seems to agree with its classical meaning, native, vernacular; the word is not found until the third century A.D. with a signification cognate to verna, "belonging to a slave," "slavish." Mommsen shows (Hermes, XIX., 1884), that in military relations vernaculus has a peculiar and technical meaning, being used to designate troops (legiones vernaculae) composed of persons who were not Roman citizens when enrolled, but who received citizenship upon enlistment, thus maintaining the principle that the legions, as distinguished from the auxiliary corps, were always composed of citizens. According to Mommsen, these troops, hastily levied after the disaster of Varus, were taken from those members of the city populace who did not possess citizenship. Suetonius says of Augustus (Oct. 25) : libertino milite, praeterquam Romae incendiolorum causa et si tumultus in graviore annona metueretur, his usus est; semel ad praesidium coloniarum Illyricum contingentium; iterum ad tutelam ripae Rheni fluminis, the latter being the case in question.

maturam missionem, etc. : the same demands as those of the Pannonian soldiers. Cf. 17. 8.

iuvenes : those in active service.

5. respicientium : the Pannonian legions were so near Italy, that they might expect to be promptly crushed by new forces brought against them.

imperatores : not emperors, but commanders; referring to Drusus and his son, their present commander, both of whom bore the name Germanicus. The name, derived from that of the province, was also borne by the brother of Germanicus, the emperor Claudius : senatus . . . decrevit Germanici cognomen ipsi [Drusus] posterisque eius (Suet. Claud. 1) ; sometimes also by Tiberius.

82. obviam ibat : i.e. the emergency.

vecordia : the prefix ve expresses negative, and often positive evil, as in Vediovis, the evil Jupiter; vecors, with mind led astray. Cf. Aulus Gellius, V. 12.

constantiam, presence of mind.

 the Pannonian legions, but governed themselves.

liberos: the number is given by Suetonius (Calig. 7.) as nine in all: there were now three boys living, Nero, born A.D. 6; Drusus, born A.D. 7; and Gaius (the Emperor Caligula), born A.D. 12; all of these were conspicuous in the closing years of the reign of Tiberius, and the deaths of the two eldest are among the most serious crimes imputed to the emperor. Three boys, between Drusus and Gaius, had died in infancy. There were afterwards born three girls: Agrippina, the mother of the Emperor Nero; Drusilla and Julia Livilla.

in converse, a brave soldier and an able general, a pronounced panegyrist, moreover, of the old republican system, and in every respect the most popular prince of the imperial house.' Mommsen. He conquered Germany, and died, B.C. 9, from a fall with his horse.

patrum: Tiberius, his paternal uncle by birth, but his father by adoption. When speaking of their natural kinship, Tacitus uses the former term; when of legal relation, he calls them father and son.

odiis: this is the constant assertion of Tacitus, but there is no evidence of it in any recorded action of Tiberius. Evidently the two men were uncongenial to each other, but the attitude of the emperor appears to have been coldly just.

4. libertatem redditurus: see II. 82; also note above. Suetonius (Tib. 50) speaks of a letter written by him to Tiberius, and betrayed by the latter to Augustus, qua secum de cogendo ad restituendam libertatem Augusto agebat. There is no doubt that he sympathized with the aristocratic constitution of the Republic rather than the new monarchy; but this incident can hardly have been true, for it is certain that he retained the favor and confidence of Augustus to the last.

5. civile: this word is used to designate acts and disposition becoming a citizen,—what we may call a republican temper.

6. muliebres offensiones: the imperious Livia (whose favorite son was Tiberius) had as little sympathy with the ambitious and hot-tempered (paulo commotior) Agrippina, as the cold Tiberius with the genial Germanicus.

nisi quod: there is an ellipsis of thought here,—a violence of temper which we should condemn, but that, etc.; cf. Agr. 6., nisi quod in bona uxore tanto maior laus, quanto in mala plus culpa est.

84. proximos: the members of his suite or cohort. See App. I.

giance to those states near which he happened to be when he heard the news; then, learning of the mutiny, hastened to the camp, without waiting to visit the other Gallic states. This is the first recorded instance of the oath of allegiance imposed upon provincials.

in verba eius: see note on in verba iuravere, 7. 3.

2. obvias: sc. legiones; compare the approach of Drusus to the Pannonian camp, 24. 4.

audiri coepere: Tacitus never uses the passive form, coepit sum, with the passive infinitive.

3. inseruerunt: i.e. into their mouths. Tacitus almost always uses the form in -ere for the third person plural of the perfect indicative. Notice the contrast in action expressed by inseruerunt and ostendebant.

4. sic: i.e. as they were, the cohorts and maniples mixed up; they could hear better, they said (responsum), if crowded close to the speaker.

vexilla: each cohort had three of these, corresponding to the number of its maniples, besides the signa, which belonged to cohort and maniples individually. They had refused to form by maniples, that is, in regular military order, but slowly obeyed the order to group themselves by cohorts, — still crowding in a disorderly mass, but each military division by itself.

5. flexit: see note on obstrinxit, 14. 6.

quae . . . fecisset: Tiberius had commanded in Germany after the death of his brother Drusus (B.C. 9), although his principal military services had been in Rætia and Pannonia.

35. ubi: sc. esset; depending upon rogitans.

modestia, discipline.

tribunos: nothing has been said of any violence towards the tribunes, but it appears from 32. 6 of authority.

indiscretis, confused.

adversus otium: i.e. without necessity; but to keep the men busy, and thus out of mischief.

2. mederetur: depends upon orabant, which also (by neglect of concinnity, Intr. 35 r) governs the accusatives mortem, etc. The sense of this very condensed passage is,
—that he would not let them die in the midst of their sufferings, but would grant them rest, and that not in poverty.

3. legatam: see 8. 3.

faustis . . . ominibus: i.e. declaring that they had nothing against him personally. Cf. faustis in Cae- sarem ominibus, V. 4. 3. promptos: sc. se; see App. I.

Dio says (LVII. 5), τὸν Γερμανικὸν forms are favorites with Tacitus.

Cf. coepit, etc.

mon in Livy also.

deferebat . . . ni, was upon the point of, etc.; but. Some commentators (e.g. Stahr), in their eager partisanship for Tiberius, represent this act of Germanicus as mere display, and assert that he readily allowed himself to be disarmed. It is cer-ni proximi prensam dextram vi attinuissent. Extrema 6 eandem traherent: destinatum excidio Ubiorum oppidum, imbutasque praeda manus in direptionem Galliarum erupturas. Augebat metum gnarus Romanae seditionis et, si omitteretur ripa, invasurus hostis; at si auxilia et socii adversum abscedentis legiones arma-rentur, civile bellum suscipi. Periculosa severitas, flagitain that there was an element of weakness and ostentation in his character, but there is no reason for questioning his sincerity here, and the action was consistent with his whole career. When we consider how many emperors were afterwards made by just such circumstances as these, — and some of them on this very spot, — we see that Germanicus resisted a real temptation, and did a real service to the state. His personal popularity would have made him, at the head of eight legions, a formidable rival to his unpopular uncle.

6. extrema, etc.: the soldiers were irregularly grouped by cohorts (34. 4), and the crowded mass further off is contrasted with the few bold mutineers who left the main body, and pressed up close to where Germanicus stood.

addito: Intr. 35.

acutiorem: i.e. than his own.

7. spatium: i.e. of time.

36. parari: i.e. by the mutineers. — oppidum: afterwards Colonia Agrippina, Cologne. The summer camp was near this town.

2. gnarus . . . hostis: i.e. the Germans. The fact that they were acquainted, etc. (Intr. 35 q).

omitteretur, should be left unguarded, by the departure of the mutineers to plunder Gaul. The subjunctive of protasis depending on a future participle is found in Livy and later writers.

auxilia: the auxiliaries now in the army; socii: the forces which might be raised among the allied states of Gaul, such as the Ædui, Remi, and Lingones, who were within the territorial limits of the province, but nominally independent and not in strict law subject to Rome. The inhabitants of the provinces seem to have been better disposed than the Roman legionaries; cf. 39. 8.

suscipi: the present tense implies that calling out this levy, etc., would be in itself an act of civil war.

tiosa largitio ; seu nihil militi sive omnia concedentur, in ancipiti res publica.

- 4 Igitur volutatis inter se rationibus placitum ut epistulae nomine principis scriberentur : missionem dari vicena stipendia meritis ; exauctorari qui sena dena fecissent ac retineri sub vexillo ceterorum immunes nisi propulsandi hostis ; legata quae petiverant exsolvi duplicarique.

3. concedentur : see App. I.

4. volutatis : the same figure as in the English turn over in one's mind.

stipendia . . . meritis : stipendium mereri (lit. to earn pay) was to serve a full campaign ; this means, therefore, to those who had served twenty years.

exauctorari : this differed from the full discharge (missionem) given to those who had served twenty years, in that those who received it were still held to service as vexillarii (see note on tricena, 17. 3) ; as this obligation had formerly been imposed on those who had served the full twenty years, the present demand was really a shortening of the service by four years.

ceterorum, all other duties : neuter, limiting immunes : it would seem that the veterans had, by an abuse, been subjected to the same obligations as other soldiers.

duplicari : Suetonius says (Tib. 48) that this was the only donation given by Tiberius to the soldiers except after the fall of Sejanus.

The frugal disposition of Tiberius was undoubtedly often carried to the extent of parsimony and even niggardliness, and this was a leading cause of his unpopularity. On several occasions, however, he showed a prompt and wise liberality : see II. 47, 48, 86 ; IV. 64.

87. in tempus, for the emergency. Cf. ad tempus, I. 2 n.

tribunos : these officers had the charge of all the details of military administration in their legions.

2. quintani, etc. : these two legions began the mutiny : see 31. 3. They were led to winter quarters to Vetera, Xanten, sixty miles below Cologne ; the first and twentieth to Cologne itself.

contracta, got together.

3. turpi agmine, a shameful march : explained by de imperatore rapti.

fisci : the baskets in which the money was carried : the word was used for the emperor's special treasury, or privy purse (the treasury of peratore rapti inter signa interque aquilas veherentur. Germanicus superiorem ad exercitum profectus secundam 4 et tertiam decimam et sextam decimam legiones nihil cunctatas sacramento adigit. Quartadecimani paulum 5 dubitaverant; pecunia et missio quamvis non flagitantibus oblata est.

Deinde intumescente 3 motu profugus repertusque, postquam intuitae latebrae, praesidium ab audacia mutuatur: non praefectum ab iis, sed Germanicum ducem, sed Tiberium imperatorem violari. Simul exterritis qui obstiterant, raptum vexil-the republic being called aerarium), from which it has passed into the modern word fiscal. It was the custom, on a march, to deposit money bags with the standards. Mommsen (Hermes, 1878, p. 256) thinks that there is an error in ascribing this conduct to the first and twentieth legions, — that it was the leaders of the mutiny, the fifth and twenty-first.

4. secundam, etc.: these were the legions of Upper Germany.

28. in Chaucis: this nation inhabited the shore of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Weser, the modern East Friesland. Tacitus (Germ. 35) describes them in his time as populus inter Germanos nobilissimus, while Pliny, on the other hand (N. H. XVI. 1) speaks of them as a wretched race of fishermen. They were subdued by Tiberius in one of his German campaigns (Vell. Pat. II. 106), and a garrison was left among them after the defeat of Varus.

vexillarii: these are not the vexillarii described in the note on tricena aut quadragena, 17. 3, veterans serving an additional term, but those mentioned in the note on vexilla, 20. 1, legionary soldiers stationed on a detached post. These also had a vexillum for their standard, and were called vexillarii.

discordium, disaffected; i.e. those engaged in the mutiny, the I, V., etc.

2. concesso iure, legitimate power: i.e. any power expressly put in his hands; for only the commander of the army had the power to punish with death. This praefect was not the regular legionary praefectus castrorum (20. 1 n.), but a subordinate officer (centurion) placed in charge of the post.

3. sed Germanicum, etc.: their offence was greater than mutiny; it was treason. Cf. the language of Blaesus, 18. 5.

4. ad ripam: sc. Rheni. decessisset: representing a future perfect of direct discourse, whomsoever should depart.

in hiberna: at Cologne; see 39. 2.

89. legati: the ones mentioned 14. 4.

regressum: i.e. from the army of Upper Germany; see 37. 4.

aram Ubiorum: probably in the oppidum itself; this altar was dedicated to Augustus.

2. prima atque vicesima: see 37. 3.

sub vexillo: construed with hiemabant, referring to those who had recently obtained their conditional discharge, 36. 4.

4. falsis: dative, — to subject to accusations, however false they may be.

Munatium Plancum: consul A.D. 13; he was son of the Plancus addressed by Horace (Od. I. 7).

auctorem, as being the author.

senatus consulti: the imagined ordinance in question.

vexillum: it has been much debated whether this was the vexillum under which the veterans mentioned above were serving, or the scarlet banner, χίτων κόκκινος, of the commander, which served as a signal for battle (quod erat insigne, cum ad arma concurrere oporteret, Cæsar. B. G. II. 20). In favor of its being the general's standard is the consideration that it is hard to see why the other should be in the general's house, and also the illustration it would give of the insubordination of the soldiers, — having possession of the standard of the commander, they would perform his functions for themselves, just as they had previously directed the posting of guards, etc. (32. 6). On the other hand, it is more natural to suppose that the vexillum is the one previously mentioned, while the phrase in domo Germanico situm seems to imply that it was out of its usual place; the scarlet vexillum would be there as a matter of course.

tradere vexillum: an act of weakness on the part of Germanicus.

6. fuga: ablative of deprivation; impedire regularly takes ab.

7. religione, reverence for the standards, which had a certain sacredness in the eyes of a Roman soldier.

rarum: relates to what follows, as is regularly the case with an adjective standing in apposition with a clause, as here.

altaria: properly a larger altar, but here used as equivalent to ara. The altars, with the standards, stood in the principia of the camp.

8. luce, etc.: as soon as it was light enough for recognition.

perducere: impero regularly takes ut with the subjunctive.

imperat . . . recepit: the historical present easily passes into the perfect.

fatalem: explained by deum ira. neque militum: sc. esse, depending upon the idea of speaking, implied in increpans: the frenzy was not theirs, but was the work of the gods.

ius legationis: sc. violatum; referring to the sanctity and inviolability of the office of ambassador, recognized in all ages.

legio: the first, in whose camp Plancus had been assaulted.

40. eo in metu, the fear caused by this, or better, this consternation.

superiorem exercitum pergeret, ubi obsequia et contra rebellis auxilium : satis superque missione et pecunia et mollibus consultis peccatum ; vel si vilis ipsi salus, cur filium parvulum, cur gravidam coniugem inter furentes et omnis humani iuris violatores haberet ? illos saltem avo et rei publicae redderet. satis . . . peccatum : sc. esse, enough blunders had been made. The staff of Germanicus regard his conduct as pusillanimous.

2. filium parvulum : afterwards the Emperor Gaius (Caligula), now two years old. Dio Cassius (LVII. 5) says that the soldiers seized both him and Agrippina, restored her to her husband, but kept the boy as a hostage. This statement is perhaps confirmed by chap. 44, where Germanicus excuses the absence of his wife, but promises the return of the boy. It would seem that, for whatever reason, Caligula was left with the army.

avo : Tiberius.

3. divo Augusto ortam : see Intr. 26 d.

4. incedebat : the wretchedness of the situation was increased by their being obliged to go on foot. At the same time the word opens the sentence with a certain dignity, and its position makes the picture more vivid ; cf. stabat Drusus, 25. 2.

circum : an adverb.

qui manebant : their husbands and friends.

41. Caesaris : limits facies in the predicate.

contuberniis : the ablative without preposition after verbs of motion is characteristic of the poets and later prose writers.

2. triste : a substantive ; sad spectacle.

uxoris and comitatus : limiting nihil ; nothing which belonged to, etc.

Treveros: the seat of this old Gallic tribe was the modern Trèves.

et externae fidei: if the text is correct, fidei is to be taken as a dative expressing purpose (Intr. f); to surrender themselves into the protection of foreigners, — a disgrace to the Roman army. Most editors, however, would strike out the et, and consider externae fidei as a genitive of characteristic.

3. Drusus: their former commander, father of her husband Germanicus. In these nominatives (Drusus, ipsa, infans) there is a peculiar change of construction; not merely was the memory at work, but the hero himself was present to their mind's eye. It also emphasizes the relationship (Intr. 35 §).

in castris genitus: this was the popular belief; but, according to Suetonius (Cal. 8), he was born at Antium.

eo tegmine: the caliga was a heavy coarse shoe, covering the whole foot, worn by the common soldiers; while persons of rank wore the finer and lighter calceus.

4. quam: for the more regular ac.

invidia, grudge. They grudged them the honor of sheltering their commander's wife and child; cf.
obus Gallis, 44. 1.

42. patre: his adoptive father, Tiberius, referred to below by il-lum.

2. liberos: in fact, only one child was with him.

offerrem: the protasis is implied in pro gloria vestra; I would gladly offer them if it would subserve your glory.

nunc, as it is.

quidquid istud scelus, whatever crime on your part (that is, which, etc.). Note the characteristic use of istud, the so-called demonstrative of the second person.

4. proiecta, cast away; trampled under foot.

hostium quoque ius, the rights which even enemies possess.

5. Quirites, fellow-citizens; implying their dismissal from service. This incident, which occurred just before the battle of Thapsus, B.C. 46, is related by Suetonius (Iul. 70).

Actiacas: referring to a mutiny at Brundisium shortly after the battle of Actium (Suet. Oct. 17).

eosdem, on their level. The use of nondum may point to his expectation of the throne, or to anticipated military distinction.

Hispaniae Suriaeve: he was unknown to these; if you were Spanish or Syrian soldiers, which you are not.

indignum erat: the indicative is regularly used in apodosis in expressions denoting possibility, propriety, etc. A. & G. 308 c.

6. illa . . . tu: addressing one of the legions directly, and pointing to the other. illa would regularly relate to the one first mentioned; but the first legion was an old one, which could hardly have received its standards from Tiberius; while the twentieth may easily have been levied during his wars. In speech, moreover, the use of the pronouns depends more upon the actual positions of the persons referred to, than upon their place in the sentence. The use of the word tirones below would imply that one of the legions was newly levied. See also 31. 4, vernacula multitudo.

7. laeta omnia: he had not heard of the Pannonian revolt.

includi legatos: the climax — centuriones . . . tribunos . . . legatos — seems to point to military legati. But no mention has been made of any violence against them; while the assault upon Plancus, a legatus from the senate (39. 4), could be very well described by these words. As the senatorial legati are shown in the same chapter to have already departed, we must suppose that the allusion is rhetorical, or betrays confusion of memory. See note on si legatos, 43-5.

flumina: the Rhine, upon the borders of which they were.

48. ferrum illud: 35. 5.

melius et amantius: sc. fecit.

2. exercitui meo conscius, implicated with my army. 'As responsible for its discipline, he treats himself as involved in what he had not prevented.' Furneaux.

quidem: restrictive, giving the clause a concessive force: even if he left my death unavenged.

Vari: the defeat of Varus was five years before, A.D. 9; and to avenge this disaster was the special aim of Germanicus in all his expeditions.

3. neque enim, etc.: the use of neque for ne, and that of ut after sinere are extremely rare.

Belgarum: nothing is known of this allusion. It may be that the Belgians, as being nearest to Germany, had, for their own security, voluntarily (quamquam offerentium) offered assistance after the defeat of Varus.

claritudo: an archaic word, of frequent occurrence in the Annals.

4. imago: used here of a mental image; for it is not likely that the legion would have an actual image of Drusus, as some have supposed. It is explained by tui memoria.

istis, those of yours: i.e. of Drusus; the soldiers who were already repentant, or who were assumed by him to be so (cf. novissimis, 28. 7). gloria, desire for glory. Cf. 8. 2 n.

5. alia, changed.

si legatos: there seems to be a confusion in the writer's mind. The senatorial legati were already safely on their way home (39. 8), and no imprisonment of legionary legati has been mentioned. The phrase includit legatos (42. 7), as well as the present expression, are — so far as our knowledge goes — merely rhetorical.

turbidos: the ringleaders (seditiosissimum quemque, 44. 3), who are not to be admitted to repentance.

44. alumnus: the youthful Caligula was a camp pet.

2. reditum: the accusative is regularly used with excuso to designate the person or the act apologized for; here it denotes the thing that she was excused from doing.

partum: nothing is known of any child of Agrippina born this year; if there was any, it must have been short-lived.

exsequerentur: a hint for the massacre which followed.

3. vinctos: a plural adjective with a collective noun is rare before Livy.

legatum legionis primae until the Gallic campaigns of Caesar the legion was commanded by its six tribunes. Caesar detailed one of his legati to the command of each legion, and from this time the legatus legionis was the regular commander of the legion, until superseded in the second century by the praefectus castrorum (see note, 20. 1).

4. pro contione, in the manner of a public meeting. The camp had a forum in front of the tribunal (18. 4 n.), where the soldiers were addressed by their commander.

6. exemplum: sc. legionum.

Raetiam: this province comprised the southern part of Bavaria (Vindelicia), besides Tyrol (Raetia proper). It was conquered by Tiberius and Drusus, B.C. 15, and was governed by a procurator. Intr. 18, B. III.

Suebos: the Suevi of South Germany, belonging to the Marcomanic kingdom of Maroboduus. See II. 26, 62. They were separated from Raetia by the Danube.

ceterum, but in reality, by way of contrast with specie, etc. Cf. 10. 1.

7. centurionatum: an examination of the list of centurions, with the object of rewarding merit, punishing the unworthy, and filling the places of those massacred.

ordinem, rank. This depended upon the cohort to which each belonged; the first ranked highest, etc. See note on primi ordinis, 29. 2.

patriam: they were Roman citizens, but natives of provinces. patria refers, however, to the native city, not to the province.

dona militaria: e.g. torques, corona, etc.

edebat: quisque is understood as antecedent to the subject of fecisset, and is as antecedent of cui. (Intr. 35 r.)

8. avaritiam: in selling furloughs, etc.; see 17. 6.

obiectavissent: the so-called subjunctive of repeated action, explained as a general condition: after Cicero, this may in Latin take a subjunctive (A. & G., § 309. b and 322.). With acclamaverant (4) and approbaverant above, the indicative is used.

solvebatur: a dishonorable discharge.

militia: ablative.

nomen est and similar phrases Tacitus generally joins the nominative. Dräger.

2. iras: the plural of abstract nouns, not infrequent in the classical age, is used sparingly, but with a great variety of meaning, in later writers. (Intr. 35 a.)

3. certaturus: to overpower them by force.

arma: the first and twentieth legions. — socios: the auxiliaries, about equal to the legions in numbers.

46. invalida et inermia: in apposition with patres et plebem. The neuter expresses contempt.

2. debuisse: he ought to have already gone.

cessuris, who would have yielded.

Cf. tracturis, 31. 1.

severitatis . . . summum: not referring to character, but to official power — very much what Drusus had said of the senate (25. 3).

3. an Augustum, etc.: a rhetorical question in indirect discourse, in which the second verb (sedere) is the principal one, really introduced by an, while the first verb, potuisse, is subordinate, and in a sense conditional: seeing that Augustus had been able, etc., does now Tiberius sit still? Cf. Cic. in Cat. 1.

3. An vero vir amplissimus, etc.

in Germanias: cf. Suet. Oct. 20: reliqua per legatos administravit: ut tamen quibudam Pannonicis atque Germanicis aut interveniret aut non longe abesset, Ravennam vel Mediolanum vel Aquileiam usque ab urbe progrediens.

At per filios pariter adiri maiestate salva, cui maior e longinquo reverentia. Simul adulescentibus excusatum quaedam ad patrem reicere, resistantisque Germanico aut Druso posse a se mitigari vel infringi: quod aliud subsidium, si imperatorem sprevisent? tus, at the last expedition he is known to have undertaken, was fifty-five.

4. fomenta (from foveo), soothing applications.

militaribus, etc.: now that the free state has been reduced to servitude, the army must be trained to peace.

47. immotum . . . fixumque Tiberio fuit: Vergil, Aen. IV. 15: si mihi non animo fixum immotumque sederet. See Intr. 34, 35 s. omittere: cf. 28. 9; 36. 2.

caput rerum: his place as head of the state, which was necessarily at Rome.

2. multa . . .angebant: i.e. the consideration as to which would be most perilous, to neglect the stronger, or the nearer mutiny, or to visit neither — the course finally adopted.

quos: for utros.

ne . . . incenderentur: depends upon the idea of fearing, contained in angebant.

3. pariter: in relation to the two armies; neither could consider itself slighted, if both alike were visited by an emperor's son.

e longinquo: his dignity inspired more awe at a distance than if he himself should visit the legions.

4. excusatum, excusable: agreeing with the phrase quaedam, etc. reicere, refer.

5. ceterum: cf. 3. 1.

ut: used with the participle like the Greek ὅς, — a usage very rare in classical Latin.

iam iamque iturus: upon the very point of going. Suetonius, Tib. 38: Biennio continuo post adeptum imperium pedem porta non extulit; sequenti tempore, praeterquam in propinqua oppida, et cum longissime, Antio lenus, nusquam afuit idque perraro et paucos dies; quamvis provincias quoque et exercitus revisurum se saepe pronuntiasset, et prope quotannis projectionem praepararet, vehiculis comprehensis, comitatibus per municipia et colonias dispositis, ad extremum prudentes, the thoughtful: cf. 9. 3.

48. parata ultione: cf. bello certaturus, 45. 3.

consulerent: i.e. the soldiers of the two legions quartered at Vetera, who were invited to follow the example of the first and twentieth (see 44 and 45). It is a subjunctive of future condition, thrown into the imperfect by the sequence of tenses; the apodosis is dandum spatium.

ad Caecinam: Caecina, the chief commander (legatus) of this army, appears to have gone on from civitas Ubiorum to Vetera (see 37. 3).

2. aquiliferis signiferisque:

these were men selected from the ranks for strength and fidelity. All the centurions having been slaughtered or driven away (32. 2 and 3), the standard-bearers were now in actual command of the legions. Furneaux.

infamiae: the dative with eximo is poetic and post-classic.

causas et merita: some might offer excuses, some had services to boast of.

4. signo: not signal, but sign for mutual recognition. Pfitzner.

trucidant, etc.: this savage punishment, inflicted with the connivance of the amiable Germanicus, was the not unnatural reaction from the panic into which he had fallen during the mutiny. It illustrates too a certain innate ferocity, that is found in even the mildest Romans, umquam accidere, civilium armorum facies. Non and helps explain the terrorism of the closing years of Tiberius.

49. armorum: best taken as limiting diversa. This construction does not occur elsewhere in extant Latin, but is quite in accordance with Tacitus' free use of the genitive case. Diversus may be construed like dissimilis with the dative: its use with the genitive would be consistent with this. Many editors join armorum with facies: the appearance, etc., was unlike this.

2. discedunt in partes, draw off on two sides.

cetera, what followed.

3. intellecto: Intr. 35 e.

4. illud: such appositives must, in definitions, be in the neuter, to mark the contrast between subject and predicate conceptions. Dräger.

plurimis cum lacrimis: if this had been narrated of Tiberius, these would have been called 'crocodile tears.'

5. truces animos: of the obedient soldiers, after the massacre of the mutineers.

piaculum: sc. fore; connected by nec with aliter posse, etc., and expressing their motives. Some put piaculum in direct apposition with eundi in hostem (Intr. 35 g).

6. iuncto ponte, throwing a bridge across. iungere is used of fastening the timbers together in constructing the bridge.

duodecim milia: as each legion contained normally 6000 men, this selected force was equal to about two full legions.

cohortis: of auxiliary troops, who were organized in cohorts, but not in legions. Legiones and cohortes are regularly used to designate Roman and auxiliary troops respectively; alas also relates to auxiliary troops, all the cavalry being furnished by the auxiliaries. An ala contained either 480 or 960 men.

quarum: relates to both cohortes and alas. See note on auxilia, 36. 2. For the geography of the expedition see Excursus, at end of this book.

50. agitabant = erant or degebant: a meaning frequent in Sallust and Tacitus.

2. Romanus: used collectively.

silvam Caesiam: this name appears to be preserved in that of the modern Heisingen, nearly east of Xanten, and south of the Lippe.

limitem: this term originally designated the road-way, of varying breadth, separating the squares of land laid out according to the rules of the Roman Agrimensores. It thus came to mean any artificial road-way, and especially any artificially constructed boundary, as contrasted with natural boundaries (rivers, mountain-ranges, etc.). It was not a line, but a belt of some width (castra in limite locat) defended by earthworks (II. 7), ditches, masonry, and redoubts, and could only be crossed at certain points, answering to bridges over a river (Mommsen, Provinces, I. 132).

Nothing is known of the limes here mentioned, except from this passage; but it may be supposed to have been laid out by Tiberius when he took command of the troops in this region after the defeat of Varus, as a defence against the insurgent Germans (see Merivale, Hist., IV. 278). This policy was afterwards carried out along the greater part of the German frontier, especially that long stretch, unprotected by rivers, from the neighborhood of Mentz on the Rhine to Ratisbon on the Danube; the limes here was constructed principally by Domitian. The walls of Hadrian and Antonine in Britain are examples of the same policy. The limes in this passage would appear to have been about a day's march from the Roman camp at Vetera. So far was Roman territory; beyond this the Romans were in the enemy's country, and their course was doubtful.

scindit, penetrates: there is a kind of zeugma here, — they penetrated the forest, and reached the limes, upon which they entered, thus 'cutting' it in two, and encamped, using its walls for two sides of their camp.

frontem, etc.: Greek accusatives, common in poetry, but not found in prose writers of the classical period.

concaedibus, abatis; to protect the sides, between the front and rear walls of the hmes.

3. incautum, unguarded; used as a participle, and followed by the dative of the agent.

5. expeditis, highly equipped; leaving their baggage and whatever else they could behind them.

obstantia silvarum: a partitive genitive, nearly equivalent to obstantes silvas. Intr. 35 d.

6. Marsorum: this nation, only mentioned casually in the Germania (2), as antiquum nomen, occupied the country south of the Lippe, bordering upon the Chatti. The point reached by Germanicus is believed by Knoke (Die Feldzüge des Germanicus in Deutschland, 1887, p. 30) to be Herdecke on the Ruhr. Near this point three smaller streams empty into the Ruhr, which would explain the plundering in four directions, described in the next chapter. According to Knoke, the Romans followed the Lippe east for two days' march, and then turned abruptly to the south. He places the silva Caesia north of Herdecke, at the end of the third day's march, — a situation which does not agree with Tacitus, from whom we gather that it was traversed on the first day. Moreover, the hmes is likely to have been near the Rhine, and parallel with it, not with the Ruhr.

stratis: sc. Germanis.

7. neque belli timor: for the reason given at the beginning of the chapter — the mutiny of the legions had thrown them off their guard.

ne pax quidem: not even the degree of discipline and order which is necessary in peace.

inter temulentos: Intr. 35 i.

51. cuneos, columns. In actual fighting, the cuneus (caput porcinum, "boar's head," in soldier Latin) was a wedge-shaped column, the advantage of which was quia a pluribus in unum locum tela mittuntur (Vegetius, III. 19). On this occasion, for plunder and slaughter merely, it was probably an ordinary column. The four columns were probably despatched up the Ruhr and its three branches. See note on Marsorum, 50. 6.

quinquaginta milium: probably the space covered by the expeditions.

2. non sexus, etc.: Arnold (Deutsche Urzeit, p. 71) remarks sexus, non aetas misèrationem attulit; profana simul et sacra et celeberrimum illis gentibus templum quod Tamfanae vocabant solo aequantur. Sine vulnere milites, qui semisomnos, inermos, aut palantis ceciderant.

Pars equitum et auxiliae cohortes ducebant; mox prima legio, et mediis impedimentis sinistrum latus unetvicesimani, dextrum quintani clausere, vicesima legio terga firmavit; post ceteri sociorum. Sed hostes, donec agmen per saltus porrigeretur immoti, dein latera et frontem modice 7 adsultantes, tota vi novissimos incurrere. Turbabanturque densis Germanorum catervis leves cohortes, cum Caesar advectus ad vicesimanos voce magna hoc illud tempus oblitterandae seditionis clamitabat: pergerent, 8 properarent culpam in decus vertere. Exarsere animis unoque impetu perruptum hostem redigunt in aperta caeduntque; simul primi agminis copiae evasere silvas that the campaigns of Drusus and Tiberius were for conquest; those of Germanicus, for revenge.

templum: probably a sacred grove, which was cut down. Tacitus says (Germ. 9), nec cohibere parietibus deos neque in ullam humani oris speciem assimilare ex magnitudine caelestium arbitrantur. At the same time, he speaks (40) of the templum of Nerthus. But, as is well known, a Roman templum (consecrated place) was not necessarily an aedes (building).

Tamfanae: genitive: nothing is known of this deity.

4. Bructeros, etc.: the Bructeri and Usipetes lived upon the Rhine, north of the Lippe; the Tubantes changed their residence at various times, but would appear at this time to have been along the upper course of the Lippe. These tribes could, therefore, easily beset the path of the army on its return.

exercitui: Intr. 35 f.

gnarum: passive; see 5. 4 n. itineri et proelio, for marching and fighting. (Intr. 35 f.)

5. prima legio, etc.: of course this means the contingents from the several legions.

6. porrigeretur: Intr. 35 j.

7. leves cohortes: these were the ceteri sociorum, — light-armed only, as contrasted with the heavy-armed legionaries.

illud: that they had desired.

castraque communivere. Quietum inde iter, fidensque 9 recentibus ac priorum oblitus miles in hibernis locatur.

Nuntiata ea Tiberium laetitia cura adfecere: 52 gaudebat oppressam seditionem, sed quod largiendis pecuniis et missione festinata favorem militum quaesivisset, bellica quoque Germanici gloriaangebatur. Rettulit tamen ad senatum de rebus gestis multa de virtute eius memoravit, magis in speciem verbis adornata quam ut penitus sentire crederetur. Paucioribus Drusum et 3 finem Illyrici motus laudavit, sed intentior et fida oratione. Cunctaque quae Germanicus indulserat, servavit etiam apud Pannonicos exercitus.

9. recentibus, its late services; governed by fidens.

52. largiendis, etc.: the payment of the legacy, and shortening of the term of service (37. 1 and 5).

quaesivisset: the subject seems to be taken from Germanici in the next clause: he was vexed that Germanicus had obtained such glory after gaining the favor of the soldiers by unworthy means. The exploits were not after all very remarkable, and one wonders how it was known that Tiberius was vexed.

2. rettulit, laid before the senate for action; probably with a view to the triumph voted the next year (55. 1). Merely to lay information before the senate is deferre.

3. intentior, with more earnestness.—fida, sincere. Velleius Paterculus (II. 125), a partisan of Tiberius, after giving only moderate praise to Germanicus, represents Drusus as prisca antiquaque se- veritate usus. In fact, Drusus had shown more decision and tact than Germanicus, in suppressing the mutiny.

53. Iulia: daughter of Augustus by Scribonia; married at the age of fourteen to Marcellus; then, to Agrippa, by whom she was the mother of Agrippina and the princes mentioned 3. 3; afterwards to Tiberius; see note on Vipsania, 12. 6. She was now fifty-two years old.

Pandateria: now Ventotene, in the gulf of Gaeta.

Reginorum: of Regium, Reggio, at the extreme point of Italy, opposite Sicily. The mention of the people instead of the town is a survival of the primitive political conception, by which the organized community is the fundamental institution, the city or territory occupied by them being only secondary, — a point of view precisely opposite to that of the present day.

2. imparem: although the Claudian gens was as noble as the Julian, and far more noble than that of Julia's first husband, Agrippa, it had not yet any recognized rank as a royal family. See Intr. 26.

Rhodum: see 4. 4 and notes.

3. Postumum Agrippam: her youngest son (6. 1); his death deprived her of all hope of regaining her freedom.

inopia ac tabe longa: Suetonius says (Tib. 50): peculio concesso a patre praebitisque annis fraudavit.
 On the other hand, in 11 he says that Tiberius' sense of justice was so great that, after his divorce from Julia, he interceded with her father for her, and left to her, utrumque meritas, whatever he had given her. The present statement is, therefore, probably untrue or exaggerated.

4. familia nobili . . . facundus:

these three phrases illustrate Tacitus' fondness for variety of expression (Intr. 35 r).

prave facundus, eloquent, but unscrupulous; he employed his eloquence in the support of bad causes.

5. traditam: i.e. in marriage; it agrees with eam, understood as the object of accendebat.

6. Africi maris: in the Lesser Syrtis (near Tripoli).

quattuordecim annis: a rare ablative of length of time. This discrepancy (of a single year) between the period of his banishment and Julia's may be explained by the supposition that he was the tribune of the plebs mentioned by Dio (LV.
 10), whose banishment was deferred to the end of his magistracy. Or he may have been put to death by Augustus.

7. in prominenti litoris: Intr.

35 d. This construction in the case of a neuter adjective governed by a preposition is very rare, even in the silver age.

8. vita: best taken as ablative.

9. auctore, at the instigation of.

54. sodalium Augustalium: a collegium, in honor of Julius, Augustus, and afterwards Livia and Claudius. It consisted, as is said below, of twenty-one of the leading men of the state, to whom certain members of the imperial family were added. The seat of their cult was Bovillae (near the modern Albano, about twelve miles from Rome), the original home of the Julian gens. An inscription found here reads, Vedio-vi patri gentiles Iulii . . . aara lege Albana dicata. See II. 41. 1.

retinendis sacris: dative; see Intr. 35 f.

sodales Titios: of this ancient college very little is known. Its name associates it with the patrician tribes of Titius, and the fact that it was charged with the special duty of preserving the Sabine sacra supports the generally accepted view, that the Titius were the Sabine element of the Roman people.

2. Claudius: the younger brother of Germanicus, emperor (A.D. 41-54).

3. ludos: see note on Augustales, 15. 3.

histrionum, pantomimes: the pantomime had so far superseded other forms of the drama, that the term histrion has at this period come to be confined to its actors.

ei ludicro: i.e. pantomimes.

dum obtemperat, out of courtesy. This causal use of dum is rare in Cicero, but common in later writers.

Bathylli: a native of Alexandria, and a freedman of Maecenas; he was, with Pylades, a freedman of Augustus, the creator of this branch of drama.

civile: he was fond of parading his republican simplicity.

55. Druso Caesare, etc.: the consuls of the new year, B.C. 15. It was usual at this period to have the consuls hold office for only half a year, the object being to increase the number of those who were qualified to hold certain offices reserved for consulares; e.g. the governorships of Asia, Africa, Britain, etc. In the reign of Tiberius there was great irregularity in this respect. Momm.

consuls for each year were epony-year.

triumphus: this triumph was celebrated two years later, A.D. 17; see II. 41. 2. To vote a triumph istrates were as a general thing taken from the hereditary nobility.

ipsi: Varus.

crimina et innoxios, the guilty and the innocent (Intr. 35 r).

4. quamquam . . . tractus: Intr. 35 f. — consensu gentis: he was dragged into the war against his judgment, by the unanimity of his people.

discors, at variance; i.e. with Arminius; cf. 58. 5.

gener invisus inimici soceri: some editors put a comma after invisus, which would make soceri nominative, pointing to an unfriendly feeling between Sigimerus, father of Arminius, and Segestes, father of his wife Thusnelda. There is no occasion, however, to drag in Sigimerus. The objection to making soceri genitive is that then both epithets express the feelings of Segestes, — an apparent tautology. But the two adjectives express different degrees, and perhaps different stages of enmity, — inimicus, unfriendly, relating purely to feeling, which was perhaps of long standing; while invisus, hated, suggests a specific ground of the feeling, — his revolutionary plans, or his elopement with his daughter. Cf. Suet. Cal. 15: nihil sibi admisum cur cuiquam invisus esset.

56. tumultuarias, hastily levied.

cis Rhenum colentium: the Ubii, Sugambri, etc.; see note on Ubiorum, 31. 3.

Caecinae: he was to advance, as the sequel shows, in Germanicus' route of the previous year, between the Ruhr and the Lippe. He had the army of Lower Germany.

paterni praesidii: Drusus had established two posts, — one on Mt. Taunus, the other (Aliso) on the Lippe.

monte Tauno: this is north of the Main, near Homburg. He had set out from Moguntiacum (Mentz), taking with him the four legions of Upper Germany.

expeditum: not light-armed, but unincumbered, sc. with baggage, etc., so as to be capable of a rapid march (rapit).

L. Apronio: one of his legati, who had been consul A.D. 8. He

2. rarum illi caelo: so dry a season that the march was uninterrupted (inoffensum). Tacitus calls the country asperam caelo (Ger. 2). regredienti: dative of reference; on his way back.

4. iuventus: they alone escaped from the slaughter, swam across the Eder, which here flows nearly east, and at this stream resisted the Roman advance.

Adranam: now the Eder (a branch of the Fulda, which it joins near Cassel), a little east of north of the Taunus.

5. tormentis (from torqueo): machines which served the purpose of artillery, constructed on the principle of a bow. They were of two classes, — catapultae, like immense cross-bows, shooting bolts in a nearly horizontal direction; and ballistae, which were directed at an angle of about forty-five degrees, and hurled stones, beams, etc.

pagis vicisque, cantons and villages. The words are not contrasted with one another, as independent localities; rather, the districts in which the villages were situated; they left the settled districts to escape into the forest. Cf. per pagos vicisque, Germ. 12, with the remarks of Sohm, Altfränkische Reichs- und Gerichtsverfassung, Chap. 1.

6. Mattio: this place must have been north of the Eder; its name appears again in that of the Mattiaci, who inhabited the modern Nassau in the time of Tacitus (Germ. 29), but appear at this time to have lived further north. Nipperdey. The early Germans had no cities, but lived in scattered villages, and Mattium can have been only a village of unusual size.

vertit, returned: Intr. 35 b.

illi: relating to hoste; dative of possession.

moris: limiting quod in the predicate; which belonged to their custom.

quotiens . . . cessit, whenever they retreated.

Chattos, sed exterruit Caecina huc illuc ferens arma; et Marsos congredi ausos prospero proelio cohibuit.

Neque multo post legati a Segeste venerunt auxilium 57 orantes adversus vim popularium, a quis circumsedebatur, validiore apud eos Arminio, quoniam bellum suadebat; nam barbaris, quanto quis audacia promptus, tanto magis fidus rebusque commotis potior habetur. Addiderat Segestes legatis filium, nomine Segimundum; sed iuvenis conscientia cunctabatur. Quippe anno quo Germaniae descivere sacerdos apud aram Ubiorum creatus ruperat vittas, profugus ad rebelles. Adductus tamen in spem clementiae Romanae pertulit patris mandata benigneque exceptus cum praesidio Gallicam in ripam missus est.

7. Cheruscis: they lived to the northeast of the Chatti, in the modern Hanover. Under the leadership of Arminius, they were the foremost people of Germany; when Tacitus wrote they had fallen into a secondary rank (Germ. 36).

exterruit Caecina: by advancing in an easterly direction from Vetera (§ 1), he made a diversion in favor of Germanicus, defeating the Marai and preventing the Cherusci from assembling.

huc illuc: in the Agricola (10) Tacitus still used the more common classical form, huc atque illuc.

57. validiore, more influential. promptus . . . magis fidus: Intr. 35 m.

2. conscientia: i.e. of his previous want of fidelity. The omission of the genitive marks an approach to the modern meaning, conscience.

quippe: an asseverative particle, in truth. Its frequent use in classical Latin to emphasize a causal relation, gave the word by degrees a causal meaning, so that it is used by the later writers as nearly equivalent to quoniam or etenim.

Germaniae: i.e. the nations of Germany.

apud aram Ubiorum: within the Roman lines. The cult was probably that of Augustus and Rome, to take part in which was a recognition of the Roman sovereignty. According to Guiraud (Les assemblées provinciales dans l'empire romain, p. 54), the choice of a native German as priest shows an intention to make the altar "serve as a religious and political centre for the populations of the right bank of the Rhine"; afterwards for the two provinces of Germany.

ruperat vittas: as a sign of renouncing the Roman service.

rebelles: this word does not imply rebellion, but a renewal of war.

3. adductus: i.e. on the present occasion.

cum praesidio, under guard: he was treated as a prisoner, and carried in Germanicus' triumphal procession (Strabo, VII. p. 291).

4 Germanico pretium fuit convertere agmen, pugnatum-que in obsidentis, et ereptus Segestes magna cum pro*succor of Segestes.*

convertere, reverse his march.
 He was on his way back to the Rhine, and now marched again towards the enemy.

obsidentes: sc. Segestem.

clientium: the comites, or personal followers, described in the Germania, 13 and 14. The personal relation was similar to that of the Roman client, but with the important difference that it was an honorable one, establishing no social inferiority.

5. uxor Arminii: her name is given by Strabo (VII. p. 292) as Thusnelda, her son's as Thumelicus.

animo: an allative of characteristic, the limiting genitive taking the place of a qualifying adjective.

in lacrimas: this preposition, as often in Tacitus, expresses a result.
 (Intr. 35 i.)

of honor, standards, etc.

ingens visu: cf. procera mem- bonae societatis, his steadfast loyalty.

 to bestow citizenship was one of the prerogatives of the prince.

 brio conflictatus sit, in tempore memorabo.

4. quia, etc.: with flagitavi.
 illa nox: that of the convivium, mentioned 55. 3.

5. quae secuta sunt: i.e. his participation in the attack on Varus; see 55. 4.

inieci catenas, etc.: nothing is known of these circumstances.

6. ubi primum: that is, now at last that.

tui copia, access to you.
 antehabeo: only here and IV.

11. 5.
 me perfidia, etc., acquit myself of bad faith; i.e. by his acquiescence (55. 4).

7. filii: Segimundus.
 necessitate: i.e. not by her free will.

8. vetere in provincia: this side of the Rhine, which had been a Roman province ever since the time of Julius Caesar. Here many Germans were settled from time to time, as subjects of the Roman empire, rendering military service for the lands they occupied. See note on Ubiorum, 31. 3.

9. nomen imperatoris: the honorary designation of a victorious general, bestowed by the soldiers under the republic by acclamation.
 It was now given by the senate, at the motion of the emperor; as a special honor it is contrasted with the official title of the prince himself.

memorabo: probably in the lost books, for nothing further is known of this. He is mentioned by Tactus (A.D. 47, XI. 16) as apparently

59 Fama dediti benigneque excepti Segestis vulgata, ut quibusque bellum invitis aut cupientibus erat, spe vel dolore accipitur. Arminium super insitam violentiam raptam uxorem, subiectus servitio uxoris uterus vecordem agebant, volitabatque per Cheruscos, arma in Segestem, arma in Caesarem poscens. Neque probris temperabat: egregium patrem, magnum imperatorem, fortem exercitum, quorum tot manus unam mulierculam avexerint! Sibi tres legiones, totidem legatos procubuisse; non enim se proditione neque adversus feminas gravidas, sed palam adversus armatos bellum tractare. Cerni adhuc Germanorum in lucis signa Romana, quae dis patriis suspenderit. Coleret Segestes victam ripam, redderet filio sacerdotium hominum: Germanos numquam satis excusatos quod inter Albim et Rhenum virgas et secures et togam viderint. Aliis gentibus ignorantia imperii Romani in experta esse supplicia, nescia tributa: quae quoniam exuerint irritusque discesserit ille inter numina dicatus Augustus, ille delectus Tiberius, ne imperitum already dead, and as devoid of all national sentiments,—infectum animo nio servitio cultu, omnibus externis.

59. dediti . . . vulgata . . . rapta, etc.: Intr. 35 q.

Invitis aut cupientibus: a dative of interest like the Greek αἰνέσις βουλευμένης ἢ: according as they were unwilling or desirous. Intr. 35 s.

3. patrem (i.e. Segestes), etc.: accusatives of exclamation.

4. procubuisse: i.e. in the defeat of Varus.

6. victam ripam: i.e. the left or Roman bank of the Rhine (vetere in provincia, 58. 8), where Segestes was now to dwell.

sacerdotium hominum: an expression of bitter contempt; the Germans worshipped the gods alone (dis patriis); the Romans, men. See App. I.

virgas et secures: the fasces, or bundle of rods, enclosing an axe,—the badge of Roman authority.

togam: the toga was the specific Roman garment, worn by none but Romans, the gens togata. It was a long, narrow shawl of unbleached wool, bluntly rounded to a point at each end. As the toga was only worn in civil life, its use here points, perhaps, to a completed conquest and organized government.

7. nescia, unknown. irritus discesserit, withdrew baffled: includes both Augustus and Tiberius.

delectus, chosen, as alone worthy to succeed Augustus; used ironically. Cf. 7. 10.

adulescentulum, ne seditiosum exercitum pavescerent. Si patriam parentes antiqua mallent quam dominos et colonias novas, Arminium potius gloriae ac libertatis quam Segestem flagitiosae servitutis ducem sequerentur.

Conciti per haec non modo Cherusci, sed conterminae gentes, tractusque in partis Inguiomerus Arminii patruus, vetere apud Romanos auctoritate; unde maior Caesari metus. Et ne bellum mole una ingrueret, Caecinam cum quadraginta cohortibus Romanis distrahendo hosti per Bructeros ad flumen Amisiam mittit, equitem Peditum praefectus finibus Frisiorum ducit. Ipse imposiadulescentulum: Germanicus was really of about the same age as Arminius, but might easily seem a mere boy to the war-worn hero of the Teutoburg Forest.

8. novas: i.e. which are new things — contrasted with antiqua. The contrast with patriam shows that the colonies referred to are, like that of the Ubii (Cologne), those to which they might be removed on Roman soil, not such as the Romans might find on German soil.

60. non modo . . . sed: the omission of etiam is rare in Cicero, but common in Livy and later writers.

in partis, into the party; a common expression.

vetere apud Romanos auctoritate, of long-standing influence with the Romans; i.e. before the revolt of Arminius.

2. mole una: i.e. the concentration of the entire force of the enemy; see distrahendo hosti below.

quadraginta cohortibus Romanis: an equivalent expression for four entire legions. Germanicus had the other four. From suum militem, 63. 5, it appears that Caecina had his own legions, but there is no mention of auxiliaries.

per Bructeros: they occupied the territory between the Ems and the Lippe, about the modern city of Münster. The route of Caecina probably avoided the highlands upon the Lippe, as well as the centre of the Bructerian territory, and reached the Ems in the neighborhood of Rheine, about five miles north of Münster, and nearly west of Osnaburg: along this line the traces of a Roman road have been discovered. (Knoke, p. 50.) At the same point the cavalry under Pedito must have struck the Ems, because below here begin the marshes, which make the river inaccessible from the west (id. p. 53). Germanicus could easily have reached the same point in his ships.

hosti: the Cherusci, against whom the campaign was directed.

praefectus: sc. equitum.

Pedito: probably the Pedito Albino-vanus, mentioned by Seneca (Senec. I. 15), as having composed a poem upon the expeditions of Germanicus; a few lines of this poem are given by Seneca. See II. 24. 6 n.

finibus: a local ablative; by the way of, etc.

Frisiorum: the Frisians, on the coast of the North Sea, from the tas navibus quattuor legiones per lacus vexit; simulque pedes eques classis apud praedictum amnem convenere. Chauci cum auxilia pollicerentur, in commilitium adsciti

 5 Varo amissam. Ductum inde agmen ad ultimos Bructerorum, quantumque Amisiam et Lupiam amnes inter vastatum, haud procul Teutoburgiensi saltu, in quo reliquiae Vari legionumque insepultae dicebantur.

61 Igitur cupido Caesarem invadit solvendi suprema militibus ducique, permoto ad miserationem omni qui aderat exercitu ob propinquos, amicos, denique ob casus
 2 bellorum et sortem hominum. Praemisso Caecina, ut occulta saltuum scrutaretur pontesque et aggeres umido paludum et fallacibus campis imponeret, incedunt maes-

Rhine to the Ems, also extending some distance inland, where they have resided ever since. Pedo must have proceeded down the Rhine to some point in the territory of the Frisians (perhaps near Deventer) from whence he could march east to the Ems.

3. per lacus: the lagoons and estuaries along the coast. The Zuyder Zee was formed out of them about six hundred years ago, by a succession of inundations, which swept away great stretches of lowland, and converted the numerous small sheets of water into a great bay.

pedes eques classis: these three bodies, under Caecina, Pedo, and Germanicus, respectively, met upon the Ems, apud praedictum amnem, probably at Rheine. The strategy of Germanicus, in reaching the Ems by so long a circuit, has been censured; but it must be remembered that water passage is speedier and easier than that by land.

Chauci: see 38. 1 n.

4. sua urentis: in order not to afford supplies for the Romans.

aquilam: for the recovery of a second eagle, see II. 25; the third was recovered in the reign of Claudius.

5. agmen: i.e. that of Germanicus, who probably followed the Ems in a southeasterly direction, while Stertinius was engaged in chastising the Bructeri.

Amisiam . . . inter: Intr. 35 i. Teutoburgiensi saltu: see Excursus at the end of this Book.

61. omni . . . aderat: Stertinius (60. 4) had now joined him.

2. umido paludum: nearly the same as umidis paludibus (Intr. 35 d); cf. utrigines paludum, 17. 5.

locos: the masculine plural of this word is common for loca in early and late writers, but rare in the classical period.

3. prima: evidently the first camp which they came upon, which, it seems, was also the one occupied by Varus after the first day's fight. This would naturally be the case if Germanicus approached from the north, the valley of the Ems.

principiis: the via principalis, or main street, running across the camp from north to south, separating the part (about one-third of its area) which contained the officers' quarters, stores, etc., from that occupied by the troops. As the camp was laid out by fixed rules and of definite proportions, the length of the principis showed the size of the army.

dein: the second camp.

semiruto vallo, etc.: the camp was constructed in haste, and, therefore, quickly fell into ruins.

accisae, diminished; the second camp was laid out after a day's fighting, with heavy losses.

medio campi: s.e. the field of the third day's fight, after they had left the second camp.

4. ora: no doubt human skulls, as this word would not properly be used for horses.

5. primorum ordinum centuriones: these officers commanded the cohorts, and ranked next to the tribunes.

mactaverant: Tacitus speaks of human sacrifices (Germ. 9).

6. referebant, related.

patibula: forked pieces of wood to which slaves and criminals were fastened, as to a cross, by their arms and feet.

scrobes: for burying alive.

per superbiam: Intr. 35 i.

62, qui aderat exercitus: repeated from 61. 1, for rhetorical effect. Nipperdey.

noscente alienas reliquias an suorum humo tegeret, omnes ut coniunctos, ut consanguineos, aucta in hostem ira, maesti simul et infensi condebant. Primum exstruendo tumulo caespitem Caesar posuit, gratissimo munere in defunctos et praesentibus doloris socius.

3 Quod Tiberio haud probatum, seu cuncta Germanici in deterius trahenti, sive exercitum imagine caesorum insepultorumque tardatum ad proelia et formidolosiorum hostium credebat; neque imperatorem auguratum et vetustissimis caerimoniis praeditum attrectare feralia debuisse.

63 Sed Germanicus cedentem in avia Arminium secutus, ubi primum copia fuit, evehi equites campumque, quem hostis insederat, eripi iubet. Arminius colligi suos et propinquare silvis monitos vertit repente; mox signum prorumpendi dedit iis quos per saltus occultaverat.

omnes: accusative.

2. gratissimo: i.e. to the soldiers. Notice the variety of construction in the contrasts: munere, an ablative of characteristic, being set against socius, and in defunctos corresponding to praesentibus (Intr. 35 r). Notice, too, the loose syntax of the whole passage.

3. seu cuncta, etc.: as usual, an imputation of bad motives to Tiberius; but, in the eyes of a genuine votary of the Roman religion, this was an unwarrantable pollution (see below); Stahr maintains, moreover, that the interruption to the campaign was no slight disadvantage.

attrectare, handle. It appears from Suetonius (Cal. 2) that he gathered the remains with his own hands: caesorum clade Variana veteres ac dispersas reliquias uno tumulo humaturus, colligere sua manus et comportare primus aggressus est. This act polluted a person: consuetudo Romana fuit ut polluti funere minime sacrificarent. Serv. ad Aen. XI. 2. The pollution was greater by reason of the special consecration of Germanicus (auguratum, etc.).

63. avia, the wilderness. Arminius repeats the strategy by which he had destroyed the army of Varus, and nearly succeeds a second time.

2. colligi: reflexive.

monitos: agreeing with suos; render actively, after directing them (Intr. 35 l).

silvis: the Romans, still in the forest (avia), seem to have come upon the Germans in an open field, campum; that it was a marshy field is shown by the swamp, paludem, into which a part of his troops were pushed.

saltus: the wooded ravines in tus; cetera limosa, tenacia gravi caeno aut fivis incerta which this neighborhood abounds. Those who were concealed here formed a nova acies, which came to the aid of those in the plain, when they closed their ranks and approached the woods.

3. cohortes: of auxiliaries (as were the equites); the legionary troops were not brought in until these had given way.

fugientium: the cavalry.

trudebantur: the indicative shows that a part of them were actually crowded into the swamp.

gnaram vincentibus, iniquam nesciis: a very condensed and vigorous expression, illustrating Tacitus' remarkable ingenuity in varying phrases. He here contrasts the advantage which came from familiarity with the ground (gnaram), and gave victory (vincentibus), with the disadvantage (iniquam) to the Romans from their ignorance of it (nesciis).

4. manibus aequis: but evidently the Romans had the worst of it.

5. legiones . . . reportat: really only two out of the eight. Caecina led his four direct to the Rhine; while the second and fourteenth also marched by land, under Publius Vitellius (70. 1). Müller (Philologus, 33. 329) explains the contradiction by the supposition that the four legions went in the fleet as far as the Frisian coast, and that there the ships were lightened by landing the legions under Vitellius, — a proceeding not improbable in itself.

pars equitum: the rest were sent on an expedition under Stertinius; see 71. 1.

notis itineribus, a familiar route, but not the one by which he had come from the Rhine to the Ems, because he finds the causeway ruptos vetustate (7), which shows that he had not just passed over it. Remains of a causeway are found in the Dutch province of Drenthe, but this seems much too far to the north.

quam maturrime: for fear of pursuit.

6. L. Domitio: the grandfather of the emperor Nero; his expedition was probably B.C. 6. Cf. IV. 44. 2. cetera, the rest of the ground; compendiis viarum, a short cut. The conjunction cum, which should properly stand at the beginning of the clause, before compendiis, is removed to a place just before the verb.

7. in loco, on the spot where he arrived at the causeway.

opus et alii proelium = alii opus alii proelium; while the main body were engaged in the work, a portion were to beat back the enemy.

64. perfringere, etc.: Intr. 35 l.

2. idem, at once.

ad gradum, for standing; contrasted with procedentibus.

pila: the regular weapon of the Roman legionaries, a heavy javelin, about six feet long, the iron being about half the length.

3. sueta, to which they were accustomed; they were experienced in fighting in marshes.

procera membra: in the Germania (4) Tacitus speaks of the magna corpora of the Germans.

4. inclinantis, giving way.

5. quantum aquarum oritur, all the streams that rise.

circum: here an adverb, qualifying surgentibus.

vertere: connected by que with duplicatus [est].

subiecta, the ground below (cf. 65. 1, n.).

quod: the implied antecedent, eo, is limited by operis, and is subject of obruto.

gesimum id stipendium Caecina parendi aut imperitandi habebat, secundarum ambiguarumque rerum sciens eoque interritus. Igitur futura volvens non aliud reperit quam ut hostem silvis coecideret, donec saucii quantumque gravioris agminis anteirent; nam medio montium et paludum porrigebatur planities quae tenuem aciem pateretur. Deliguntur legiones quinta a dextro lateri, unetvicesima in laevum, primani ducendum ad agmen, vicesimanus adversum secuturos. Nox per diversa iniquies, cum barbari festis epulis, laeto cantu aut truci sonore subiecta vallium ac resultantis saltus complerent, apud Romanos invalidi ignes, interruptae voces, atque ipsi passim adiacerent vallo, oberrarent tentoriis, insomnes magis quam pervigiles. Ducemque terruit dira quies; nam Quintilium Varum sanguine oblitum et paludibus emersum cernere et audire visus est velut vocantem, non tamen obsecutus et manum intendentis reppulisse.

6. parendi aut imperitandi: i.e. as private soldier or officer.

7. futura: the plan for the morrow.

silvis coecideret, hold in check within the woods (the silvae acclives of the last chapter). Between them and the marsh was a strip of even ground (planities, wide enough for a thin line of soldiers (tenuem aciem). The fifth and twenty-first legions were ordered to hold this ground, while the baggage, etc., got over the causeway, protected by the first and twentieth. The plan, however, failed through the insubordination of the troops.

quantum: sc. esset; cf. note on quantum aquarum, 5.

gravioris agminis: the baggage-train.

montium: evidently the low wooded hills described above (63. 6) as silvae paulatim acclives. There are no mountains in this part of Germany.

65. per diversa, in different ways; partly from the noises made by the enemy, partly by the occurrences within the camp.

subiecta vallium, the valleys below (Intr. 35 d).

ignes, voces: sc. essent.

passim adiacerent, lay scattered along.

2. quies, dream.

cernere: he had probably known him in life.

obsecutus (sc. esse) and reppulisse, like cernere and audire, depend upon visus est.

Caecina, or perhaps threatening. Cf. manus intentantes, 27. 1.

3. missae in latera legiones: these were the fifth and twenty-first, which had been the leaders of the mutiny. (See 31. 3).

capto . . . campo: instead of forming to keep back the enemy (hostem sibi coerceret), they deserted their posts, and hurried across to the level ground beyond the morass.

4. incursu, opportunity of attack, afforded by this desertion. He waited until the army was embarrassed in the morass.

fossis, bog-holes. The ablative without in after haesere is poetic.

turbati: Intr. 35 c.

incertus signorum ordo: the maniples, and therefore the standards, were thrown into confusion.

utque, and as [is natural].

5. simul haec: sc. dicit.

scindit agmen: i.e. by taking it in the flank, and cutting it in two.

equis: i.e. of the baggage and officers, for Caecina had no cavalry.

7. adversum, in the face of.

figi: the staff of the standard was sharpened at the lower end, and was stuck in the ground during a fight.

8. circumveniebatur, was on the point of being cut off by the enemy.

9. iuvit: i.e. the Romans.

enisae, struggled forth.

vespascente die: the fight had lasted the whole day.

10. agger: i.e. earth, etc., for struendum vallum.

per quae, etc.: i.e. baskets, tools, etc.

unum, etc.: the circumstances were like those of Varus' second encampment (61. 3).

66. 2. decumana: the camp had four gates, one at the middle of each of the four sides,—the prae-toria, towards the enemy (in theory towards the east); the decumana opposite; and the principalis dex-tera and sinistra, on the right and left respectively (see 60. 3 n.). The decumana being away from the enemy (aversa hosti), they rushed for this gate.

hosti: the only certain instance of the dative with aversus (turned away from).

3. comperto: Intr. 35 o.

proiectus, casting himself down.

67. temporis, with monet: a novel construction with this word, common with admoneo, etc.

expugnandi: limiting spe.

perveniri: impersonal; by that sally we reach the Rhine.

defixo, motionless.

3. haesere, were obstructed.

cornua et tubae : the tuba, a long, straight horn, like a fish-horn (tuba terribili sonitu), was the regular instrument of the infantry; the lituus, slightly bent near the end, of the cavalry; the cornu, curved about as the letter C, was used to sound the classicum, or signal for attack. There being no cavalry in Cæcina's army, the lituus was not sounded.

7. reversae: to the camp; the battle and pursuit having lasted all day.

quamvis: Intr. 35 f.

copias: of provisions, contrasted with egestas.

habuere: i.e. in their feelings.

69. pontem: probably the one constructed the year before (49. 6).

3. C. Plinius: the elder. According to the younger Pliny (Epp. III. 5), he wrote a history of the German wars in twenty books, impelled by the image of Drusus, seen in a dream.

grates... habentem: for agentem of the earlier writers; suggested perhaps by such expressions as orationem habere.

4. simplices eas curas: he thought that the pains (curas) taken by Agrippina were not without a motive (simplices), and that it was not for war against enemies that she sought to gain over the soldiers. It seems certain that at a later period Tiberius had such suspicions, and that they were not altogether groundless, heroic and womanly as were her actions on this occasion.

5. circumferat, velit: with tamquam; as if her ambition were not quam legatos, quam duces; compressam a muliere seditionem, cui nomen principis obsistere non quiverit.

sufficiently manifest already by these acts. See 41. 3.

6. compressam, etc.: referring to the events narrated in 40 and 41, when respect for Agrippina had greatly assisted in quelling the mutiny.

nomen principis: referring to the letters described in 36. 4.

7. accendebat onerabatque: added fire and weight; cf. incendebat haec, 23. 1.

peritiā, insight.

in longum iaciens: i.e. preparing a long time before, by letting his insinuations rankle in the mind of the emperor.

reconderet: sc. Tiberius.

aucta, when they had grown.

70. P. Vitellio: the uncle of the emperor, Aulus Vitellius. He was an ardent partisan of Germanicus, and an orator of some repute (II. 74. 2, III. 10. 2 and 13. 3).

vadoso: this coast is flat, and the waters very shallow.

reciproco, ebb; when grounded at the ebb it would float again more readily.

2. sidere, the season.

rapi agique, knocked about.

3. opplebantur: i.e. with water.

brevia, shallows, as in Verg. Aen. I. 111. The tides were all the more troublesome to the Romans, as they were unaccustomed to them; for the Mediterranean has no perceptible tides.

4. subtracto solo: losing their footing as the bottom suddenly shelved away.

6. utensilibus: all things for use, —including food as well as utensils, usus, opportunity.

7. Visurgin: see App. I.

71. iam Stertinius, etc.: after his expedition against the Bructeri (60. 4), Stertinius appears to have been sent with a part of the cavalry (the other part marched by the sea-shore, 63. 5) upon the errand here described.

Segimerum: not Sigimerus, father of Arminius (Vell. II. 118).

- L. Apronio, C. Silio ob res cum Germanico gestas.
 2 Nomen patris patriae Tiberius, a populo saepius ingestum, repudiavit; neque in acta sua iurari quamquam censente senatu permisit, cuncta mortalium incerta, quantoque plus adeptus foret, tanto se magis in lubrico dictitans. Non tamen ideo faciebat fidem civilis animi; nam legem maiestatis reduxerat, cui nomen apud der the empire, the full honor of a triumph was reserved to the emperor himself, or in rare cases (as Germanicus, and Titus, son of Vespasian) to members of his family. Others received only the ornamenta, by which is meant the right to appear at festivals, etc., in the distinctive dress or other characteristics of an office. The triumphalia insignia were properly the vestis triumphalis (i.e. toga picta and tunica palmata), the laurel wreath, and the triumphal chair, chariot and sceptre. But even during the republic, the triumphal garments and chair were seldom granted as ornamenta, the chariot and sceptre never. In the empire, the laurel wreath, too, was restricted to the emperor, and became his crown; the triumphalia ornamenta were now, therefore, nothing but a name, and he who received them had, so far as external insignia are concerned, only the right to the ordinary toga praetexta of the magistrate. (Momm. Röm. St. I. 353.) At the same time the dignity of triumphalis was highly valued, and was transmitted to posterity.

2. patris patriae: this title was granted to Julius Caesar, and afterwards (B.C. 2) to Augustus. Tiberius persistently declined it (see II. 87. 2), as did certain of his successors (e.g. Nero, Vespasian, Hadrian) in the early part of their reigns; but it became at last a regular part of the emperor's titles. Suetonius (Tib. 67) puts in the mouth of Tiberius an explanation which is creditable to his modesty, and at the same time illustrates his characteristic self-distrust: si quando . . . de moribus meis devotoque vobis animo dubitaveritis (quod priusquam eveniat, opto ut me supremus dies huic mutatae vestrae de me opinioni eripiat) nihil honoris adducet mihi patria appellatio. The words that follow, quanto . . . dictitans, also illustrate this feeling of his.

ingestum: i.e. by acclamation (Furneaux).

in acta sua iurari: the acta of the emperor were his civil acts, not properly including, however, his laws. The oath to support these was regularly taken on the 1st of January, the oath including the acts of past emperors, so far as these had not been annulled. The oath was afterwards made to include the future acts of the prince (Momm. Röm. St. II. 847), and it may be that these were included on the present occasion, from the words cuncta mortalium incerta, and from the motive attributed to him by Suetonius (Tib. 67), ne mos maiore de decore impar tantis honoribus inveniretur, his words being exempli causa cavendum esse ne se Senatus in acta cuiusquam obligaret, qui aliquo casu mutari posset.

3. legem maiestatis reduxerat: as if the law had fallen into desuetude under Augustus; this was not the case, however, as appears beveteres idem, sed alia in iudicium veniebant : si quis proditione exercitum aut plebem seditionibus, denique male gesta re publica, maiestatem populi Romani minuisset : facta arguebantur, dicta impune erant. Primus Augustus cognitionem de famosis libellis specie legis eius tractavit, commotus Cassii Severi libidine, qua viros feminasque illustres procacibus scriptis diffamaverat ; mox Tiberius, consultante Pompeio Macro praetore an iudicia maiestatis redderentur, exercendas leges esse respondit. Hunc quoque asperavere carmina incertis auctoribus vulgata in saevitiam superbiamque eius et discordem cum matre animum.

low. The "treason trials" of the reign of Tiberius afford the most serious of the charges against him. But in the first years of his reign, the trials were according to the regular judicial procedure, and the emperor made constant efforts to mitigate the severity of the law. (Intr. 15 and 16). The government, it must be remembered, was still a republic in form, and the senate had legal authority in these cases. Certainly it was by the direct order of Tiberius that the laws were enforced; see below, 4.

facta arguebantur: just as, in English and American law, charges of constructive treason are by strict right excluded, but have nevertheless been often resorted to in times of peril and excitement.

4. famosis libellis: according to Suetonius (Ocl. 55), id modo censuit, cognoscendum posthac de iis qui libellos aut carmina ad infamiam cuiuspiam sub alieno nomine edant. According to Cicero (ad Fam. III. 11. 2), maiestas was extended by Sulla, ne in quovis impune clamari liceret.

Cassii Severi: Quintilian says of him (X. 1. 117), ingenii plurimum est in eo et acerbitas mira, et urbanitas eius summa; sed plus stomacho quam consilio dedit. Cf. IV. 21. 5.

mox, afterwards; its usual meaning in Tacitus.

Pompeio Macro: for his fate, see VI. 18. 4.

praetore: the one who presided over the quaestio de maiestate. The accuser had the option of bringing the charge before one of these courts, presided over by a praetor, or the senate, presided over by the consul. See II. 79. 2. The senate, however, could decline to take cognizance of them; cf. IV. 21. 3 and 4. See Mommsen, Röm. St. II. 105.

exercendas leges: Suetonius (Tib. 58) tells the same story, adding, et atrocissime exercuit. Pliny (Paneg. 11) says, dicavit caelo Tiberius Augustum, sed ut maiestatis crimen induceret.

5. hunc quoque: as well as Augustus.

carmina: Suetonius (Tib. 59) gives some examples of these; e.g., Fastidit vinum, quia iam sitit iste cruorem: iam bibit hunc avidè quam bibit ante merum. See also IV. 42. discordem, etc.: see Intr. 26 a.

- 78 Haud pigebit referre in Falanio et Rubriô, modicis equitibus Romanis, praetemptata crimina, ut quibus initiis, quanta Tiberii arte gravissimum exitium irrepserit, dein repressum sit, postremo arserit cunctaque

78. modicis, of moderate circumstances; distinguished from splendidi, a frequent epithet of the wealthy knights.

praetemptata, attempted, but frustrated by the emperor.

dein repressum sit: the whole of this appears to refer to the time of Tiberius, who is represented as having for a while, as a matter of policy (quanta . . . arte, see Intr. 13), held in check his natural severity. Some editors have supposed the reference to be to the reigns of Titus and Domitian.

2. cultores Augusti: this refers not to the sodales Augustales (54. 1), but to a private cult, held at the houses of citizens. The sodales were a recognized collegium or guild: these were only organized in modum collegiorum.

mancipasset: this word designates the special formalities by which real estate was sold by Roman law,—the statue passed with the grounds. The sale of a statue of Augustus was construed as an affront to him, and, therefore, an act of treason.

violatum . . . numen Augusti: i.e. by an oath taken in his name, which was afterwards broken.

3. consulibus: they presided over the senate, and consequently over all cases that were tried before that body. See 72. 4 n.

caelum, divine honors; (10. 8).

4. histrionem, mime.

ludis: scenic representations, in January, instituted by Livia; afterwards called Palatini, from being performed in the palace.

5. deorum iniurias dis curae:

this whole passage, showing the efforts of Tiberius to set bounds to the vindictiveness of his courtiers, expresses wise and sagacious statesmanship.

74. praetorem: properly proconsul praetorius,—it being a senatorial province, governed by a proconsul of praetorian rank. Probably the term praetor is here used as a reminiscence of the times of the republic, when provinces were regularly governed by praetors.

quaestor ipsius: the quaestors were assigned by lot to the several provinces, and stood in a close personal relation, necessitas, to the commander, so that any act of unfriendliness or ingratitude towards him was regarded as impietas.

maiestatis, treason; the indictment included also repetundae (extortion), as appears from the closing sentence of the chapter. Postulo, in the sense demand for justice, accuse, is construed with the genitive of the crime.

subscribente, supporting the accusation. According to Roman criminal law, prosecutions were made by private individuals, the chief prosecutor being supported by one, two, or three others, whose business it was to assist and supplement his work. The chief accuser was primus subscriptor, the others, secundus, etc. See Intr. 16.

qui: i.e. Crispinus.

formam vitae, plan or course of life; i.e. the trade of an informer.

2. occultis libellis: written accusations secretly put into the hands of the emperor.

saevitiae adrepi, worms himself into his cruel counsels; cf. III. 50. 5.

facessit: follows dum.

secuti, those who followed.

divites, metuendi: sc. facti.

3. obiectaret, put in the mouth of; i.e. he represents him as having attacked the vices of the emperor. Because the charges against the emperor were true, the assertion that tulit, suffered. Most editors supply sententiam, which would indicate that he had changed his opinion. But it rather appears that he was ashamed of his unwonted excitement, and put up with (pa-recipitatores: these were a board for the assessment of claims. The criminal charge having failed, "the trial of Marcellus became a mere civil question of damages." Furneaux.

75. nec patrum, etc.: he not only took part as a senator in the cases which came before the senate, but, as head of the state, princeps, attended the regular courts to see that justice was done.

iudiciis adsidebat: Suetonius says (Tib. 33), magistratibus pro tribunali cognoscentibus plerumque se offerebat consiliarium.

independence of the courts destroyed.

3. inter quae: this is general, referring not to the judicial proceedings before the praetor, but to the zeal shown by Tiberius in the administration of justice.

mole, ductu: both probably describe construction,—the building of the road and the carrying of the waters.

4. aerarii praetoribus: abl. abs.; the care of the treasury was transferred by Augustus from the quaestors to the praetors, who now began to lose a part of their judicial powers.

erogandae . . . pecuniae, paying out money; it depends on cupiens.

diu retinuit: indeed, two of the most striking examples of this liberality were in the very last years of his life; see VI. 17 and 45.

5. veniam ordinis, relief from the burdens of his order; the senator must have an estate of decies sestertium = $50,000.

paternas, inherited; i.e. not the result of dissipation.

6. acerbus: no doubt there was great risk of being deceived. Dio (LVII. 10) says that he gave his gifts openly, because the secret gifts of Augustus were often purloined by his agents. The investigation of the case by the senate was open.

76. plana urbis: the low ground between the Capitoline and the Palatine. This was once a swamp, and was drained by the cloaca maxima.

aedificiorum . . . strages: a case of zeugma. Probably the buildings were undermined, and a pestilence followed. Furneaux.

2. censuit, proposed; the word used for the formal and official expression of opinion.

libri Sibullini: these were in the

3. obtegens, obscuring. His contempt for such superstitions is mentioned also by Dio Cassius (LVII. 14), who says that, while others took these events as an omen, he ascribed them to the excess of water, and appointed a standing board of five senators, selected by lot, to have charge of the river, and to regulate the supply of water. A recently discovered inscription of the reign of Claudius gives the names of five curatores aquarum et alvei Tiberis ex auctoritate Ti. Claudii Caesaris Aug. Germanici Principis. Antiquary, February, 1888.

Ateio Capitonî: for his death and character, see III. 75. He was curator aquarum, an office which he held for ten years, A.D. 13 to 23, succeeding Messala. Augustus had established, among other offices, the curam . . . aquarum, alvei Tiberis, etc. (Suet. Oct. 37).

4. Achaïam: this province, embracing Greece proper, was separated from Macedonia by Augustus, B.C. 27, and received its name from its leading state, the Achaean league. In the division of the empire between the senate and the emperor, Achaia and Macedonia, like most of the older provinces requiring no military force, were left under the senatorial administration of the republic, and governed by proconsuls, proconsulari imperio. The administration of these officers was more oppressive than that of the legati who governed the imperial provinces. They were chosen by lot, held office for only a year, and surrounded themselves with a degree of pomp which the military legati did not affect. Moreover, they were paid by the province, while the legati were paid by the emperor whom they represented. It was therefore a favor to these provinces levare proconsulari imperio tradique Caesari. They were annexed to the province of Moesia (see 80. 1), but were again made senatorial provinces by Claudius. Nipperdey suggests that, as imperial provinces, they were relieved from the tribute which they owed to the aerarium.

5. quamquam qualifies villi, taking pleasure overmuch in blood, even cheap blood—he was too lavish even of the lives of the vulgar. See 29. 4, promptum ad asperiora ingenium Druso erat.

The worship of Augustus, now established, became the chief cult of the province, being in the care of a consilium composed of flamens of equestrian rank from each city. Hübner.

exemplum: it was the first temple consecrated by a province to Augustus alone; before this time temples had been erected jointly to Augustus and Rome. The temple now built was the most splendid in the city; remains of it are still extant. This special cult of the province and city must be distinguished from that of the Augustales, who were freedmen, and who were found here as in other provinces.

Florentinis: the colony of Florentia, Florence, on the banks of the Arno, had taken the place of the ancient Etruscan city of Fiesole, Fiesole, at the top of a steep hill.

Clanis: this river flowed into the Tiber, but its sources, in the marshes between Clusium and Arretium, could be easily diverted into the Arno, a branch of which rose in the same marshes; this would relieve the inundations of the Tiber. This region has been, in the present century, thoroughly drained.

2. Interamnates: the inhabitants of Interamna, Terni, situated upon the Nar. The falls of the Nar at Terni, among the finest in Europe, were made by artificially draining the lands above, the work of the distinguished statesman of the third century B.C., Manius Curius Dentatus. This artificial channel became the outlet of the Lacus Velinus; and from the refusal of the Reatini to have it blocked up, as being the work of nature, it would appear that they had lost the tradition of its origin.

3. adiacentia: the ager Reatinus, a valley of great beauty and fertility in the high Apennines.

sociorum: these were the independent Italian nations in alliance with Rome. But this alliance had been brought to an end by the Social War, B.C. 90, which had resulted in the admission of all the socii to Roman citizenship. The use of the term on this occasion, therefore, is only traditional; at this period it was usually applied to nations outside of Italy.

4. Tiberim: the god of the river; cf. sacra, etc., 3.

EXCURSUS.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GERMAN CAMPAIGNS.

GERMANICUS conducted operations against the Germans during three years, A.D. 14, 15 and 16. The campaign of the first year was hardly more than a reconnaissance, having as its principal object to divert the minds of the soldiers from the recent tragedies, and inspirit them by success. It was directed against the Marsi, a nation who bordered the Chatti upon the north, and who, as we are informed by Strabo (VII. p. 290) had moved back into the interior of the country, μεταστάρτα εἰς τὴν ἐν βάθει χώραν, probably at the time that Tiberius established the limes, or military frontier, spoken of I. 50. The Marsi were south of the Lippe, and probably upon the upper waters of the Ruhr.

The operations of the two following years had as their object partly to avenge the defeat of Varus in the Teutoburg Forest (A.D. 9), and partly to recover the territory lost at that time. Drusus, father of Germanicus, had conquered Germany as far as the Elbe, and established the province of Germania (B.C. 12). All of this territory, with some trifling exceptions, was lost by the defeat of Varus, and the military force of the province was withdrawn to the left bank of the Rhine, where it was, strictly speaking, within the boundaries of the Gallic province of Belgica.

In order to understand these campaigns it is necessary to cast a glance at the geographical situation (see Map). The river Rhine flows from Mentz to Cologne through a picturesque mountain region, unsuited to military operations. The country east of the river was here occupied by the powerful tribe of the Chatti, the modern Hessians, — almost the only German nation that has not changed its residence or name from that time to this. The natural approach to their country was up the valley of the Main; and at the mouth of this river, upon the Rhine, at Moguntiacum (Ments), the Romans established the headquarters of one division of their army.

At the northern extremity of the mountains dwelt the Tenc-teri; and at this important strategic point on the western bank, the German tribe of the Ubii had received lands, ut arcerent, non ut custodirentur (Germ. 28). Here were the headquarters of the lower army, until, A.D. 50, the oppidum of the Ubii was made a Roman colony (see I. 31. 3 n.), named Colonia Agrippina, in honor of the empress Agrippina, who was born there. The legions were now removed to Bonn, a few miles further up the river. The chief military position, however, upon the Lower Rhine, was about sixty miles below, where the river Lippe flows into the Rhine from the east. The valley of this river formed the natural approach to the country of the Cherusci (the nation of Arminius) as the Main did to the country of the Chatti. North of the Lippe dwelt the Usipetes and Bructeri; but the country between the Lippe and the Ruhr, a few miles further south, appears to have remained, for some distance back from the Rhine, in the hands of the Romans. (See I. 50. 2 n.) Still further east, and south of the Lippe, the Tubantes occupied the lands from which the Sugambrians had been removed by Tiberius (II. 26. 3 n.); the Tubantes had before been north of the Lippe. The military road from the Rhine into the heart of Germany was necessarily, like the modern railroad, carried along the banks of the Lippe; and opposite the mouth of this river was established the principal camp of the lower army — at Vetera (sc. castra), as that of the upper army was opposite the mouth of the Main. All the military operations of Germanicus, except a single short campaign against the Chatti, had this camp as their base of operations.

In the second year, A.D. 15, after this campaign against the Chatti (I. 56), Germanicus set on foot an expedition on a large scale against the Bructeri, upon the upper Ems. While in this region, in the neighborhood of the modern Münster, he conceived the plan of visiting the Teutoburg Forest, the scene of the defeat of Varus (A.D. 9).

It is from the account of this expedition alone (I. 60) that we learn the name of this battle-field, and it is from this passage and II. 7 that we get our only direct information as to its situation. Varus, as we learn from Dio Cassius (LVI. 18), had penetrated to the Weser, where he seems to have remained some months in summer quarters. Learning then of an uprising at some distance, he set out with his entire force, including all his baggage, as well as the women and children, for winter quarters upon the Rhine, intending to suppress the revolt upon his way. He is likely, therefore, to have set out by the direct road, but he had certainly left this road when he was attacked, for he is represented as making his way with difficulty, even before the attack, through a heavily wooded country, cut up with deep ravines, where he was obliged to cut trees to clear the way, and to build bridges, being greatly impeded too by the slippery nature of the soil, — there being a heavy rain and high wind. Now, the principal military road of the Romans was by the valley of the Lippe, which then as now afforded the most direct route from the Lower Rhine into the interior of Germany. On this river was the fortress Aliso, built by Drusus; and at the head of the river (ad caput Lupiae), Tiberius had passed one winter, A.D. 4 (Vell. Pat. II. 105). It is reasonable to suppose that Varus marched by this road, and only left it when he arrived in the neighborhood of the insurgent tribe, which may perhaps have been, as Knoke suggests, the Bructeri.

From Tacitus we learn two important facts. First, that the scene of the disaster was upon the Lippe; for the Germans who were besieging a fort upon this river (II. 7) retired at the approach of Germanicus, first, however, destroying the mound which he had erected on the battle-field the previous year

(I. 62). From I. 60. 5 it appears that it was also near the Ems. Germanicus had marched ad ultimos Bructerorum, by which we must understand the part of their territory furthest from the Rhine; that is, where the Ems runs for some distance almost parallel with the Lippe, nearly southeast of Münster. This was the country (quantum Amisiam et Lupiam amnes inter) which he laid waste; and here he found himself near (haud procul) the Teutoburg Forest. Now, there is but one region which answers all these conditions, — hilly, heavily wooded, with deep ravines (a saltus), and clayey soil, upon the Lippe and near the Ems. This is the forest of Havixbrock, east of Beckum and northeast of Hamm. Here the remains of a Roman camp are still to be seen, and in the neighborhood are other memorials and local names, which appear to recall the event. (See Essellen, Das varianische Schlachtfeld im Kreise Beckum, Berlin, 1874.)

Other places have been proposed, and plausibly defended: especially Mommsen (Die Oertlichkeit der Varusschlacht, Berlin, 1885) gives the great weight of his authority to the mountain region northeast of Osnaburg, where (at Barenau) a very large number of Roman coins of the reign of Augustus and of earlier date have been found. But it is hard to believe that this situation would be considered 'near' to an army on the Upper Ems; and Mommsen takes no notice of the evidence in Tacitus that the tumulus, and therefore the battle-field, was on the Lippe. Knoke (Die Kriegszüge des Germanicus, Berlin, 1887) argues for the valley entered by the Dören pass, south of Osnaburg. This situation would agree with I. 60. 5, being haud procul to Germanicus when on the Upper Ems; but it is too far from the Lippe to agree with II. 7.

In this discussion we necessarily confine our attention to general geographical and strategic considerations: what may be called the tactical point of view, the configuration of the battle-field, is practically worthless for us. Nearly all ancient historians (Cæsar is a marked exception) are deficient in the capacity—a rare one at any time—of describing accurately and intelligibly the physical features of a battle-field or any similar locality; and the description of the battle-field in question, given by Dio Cassius (LVI. 20), a writer separated from the event by centuries of time, and who cannot be supposed to have visited the spot in person, is too indefinite to be of much assistance. Velleius, a contemporary writer, makes no mention of mountains, or even hills; his words are, inclusus sibus paludibus insidiis (II. 119). Florus also (II. 30. 36) says per paludes perque silvas. Probably fifty localities could be found within the region of the Weser, Ems, and Lippe which would correspond sufficiently well with these descriptions; and, as Mommsen remarks (p. 6), “several solutions of a problem, when only one of them can be correct, really give us no help to a solution until we are in a condition to establish the exclusive possibility of one of the number.” This appears to be done, for the forest of Havixbrock, by a comparison of Tacitus’ Annals, I. 60. 5 and II. 7.

The campaign of A.D. 15 was far from being a success, and came near being a signal disaster. But Germanicus had now learned how to fight with the Germans, and the campaign of A.D. 16, narrated at length in Book II. (5 to 26), exhibits his generalship in the most favorable light. Upon this campaign, instead of taking the old route by the valley of the Lippe, Germanicus proceeded by water, following the lagoons and estuaries along the coast as far as the mouth of the Ems, and up that river to some point from which he struck across the country to the Weser. His natural course would have been to follow the valley of the Hase nearly east, keeping north of the mountainous region about Osnaburg (see II. 8. 4 n.). Whatever course he took, he met with so few obstacles that Tacitus says not a word about the march. The Weser was successfully passed, and two considerable victories were won; and thus the German wars came to an end with credit, if not with any decisive gain.

LIBER II.

 Parthos orto, qui petitum Roma acceptumque regem, quamvis gentis Arsacidarum, ut externum aspernabantur. Is fuit Vonones, obses Augusto datus a Phraate.
 Nam Phraates quamquam depulisset exercitus ducesque Romanos, cuncta venerantium officia ad Augustum

1. Tauro: his full name was Titus Statilius Sisenna Taurus; the order here found (the gentile name between the two cognomina) is so unusual with Tacitus that the editors consider the last cognomen to be a gloss.

mota, stirred up, for commota (Intr. 35 b).

provinciae Romanae: the only Roman province in the East at this time, except in Asia Minor and Egypt, was Syria, which embraced also Phoenicia and Judea, being bounded on the east by the Euphrates and the desert.

Parthos: the Parthians were a nation of mountaineers, who lived southeast of the Caspian Sea. After the breaking up of Alexander's empire, they gained their independence under Arsaces (about B.C. 250), but their kingdom was not greatly enlarged until the time of Mithridates I., about the middle of the second century before Christ. He took advantage of the collapse of the empire of the Seleucids, after the battle of Magnesia (B.C. 190), to seize all the territory as far west as the Euphrates. The empire of the Parthians was the only formidable rival of that of Rome, from which it was separated by the Euphrates and the Arabian desert. At this time its power had greatly decayed, but it still had sufficient strength and prestige to make the relations with Parthia a constant subject of care and anxiety to the Roman emperors.

gentis Arsacidarum: the royal family of Parthia, descendants of Arsaces, its first king. The cruel and tyrannical Phraates IV. gave four of his sons as hostages to Augustus, among them this Vonones. Phraates was murdered B.C. 2, by his illegitimate son Phraataces, who succeeded him, but was shortly set aside for Orodes, a distant kinsman. After his assassination, probably A.D. 7, Vonones was given to the Parthians as king, at their request.

2. quamquam, etc.: Phraates succeeded to the throne of Parthia, B.C. 38. Two years later Mark Antony led an expedition against him, and was ignominiously repulsed.

venerantium: equivalent, by a not uncommon usage, to venerationis—the offices of respect. Among other things, he had restored (B.C.

partem: i.e. as hostages; among them Vonones.

firmandae amicitiae: dative with miserat; cf. distrakendo hosti mittit, I. 60. 2.

haud perinde...quam: equivalent to not so much...as.

diffisus, because he distrusted; parallel with metu (Intr. 35 r).

2. ob internas caedes: qualifying finem. See note on gentis, I. 1.

venere in urbem legati: this was A.D. 5.

2. magnificum: it added to his glory to furnish a king to the rival empire.

Caesar: Augustus.

opibus, presents.

ut ferme: sc. fil.

3. hostium...infectum: cf. externum, I. 1.

4. trucidantium Crassum, etc.: Crassus was defeated at Carrhae, B.C. 53, and shortly afterwards killed; the defeat of Statianus, legatus of Mark Antony, was B.C. 36.

mancipium: this word, originally signifying the formal acceptance of a piece of property, and then the property itself, had come to have the special meaning of slave.

5. ipse, the man himself, apart from the circumstances under which he came to the throne.

diversus, etc. (Intr. 35 g): the Parthians regularly went on horseback, and lived upon the flesh of animals taken in the hunt; the gestamen lecticae, practised in Rome, was regarded by them as effeminate. The ablatives express characteristic.

erga: in late writers often used in an unfriendly sense.

anulo clausa; sed prompti aditus, obvia comitas: ignotae Parthis virtutes, nova vitia; et quia ipsorum moribus

6. vilissima, etc.: this refers to the Roman practice, introduced by Vonones, as well as the lectica, of sealing up the commonest necessities of life, such as bread and salt, that they might not be pilfered by slaves.

virtutes, vitia: the former refers to prompti aditus, obvia comitas; the latter to all that precedes.

8. Arsacidarum e sanguine: the degree of relationship is not known.

apud Dahae: the Dahae lived at this time east of the Caspian Sea; but the name of the modern Daghestan appears to show that they once resided west of that sea. Artabanus had been king of Media Atropatene.

2. Armenia: this mountainous country had retained its independence between the Parthian and Roman empires.

vacua: i.e. its royal throne.

Artavasden: the son of Tigranes I., who took part in the Mithridatic war against Rome: his capture by Antony was B.C. 34.

catenis: it is said that, to reconcile him to the disgrace, his chains were at first of silver, then of gold.

3. Arsacidarum: i.e. of Parthia.

4. Tigranes: he was brother of Artaxias, and had been captured with his father Artavasdes; his accession was B.C. 20.

5. in matrimonium: the son and daughter (Erato) of Tigranes II. were married and reigned as associates, after the Egyptian custom (more externo), according to which Ptolemy and Cleopatra, being brother and sister, were married and shared the throne.

The following table gives the relationship of these Armenian princes:—

4. Artavasdes: probably a younger son of Artavasdes I. He is not mentioned in the Monumentum Ancyranum, which speaks here (V. 28) only of a season of confusion; eandem gentem postea descendentem et rebellantem domitam per Gaium filium meum regi Ariobarzani regis Medorum Artabasi filio regendam tradidi, et post eius mortem filio eius Artavasdi.

2. Gaius Caesar: see I. 3. 3; it was on his way home from this expedition that he died, A.D. 4.

Ariobarzanen: this was a change of dynasty; see 4. 1 n. After the death of his son Artavasdes III., the throne was restored to the Armenian line in the person of Tigranes IV. (see VI. 40. 2), who was distantly related to that line.

3. stirpem eius: Artavasdes III. Erato: the daughter of Tigranes II., who had ruled conjointly with her brother Tigranes III. (3. 5), had been succeeded by her uncle, Artavasdes II. (1), and was now restored.

profugum Vononem: 3. 2.

4. minitari: Intr. 35 k.

defenderetur: sc. Vonones.

rector: the proper title of the governor of Syria was legatus.

excitum: sc. Vononem.

5. ludibrium, mockery of royal state. For the event see 68. 1.

5. ceterum Tiberio, etc.: with these words begins the most serious of the special charges made by Tacitus against Tiberius—that, uneasy at the growing popularity of his adopted son, he made the disturbed condition of the East a pretext to abstraheret novisque provinciis impositum dolo simul et casibus obiectaret. At ille, quanto acriora in eum studia militum et aversa patrum voluntas, celerandae victoriae intentior, tractare proeliorum vias et quae sibi tertium iam annum belligeranti saeva vel prospera evenissent: fundi Germanos acie et iustis locis, iuvare silvis, paludibus, brevi aestate et praematura hieme; suum militem haud perinde vulneribus quam spatiis itinerum, damno armorum adfici; fessas Gallias ministrandis equis; longum impedimentorum agmen opportunum ad insidias, defensantibus iniquum. At si mare intretur, promptam ipsis possessionem et hostibus ignotam, simul bellum maturius incipi legionesque et commeatus pariter vehi; separate him from an army that was strongly attached to him (suetis legionibus) and assigned him to this new and perilous command, taking measures at the same time to have him privately assassinated. As Tacitus evidently believed (see Intr. 7) that the death of Germanicus, which followed very shortly (72. 2), was the effect of poison, administered by Piso, at the instigation of Tiberius, — an assertion which is repeated by most modern historians, — we have a right to assume that he has given us all the evidence upon which the story rests, and it will easily appear from the following narrative that there is absolutely no evidence, even circumstantial, in its favor. In the present chapter the only fact of importance is the transfer of Germanicus from one important command to another. This was connected with a change of policy, the emperor finally deciding to give up all efforts to recover possession of Germany, and simply maintain the frontier of the Rhine. That he feared the popularity of Germanicus, and was glad of a pretext to change his command, is not unlikely; it has been a not unusual policy in all ages.

novis provinciis: see 43. 2, provinciae quae mari dividuntur.

2. tractare, consider, with reference to his future operations.

proeliorum vias: the route, whether by land or water. He had tried both ways the year before, and now decided for the water.

quae evenissent: i.e. the experience of his past campaigns, explained in fundi . . . iniquum.

3. iustis: i.e. suited for regular operations.

iuvare, etc.: contrasted with fundi . . . locis.

damno: see I. 71. 3.

ministrandis equis: these had been freely offered (I. 71. 3); but the loyalty of the Gauls must not be tried too severely.

4. possessionem: has here an active sense; taking into possession.

maturius: the expedition could be made by water earlier than land forces would find the ground fit for marching.

integrum: sc. viribus. They had been worn out by the long marches of the previous year.

6. huc: to this plan,—an advance by water.

ad census: see note on agendo censui, I. 31. 2.

P. Vitellio: see I. 70. The name of Antius occurs upon an inscription. For Silius and Caecina see I. 31.

Anteius: not otherwise known; as it is Tacitus' habit to give the praenomen on the first mention of a person, and as it is unlikely that an obscure person would be joined with the two governors, Nipperdey reads here Apronius (I. 56. 2).

2. mille naves: for conveying the entire army and stores. These ships were of three classes,—the first for the sea; the largest number (plures) for river navigation; also a large number (multae) for the conveyance of horses and engines. It is probable, as Knoke suggests (p. 296), that the first class conveyed the troops to the mouth of the Ems, where they were transferred to smaller boats.

breves: i.e. contrasted with naves longae, ships-of-war. This class was designed for conveying the troops through the sea; the two other classes, for river navigation. Knoke.

utero = alveo.

quaedam: i.e. a part of those already described.

planae carinis, etc.: so in Caesar, B. G. III. 13, of the Gallic ships: carinae aliquanto planiores quam nostrarum navium, quo facilius vada ac decessum aestus excipere possent. Dutch vessels are still built with broad, flat keels, so as to rest easily on the sand.

siderent: in the shallows along the coast and the ebb-tide; Knoke, less probably, refers it to river shallows.

appositis, etc.: Tacitus describes the boats of the Scandinavians as follows (Germ. 44): utrimque prora paratam semper appulsus frontem agit. The viking ships discovered of late years have this shape.

converso, etc.: cf. Hist. III. 47, pari utrimque prora et mutabili remigio.

3. pontibus, decks.

citae: here a participle, impelled; referring (as well as habiles) to all the ships.

augebantur: i.e. when the soldiers quickened their speed (alacritate) in rowing, the appearance of the ships was more formidable. — In, expressing purpose or result, is in no writer so common as in Tacitus (Intr. 35 r).

4. insula Batavorum: the island formed in the provinces of Guelderland and Holland by the rivers Rhine and Meuse and the Waal which connects them: see Germ. 29.

faciles appulsus, facilities for landing.

que . . . et, both . . . and, transmittendum ad bellum, for carrying war into the enemy's country. (Intr. 35 r).

5. qua Germaniam praevehitur: i.e. the right branch, the Rhine proper, while the left branch, the Waal, flows into the Meuse.

Mosa: an ablative of price, the regular construction with muta, exchange for. In reality the Waal does not change its name, but is lost in the Meuse.

7. irruptionem: from his headquarters at Mentz, before joining the main expedition.

castellum: this was probably the fortress Aliso, mentioned below; if not, it must have been a short distance further up the river, at any rate near the Teutoburg Forest. That the attack upon it was formidable, and the expedition a dangerous one, is shown by the fact that Germanicus took with him the large force of six legions.

3. tumultum: see I. 62. 2; its mention here shows conclusively that the battle-field was in the immediate neighborhood of the Lippe. The altar need not have been on the same spot, but in the neighborhood.

Varianis legionibus structum et veterem aram Druso

legionibus, Druso: datives, not of agency, but of interest.

sitam: the use of this word, as equivalent to conditam, is peculiar to Tacitus.

4. decucurrit: the decursio was a solemn march three times round the altar; see Verg. Aen. XI. 188.

haud visum: Furneaux thinks because it was too distant for him to visit. The natural interpretation of the passage, however, especially with the pluperfect, disiecerant (i.e. before they dilapsi sunt), is that both altar and mound were near the fort.

5. Alisonem: a fortress established by Drusus, at the junction of the Aliso with the Lippe. It is disputed whether the name is to be recognized in that of the town of Alsen, near Paderborn, or of the river Alse, which flows into the Lippe at Hamm. The situation at Hamm, upon the middle course of the Lippe, equally near the Cherusci and the Bructeri, is much the most probable. Moreover, it would be quite practicable to construct defences connecting this point with the Rhine (cuncta inter castellum Alisonem ac Rhenum), while to do this with a place so distant as Alsen would be difficult, and, in the present hostile relations with these tribes, practically impossible. As this fort was constructed by Drusus, it is probable that his altar was near to it,—an argument for regarding this as the fort mentioned at the beginning of the chapter.

limitibus, defensive works (see I. 50. 2 n.); aggeribus, causeways.

8. advenerat: i.e. at the appointed place (6. 4).

praemisso: to the Ems.

fossam: this connects the Rhine with the Yssel, thus giving a passage into Lake Flevo. Suetonius (Claud. 1) says of Drusus, fossas novi et immensi operis effecti, quas nunc adhuc Drusinae vocantur.

lacus: the series of small lakes and lagoons, part of which are now united in the Zuyder Zee.

2. Amisiae: to be construed with laevo amne, on the left bank (i.e. the side towards Gaul). It is taken as a locative by some; but although Ptolemy mentions a place called Amisium, Tacitus would have erratumque in eo, quod non subvexit aut transposuit militem dextras in terras iturum; ita plures dies efficiendis pontibus absumpti. Et eques quidem ac legiones 3 prima aestuaria, nondum accrescente unda, intrepidi transiere; postremum auxiliorum agmen Batavique in parte ea, dum insultant aquis artemque nandi ostentant, turbati et quidam hausti sunt.

Metanti castra Caesari Angrivariorum defectio a tergo 4 been likely to add oppidum or castellum, as with Aliso in the last chapter. It cannot correspond with the modern town of Emden, which is on the right bank. Most editors insert ore; but it is likely that Germanicus made use of the boats which were built expressly for river navigation. It is true he is criticised for not conveying his troops by water further than he did, but this may be explained by supposing, with Knoke, that his original intention had been to sail up the Hase or some other confluent of the Ems. This would explain the emphatic position of Amisiae, — the fleet was left in the Ems, on its left bank. The narrative shows that the place where he landed was still under the influence of the tides. It appears, moreover, from 23. 1, that on his return he conveyed his troops in ships per flumen Amisiam — from which it is probable that he left the fleet some way up the river.

subvexit aut transposuit, carry further up stream, or at least land on the other bank. See App. I.

iturum, since they were to go.

pontibus: it is possible that he built more than one bridge for so large an army, but more likely that the plural is used for the singular, — a bridge of several arches or divisions.

3. aestuaria: the flats along the river, flooded at high tide. We have in this chapter more even than the usual abruptness and compression. It is clear, however, that the sudden rise of the tide was while the army was marching up the right bank of the river.

in parte ea: i.e. in the rear (postremum agmen).

artem . . . ostentant: the Batavians, living in a country of rivers and lakes, were expert swimmers.

turbati, etc.: i.e. by a sudden and rapid rise of the tide.

4. metanti castra: another violent transition. The passage from the Ems to the Weser is not mentioned, and must be supplied in mind either here or at the end of the chapter. The present place is the most probable, because the establishment of the camp at the end of the march, when in the neighborhood of the enemy, would be much more important, and more likely to receive special mention than any of the encampments along the road. Moreover, the words at the beginning of the ninth chapter show that the army was already upon the Weser, and cannot be conjoined with what goes immediately before, except by understanding that the camp here laid out was on or near this river.

Weser, where the events next to be described took place, was in a generally southeasterly direction. The natural route would have been to follow the Hase nearly east, and then turn to the south, when in the neighborhood of the Weser. This course would explain the revolt of the Angrivarii as being in his rear, for they dwelt on the lower waters of the Weser, about Bremen, and apparently on both banks of the river (Knoke).

9. cum ceteris primoribus: the chief part of his army did not arrive until the next day (II. 1).

2. Flavus: probably a Roman nickname, because of his yellow hair.

amisso . . . oculo: in the same construction as fide.

paucis ante annis: perhaps after the defeat of Varus, A.D. 9-11.

3. permissum: see App. I. stipatoribus: the personal followers, who crowded about him.

pro: cf. I. 3. 4; 81. 1.

5. torquem: this ornament — seen about the neck of the so-called Dying Gladiator, and other statues of this class — was worn by Celts and other barbarians, and was often bestowed by way of reward upon Roman soldiers. Cf. Aul. Gell. IX. 13.

10. diversi: in a discussion, which passed into altercation.

2. cohibebantur: the river did not prevent them, and they would have rushed at each other, had not (ni), etc.

3. ductor popularium meruisset, he had served as leader of his countrymen (as auxiliaries before his revolt).

11. nisi . . . impositis: like quasquam (Intr. 35 f).

imperatorium, worthy of a commander; a novel use of this word.

2. primipilarius: see note on primi ordinis, I. 29. 2. The primi-

4. subvenientes: they had crossed at other points.

12. transgressus: probably having taken advantage of the dispersion of the enemy by the cavalry, to build a bridge.

alias nationes: i.e. besides the Cherusci.

Herculi: this god, mentioned in the Germania, 9, was probably Donar (Thor); he is by some identified with Irmin.

ausuros, etc.: see 13. 4.

2. attulere, brought word; governs the clause audiri . . . murmur.

per seria per iocos, when serious and when merry; qualifying eundem.

in acie: i.e. by their conduct in battle.

perfidos: the Cherusci had broken faith with Varus.

2. sestertios centenos: this was about $5.00; their present pay was ten asses, about ten cents. It is limited by stipendii.

3. omen: his promise of wives and lands; they would realize it by their own prowess.

matrimonia: Intr. 35 a.

4. tertia vigilia: at about midnight, the night being divided into four watches.

assultatum est, an assault was made; here with the dative; cf. I. 5 r. 6.

<sup>15.</sup> 2. fugacissimos: i.e. they had escaped from the slaughter of Varus, and had mutinied for fear of being exposed again to a like danger; cf. ceterorum Britannorum fugacissimi, Agr. 34.

seditionem: referring to the mutiny of the previous year.

vulneribus: wounds in the back (not the scars from flogging).

fluctibus, etc.: referring to the march of Vitellius, I. 70.

rursum: qualifies obiciant, referring to the defeat of Varus.

3. quaesita, resorted to. premeret, pursue in their retreat. miscuerint: subjunctive, representing a future perfect, — after the battle now to be fought.

4. aliud . . . reliquum: the omission of the interrogative particle is not in itself uncommon, but is very unusual in indirect discourse.

<sup>16.</sup> Idistaviso: the last part of this word is evidently the German Wiese (meadow); the first part is conjectured by Jacob Grimm to be Idis (nymph, elf), and he proposes to change to Idisiaviso, a reading adopted by most editors. It is probably to be taken as nominative, that being the usual construction of Tacitus with substantives, in phrases like nomen est (I. 45. 1 n). It is usually placed just above the great bend of the Weser near Minden, where the river runs for some distance parallel with the Wesergebirge, and quite near to it. Knoke places it a little further up, at Eisbergen, which name he thinks derived from Idistaviso. The following plan, copied from Knoke, presents

BATTLE OF IDISTAVISO.

2. prominentia montium, the spurs of the mountains, a truer partitive than subiecta vallium, I. 65. 1. resistunt: the correct explanation of this puzzling passage appears to be given by Knoke. resistunt is to be taken here in its original, purely neuter signification,—come to a stand, cease to advance. As the river banks retreat (i.e. to the south), and on the other hand, the spurs of the mountains cease to project, the meadow between (not narrow and widens, but) bends (sinuatur), between north and south. This is the character of the meadow at Eisbergen.

 3. pone tergum: i.e. of the Germans. The wood was on the lower part of the slope of the hill (insurgebat). The description seems to be that of a pine wood.

4. iuga: one of the projecting spurs, from which they could take the Romans in the flank.

5. praetoriae cohortibus: see I. 8. 3 n; these two cohorts appear to have been sent to the crown prince as a special bodyguard.

ut ordo, etc.: to deploy from the march (ordo agminis) into line of battle (in aciem).

delicorumque et Gallicae cohortes signa obiecissent.

17. per ferociam, impatiently, thus disturbing the plan of the battle (Intr. 35 i).

validissimos, Stertinium: both with their infinitives depending on iubet. The former were to attack the Cherusians on the right flank as they descended from the ridge, while Stertinus made a circuit on the mountain side, and took the German position in the rear.

adfuturus: i.e. to attack in front, co-operating in season with these flank movements.

2. octo aquilae: this was the number of legions in the army, and the standard of the legion was a silver eagle (propria legionum numina).

silvas: where the enemy were.

advertere, attracted the attention of; cf. l. 41. 1; gemitusque ac planctus etiam militum aures oraque advertere.

3. praemissus eques: that is, both the validissimi equitum, and those under Stertinus.

postremos: the entire rear, including the Cherusci, who were furthest from the river. These were attacked by Stertinus.

4. duo . . . agmina: those who occupied the woods were pushed forward into the plain, because the hills in their rear were occupied by the cavalry forces; those in the plain, attacked in front by the pedestris acies, fell back into the woods. The imperfect shows the effort at these movements, but all was in confusion.

5. medii inter hos: so as to add to the confusion.

detrudebantur: by Stertinus.

vulnere: by braving wounds, thus inspiring by his example. These ablatives qualify sustentabat.

6. illa rupturus, and would have burst through at that point.

Vindelicorum: the Vindelici, occupying the southwestern part of Bavaria (Augsburg is Augusta Vindelicorum) formed a part of

7. oblitus: i.e. by himself.

Chaucis: they had submitted to the Romans, and were serving as auxiliaries. See I. 38. 1, and 60. 3.

emissum, suffered to escape.

8. Visurgim: the river flows here in a general westerly direction, so that by crossing it they would still be in the country of their friends.

ruentium, the fugitives, crowding upon them.

9. prorutae, cut down, by the Romans.

18. quinta ab hora: about eleven o'clock.

2. Tiberium imperatorem: this was according to the ancient custom of saluting the victorious general as imperator. This honor, and that of the triumph, were bestowed only upon generals who fought suo imperio and suis auspiciis; in accordance with this principle, the emperors reserved them to themselves, since the governors of the provinces were only their legati.

tropaeorum: these were erected after a victory, and consisted of pieces of armor generally fixed to the trunk of a tree, upon some elevated spot, so arrayed as to present the appearance of the conquered warrior. It was a Greek custom, adopted by the Romans. Cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 5: ingentem quercum decisis undique ramis | constituit tumulo, fulgentiaque induit arma . . . aptat rorantes sanguine cristas | telaque trunca viri et bis sex thoraca petulum | perfossumque locis, clipe- plebes, etc.: see Intr. 35 j.

varii, it would seem that they were marching towards the north; but we have no other positive clew to the position, and do not even know what river is referred to. Knoke points to Leese, a few miles north of Minden, on the east bank of the Weser, where the remains of an earthwork have been found, connecting the river with a marshy plain, which in the time in question must have been covered with woods. The ground here answers completely to the description (as may fifty other places in the region); and an interesting piece of supplementary evidence is a heap of small stones of equal size, artificially flattened on two sides, which would seem to be such as were hurled by the libratores, mentioned in the next chapter. He thinks that a loaded caisson was left by some accident in the morass, when the Romans withdrew. The appended plan, from Knoke, gives the localities in question, and will assist in understanding the manoeuvres, even if the correctness of his view cannot be absolutely established. The German line ran, according to him, from the agger at Leese, southeasterly to the Rehburg hills, their centre being at Düsseldorf. The Romans approached from the plains south of Loccum.

arta, narrow.

Angrivarii: they dwelt on both sides of the lower Weser; their name is preserved in Engern, the name given to this part of Saxony in the Middle Ages.

extulerant, had thrown up.

dirimerentur: i.e. as a boundary.

4. hic: relating not to aggere alone, but the whole passage locum . . . ambibat. Their lines (on this plan) must have stretched southeast from the agger to the neighborhood of Düsseldorf.

propinquis lucis: probably in advance of the position, and towards one side; probably on the southwest slopes of the Rehburg Hills.

20. prompta, at hand, in sight.

ipsis: the dative of reference equivalent to a possessive, — to their own destruction.

2. Seio Tuberoni: brother of Sejanus; he had perhaps taken the place of Apronius (see I. 56. 1). He was to operate in the open ground, campum (east of Loccum), against the cavalry, who were in the wooded hills.

aequo . . . aditu: this would be according to the plan at the right of the Roman advance, where the German cavalry could have fallen upon their rear, if they had not been engaged by Tubero. The ground being level (plana) the advance here was made easily.

aggerem eniteretur: for the accusative, cf. I. 30. 2 (egredi), I. 61. 6 (elabi), III. 14. 5 (evadere).

arduum: sc. erat; i.e. the assault upon the agger.

sibi: with permisit, or rather, by zeugma, some word like sumpsit.

3. plana: i.e. the aequus aditus.

superne: the use of an adverb as an attributive adjective, found also in Livy; cf. comminus below.

4. funditores libritoresque: the former were regular slingers, who cast pebbles and leaden bullets, glandes; the libritores used leather thongs, lora, and hurled large stones. When the defenders had been dislodged from the rampart by these missiles and those from the engines, the legions were again brought up.

5. tormentis: catapults, from which shafts were sent; see I. 56. 5 n.

6. primus Caesar: he led the attack after the capture of the works. We are to understand that the other divisions of the infantry were already in the woods.

collato gradu: a hand to hand fight; cf. congressi, II. 3 n. When they had passed the agger, they still met a stubborn resistance.

7. montes: the wooded hills where the cavalry fight was going on, in which the Romans had the worst of it.

21. colligeret, draw back, recover. This metaphorical use of colligo is found only here.

stabile, stationary, — they were not able to move.

insidens capulo manus: this gave a surer grasp.

nuda ora: see Germ. 6; vix uni alterive cassis aut galea.

imprompto: a compound, found only in Livy, Tacitus, and Ausonius.

sive: the omission of the first sive is not unusual in Tacitus. It may be rendered or perhaps.

vulnus: see 17. 6.

4. legionem: sc. unam.

ambigue: the cavalry fight is said to have been indecisive, from which we are to gather that it was on the whole a failure; cf. I. 63. 4 n.

properavissent: this represents a future perfect indicative of the direct discourse; he directs him to carry on the war unless the enemy should submit.

omnium: neuter.

<sup>23</sup>. adulta, literally, full grown; i.e. at its height. According to Servius (ad Verg. Georg. I. 43), the three months of each season are called respectively, novus, adultus, praeceps.

restri in hibernacula remissae; plures Caesar classi impositas per flumen Amisiam Oceano invexit. Ac primo placidum aequor mille navium remis strepere aut velis impelli; mox atro nubium globo effusa grando, simul variis undique procellis incerti fluctus prospectum adimere, regimen impedire; milesque pavidus et casuum maris ignarus dum turbat nautas vel intempestive iuvat, officia prudentium corrumpibat. Omne dehinc caelum et mare omne in austrum cessit, qui tumidis Germaniae terris, profundis amnibus, immenso nubium tractu validus et rigore vicini septentrionis horridior, rapuit disiecitque naves in aperta Oceani aut insulas saxis abruptis vel per occulta vada infestas. Quibus paulum aegreque vitatis, postquam mutabat aestus eodemque quo ventus ferebat, non adhaerere ancoris, non exhaustis irrupentis undas poterant; equi iumenta, sarcinae, etiam arma praecipitantur quo levarentur alvei, manantes per latera et fluctu superurgente. Quanto violentior cetero per Amisiam: showing that, in all likelihood, he had left the fleet in the river; see 8. 2 n.

2. ac primo: i.e. after entering the ocean.

mille navium: see 6. 2.

remis . . . impelli, resounded with the (splashing of the) oars, or was fretted by (the ships, propelled by) sails.

globo: ablative of source without a preposition after effusa, a construction also found in Sallust and Livy.

incerti: as distinguished from the regular swell of a steady gale.

prudentium: the experienced sailors, contrasted with the land-lubber soldiery.

3. in austrum cessit: cf. cesere, I. 1. 3; the southwest wind conquered all the rest.

tumidis, swollen, i.e. hilly; the wind came from the mountainous lands of Central Germany. See Agricola, 10, montes causa ac materies tempestatum. These ablatives are construed with validus. See App. I.

rigore: the cause of horridior.

insulas: they were sailing between the mainland and the low islands along the coast.

4. mutabat: neuter; the ebb tide set in, thus carrying them in the same direction as the wind.

eodem, i.e. in the same direction. This does not refer merely to the tide, but to the movement of the great waves, which was felt as soon as the southwest wind carried them out of the shelter of the shore. Pfitzner.

manantes, leaking.

- mari Oceanus et truculentia caeli praestat Germania, tantum illa clades novitate et magnitudine excessit, hostilibus circum litoribus aut ita vasto et profundo 2 ut credatur novissimum ac sine terris mare. Pars navium haustae sunt, plures apud insulas longius sitas eiectae; milesque nullo illic hominum cultu fame absumptus, nisi quos corpora equorum eodem elisa toleraverant.
- 3 Sola Germanici triremis Chaucorum terram appulit; quem per omnes illos dies noctesque apud scopulos et prominentis oras, cum se tanti exitii rerum clamitaret, vix cohibuere amici quo minus eodem mari oppeteret.

- 6 rapti et remissi a regulis. Ut quis ex longinquo reverterat, miracula narrabant, vim turbinum et inauditas volucres, monstra maris, ambiguas hominum et beluarum formas, visa sive ex metu credita.

24. vasto et profundo: supply mare from the following mare.

sine terris: qualifying mare, — a sea stretching to the end of the earth.

2. insulas longius sitas: they may have been driven upon any of the lands surrounding the North Sea; it appears from Germ. 44, that Tacitus considered Scandinavia an island. It is not likely, however, that in this case any tidings would have come from them, and the reference below, ut scrutarentur insulas, shows that it was probably the low uninhabited islands outside of those by which they were coasting.

3. scopulos: a rhetorical exaggeration, as this is a sandy coast.

oppeteret: sc. mortem.

4. relabente aestu: as in the last chapter, not the tide, but the stormy waves.

intentis, stretched; i.e. as sails.

5. redemptos ab interioribus: they had managed to escape from the shipwreck, but had been caught and reduced to slavery among the inland nations.

6. monstra maris: Peto Albinovanus wrote of this expedition ambiguas . . . formas: these were the monstra, — partly human, partly animal, like mermaids. The genitive denotes the objects between which the doubt existed.

25. 2. aquilam: three eagles had been lost with Varus. The first was recovered the year before (l.

60. 4); the third, according to Dio, in the time of Claudius.

3. hostem: the *modicum praetion especially common with animi.

quis, any one of the soldiers.

3. decretum triumphum: see
l. 55. 1.

satis . . . casuum: the puzzling question why the frontier of the Elbe was given up by Tiberius, is eventuum, satis casuum. Prospera illi et magna proelia: eorum quoque meminisset quae venti et fluctus, nulla ducis culpa, gravia tamen et saeva damna intulissent. answered by Mommsen (Rom. Prov. I. 61. seq.) by pointing to the uneasy condition of both Gaul and Pannonia, and the impossibility of maintaining so distant a frontier with the armies and resources of the empire. See also the advice of Augustus, coercendi intra terminos imperii, I. 11. 7.

noviens: these were B.C. 9 and 8, after the death of Drusus; A.D. 4 and 5, an independent command; and 9, 10, and 11, after the defeat of Varus. To these add an embassy, B.C. 7, and a campaign begun against Maroboduus, A.D. 6.

Sugambros: the Sugambri had formerly occupied the lands south of the Lippe, but had, like the Ubii, been transported across the Rhine, and received lands in the relation afterwards known as that of the laeti, rendering for them military service. See I. 31. 3 n. Their lands upon the Lippe appear to have been taken by the Tubantes, I. 51. 4 n.

Maroboduus: this was A.D. 6, when Tiberius, recalled by a revolt in Pannonia, had agreed to a peace with Maroboduus; see 46. 2.

ultioni consultum esset, enough had been done for vengeance.

4. modestiam, etc., he assails his modesty; i.e. tempts him on this side by this offer.

praesens: he entered upon the office, however, while absent from the city; see 53. 1.

5. nullo hoste: ablative absolute of cause.

lauream (coronam): worn in a triumph, and afterwards consecrated to the Capitoline Jove.

6. decori: a new use of the dativus incommodi, for things; cf. mortis crimant, I. 48. 2, and extractum custodiat, VI. 23. 5.

Sub idem tempus e familia Scriboniorum Libo 27 Drusus defertur moliri res novas. Eius negotii initium ordinem finem curatius disseram, quia tum primum reperta sunt quae per tot annos rem publicam exedere. Firmius Catus senator, ex intima Libonis amicitia, a iuvenem improvidum et facilem inanibus ad Chaldaeorum promissa, magorum sacra, somniorum etiam inter-

27. Libo Drusus: in the Kalendar of Amiternum he is called Marcus; both Suetonius (Tib. 25) and Dio Cassius (LVII. 15) call him Lucius, probably by a confusion with his brother, the consul of the present year (I. 1.). The family Libo was of the Scribonian gens (e familia Scriboniorum), but the father of the conspirator had been adopted by Marcus Livius Drusus, father of the empress Livia, and had assumed his name. It would seem, however, that both his sons had re-entered the Scribonian gens, perhaps by re-adoption; for the consul of A.D. 16 is called Lucius Scribonius Libo, and the expression (32. 2) ne quis Scribonius cognomentum Drusi assumeret shows that Libo Drusus was a Scribonius, not a Livius.

The following table, from Nipperdey, will enable one to trace the complicated relationships of this family:—

defertur: for the beginning of the delationes, which were the scandal of this reign, and continued to be an abuse until the time of Domitian, see I. 72. 3. It was the abuses developed in this case quae per tot annos rem publicam exedere.

2. senator: as he is not designated as consularis, praetorius, or aedilicius, he probably received the praetorship as a reward (32. 1); he is, however, still called senator, A.D. 24 (IV. 31. 7).

amicitia: Intr. 35 a; cf. 77. 1.

inanibus: dative neuter.

Chaldaeorum, astrologers; magorum, magicians; the Chaldaeans were famed from antiquity for their knowledge of the stars; the magi, the priests of the Medes, ministers of a corrupted form of the religion of Zoroaster, readily converted their religious formalities into the practice of magic rites. In this way the word magic came to have its present meaning. Rome, under the empire, swarmed with these and other kinds of fortune-tellers.

pretes impulit, dum proavum Pompeium, amitam Scriboniam, quae quondam Augusti coniunx fuerat, consobrinos Caesares, plenam imaginibus domum ostentat, hortaturque ad luxum et aes alienum, socius libidinum et necessitatum, quo pluribus indiciis illigaret.

- 28 Ut satis testium et qui servi eadem noscerent repperit, aditum ad principem postulat, demonstrato crimine et reo per Flaccum Vescularium equitem Romanum, cui propior cum Tiberio usus erat. Caesar indicium haud aspernatus congressus abnuit; posse enim eodem Flacco internuntio sermones commeare. Atque interim Libonem ornat praetura, convictibus adhibet, non vultu alienatus, non verbis commotior, — adeo iram conconsobrinos Caesares: Gaius and Lucius, grandsons of Augustus. This near kinship to the imperial family, in the absence of a fixed rule of succession, appears to have inspired Libo with a dangerous ambition. The case was very similar to that of the Duke of Buckingham and other members of the royal family, whom Henry VIII. caused to be beheaded. (See Bailey, Succession to the English Crown, p. 106 seq.). But Libo appears to have gone a step further than Buckingham or Surrey.

plenam imaginibus domum: the ius imaginum, or right of having waxen masks, representing distinguished members of the family, which were kept in the atrium, and carried in funeral processions, was the distinguishing mark of nobility; it established the pedigree.

socius necessitatum: i.e. helping to borrow money for him. For a different use of necessitas, see I. 11. 6.

28. noscerent, would acknowledge.

repperit: i.e. Catus.

eadem: i.e. the alleged crimes.

Flaccum Vescularium: for his death, see VI. 10. 2.

cui . . . erat: we see the beginnings of a court in the modern sense, in this requirement of an intermediary. See Inge, Society in Rome under the Caesars, p. 119.

2. congressus: i.e. with Catus. commeare, be carried on, by message.

3. interim: Suetonius says (Tib. 25) that he waited two years before bringing the matter to a head, but that in the meantime he was constantly on his guard against assassination: inter pontifices sacrificanti pro secespila plumbeum cultrum subiciendum curavit, et secretum petenti nonnisi adhibito Druso filio dedit, dextramque obambulantis, veluti incumbens, quoad perageretur sermo, continuit. Suetonius, it may be added, represents Libo as unquestionably guilty, — res novas clam moliebatur, — and his guilt appears clearly enough from the account of Tacitus. Velleius (II. 129) represents the action of the emperor as very prompt, — quam celeriter ingratum et nova molientem oppressit!

diderat; cunctaque eius dicta factaque, cum prohibere posset, scire malebat, donec Iunius quidam, temptatus ut infernas umbras carminibus eliceret, ad Fulcinium Trionem indicium detulit. Celebre inter accusatores Trionis ingenium erat avidumque famae malae. Statim corripit reum, adit consules, cognitionem senatus poscit. cum prohibere posset: i.e. he allowed him to commit himself.

temptatus: i.e. by Libo.

infernas . . . eliceret: a form of magic resorted to on rare and momentous occasions; as in the story of the witch of Endor. 1 Sam. 28.

Fulcinium Trionem: see III. 10. 1, and 13. 2.

indicium detulit: this was the first step in the procedure, which, it will be remembered, regularly emanated from private persons (Intr. 15 and 16). The witness (index) laid his testimony before the professional accuser, who then brought the case before the magistrates (adit consules).

4. corripit, indicts; a term properly used for physical arrest, but common in this sense.

adit consules: see I. 72. 4 n, and 73. 3 n.

cognitionem: the term properly used for a trial by the senate, as distinguished from the iudicium of the courts.

29. veste mutata, putting on mourning, — perhaps not formal mourning, the  toga pulla, but with neglected robes, toga sordida.

vocem, counsel; finding none, he was obliged to enter the senate house sine patrono; see next chapter.

2. fratri: Lucius Libo, consul ordinarius of the year (1. 1). He is not mentioned here as consul, because his term expired July 1, while the trial took place in September (32. 4). The practice was introduced by the triumvirs, B.C. 39, and in the reign of Augustus it became the custom, to elect the consuls for only a part of the year, usually six months (I. 55. 1 n). After the reign of Tiberius, it was common to have three or four pairs of consuls or even more in a year. See Mommsen, Röm. St. II. p. 79.

tat Caesar ita moderans, ne lenire neve asperare crimina 80 videretur. Accesserant praeter Trionem et Catum accusatores Fonteius Agrippa et C. Vibius, certabantque cui ius perorandi in reum daretur, donec Vibius, quia nec ipsi inter se concederent et Libo sine patrono introisset, singillatim se crimina obiecturum professus, protulit libellos vecordes adeo ut consultaverit Libo an habiturus foret opes, quis viam Appiam Brundisium usque

 3 Negante reo agnoscentes servos per tormenta interrogari placuit. Et quia vetere senatus consulto quaestio in caput domini prohibebatur, callidus et novi iuris repertor Tiberius mancipari singulos actori publico iubet, moderans: sc. sibi or verbia.

 ne: expressing here in form a purpose rather than a result; — showing such self-restraint as not to seem.

80. certabant: when more than one person wished to conduct the prosecution, the decision between them was made by the magistrate, by a procedure known as divinatio, as in the case of Cicero and Caecilius in the impeachment of Verres.

perorandi, pleading in a set speech.

singillatim: taking up the items of the indictment one by one, as Cicero had done against Verres.

consultaverit: sc. Chaldaeos, etc.

viam Appiam: this road was 360 miles long; it was a puerile charge, as Tacitus says, but it was implied that it was only as emperor that he could hope to possess such means.

2. si mollius acciperes: qualifies miseranda.

tamen: the rest was folly — this was crime.

notas: partly magic characters, (occultas), partly of a criminal nature (atroces).

3. agnoscentes: though they testified voluntarily, their testimony was not valid without torture.

quaestio in caput domini: see Cic. pro Mil. 22. 59; pro Deiot. I.

3. Incestus and conjuratio were made exceptions, and afterwards maiestas and some other crimes. It is hard to see, therefore, why Tiberius should have recourse to the subterfuge here mentioned.

novi iuris repertor: as a matter of fact, this device had been employed by Augustus (Dio, LV. 5). With some reason, therefore, Stahr accuses Tacitus not only of inaccuracy, but of direct falsification.

actori publico, treasury agent, generally a slave or a freedman. By the sale of the slaves to him they became servi publici, and scilicet ut in Libonem ex servis salvo senatus consulto quaereretur.

Ob quae posterum diem reus petivit, domumque digressus extremas preces P. Quirinio propinquo suo ad principem mandavit. Responsum est ut senatum rogaret. Cingebatur interim milite domus, strepabant etiam in vestibulo, ut audiri, ut aspici possent, cum Libo ipsis quas in novissimam voluptatem adhibuerat epulis excruciatu vocare percussorem, prensare servorum dextras, inserere gladium. Atque illis, dum trepidant, dum refugiunt, evertentibus appositum in mensa lumen, feralibus iam sibi tenebris duos ictus in viscera derexit. salvo, without violating.

4. posterum diem: a delay, called comperendinatio, which allowed the accused to go into voluntary exile, or commit suicide.

P. Quirinio: see III. 22. 1, 48. 1.

§1. ut senatum rogaret: the petition (preces) must be addressed to the senate, which had sole cognizance of the matter.

cingebatur, etc.: by order of the senate.

cum . . . vocare: Intr. 35 A.

excruciatu: i.e. with terror. He supposed the soldiers had come to put him to death.

percussorem: a slave who should put him to death.

inserere: i.e. in their hands.

2. illis, etc.: they were too much frightened to execute his wish.

feralibus, of death; predicate with tenebris. The darkness of the night was to him the darkness of death.

4. peracta, carried through to judgment.

petiturum: sc. fuisse. We see here an illustration of the peculiar formality of Tiberius' mind (Intr. 16). The law must take its course, and then mercy may interpose.

nocenti: dative of advantage.

§2. bona . . . dividuntur: by the law of Augustus, the accusers received one-fourth of the property; here they received the whole. The rule by which the property of those who committed suicide before conviction was not confiscated (VI. 29. 2), was violated in this case; cf. IV. 20. 1. praeturae extra ordinem: Tiberius had sworn (I. 14. 6) not to ex-ordinem datae iis qui senatori ordinis erant. Tunc Cotta Messalinus, ne imago Libonis exsequias posterorum comitaretur censuit, Cn. Lentulus, ne quis Scribonius cognomentum Drusi assumeret. Supplicationum dies Pomponii Flacci sententia constituti. Dona Iovi Marti Concordiae, utque iduum Septembrium dies, quo se Libo interfecerat, dies festus haberetur, L. Piso et Gallus Asinius et Papius Mutilus et L. Apronius decrevere; quorum auctoritates adulationesque rettuli, ut sciretur vetus id in re publica malum. Facta et de mathematicis magisque Italia pellendis senatus consulta; quorum e numero L. Pituanus saxo deiectus est, in P.

ceed the legitimate number of twelve praetors. Dio, however (LVIII. 20), says that he appointed sometimes fifteen and sometimes sixteen. Probably the praetorship was now given to senators who had not reached the required age, or held the offices which by law should have preceded this. Pfitzner suggests that the office was assigned to them in advance.

2. Cotta Messalinus: son of the distinguished orator and statesman Messala, adopted by Aurelius Cotta.

Cn. Lentulus: highly praised by Tacitus at his death: see IV. 44. 1.

cognomentum: there are several instances of a family agreeing never to use a particular praenomen, the most famous one being that of the Manlii, who forbade the name Marcus on account of the treason of Marcus Manlius (Liv. VI. 20); so Lucius in the Claudian gens, on account of the misdeeds of two of that name (Suet. Tib. 1). See also III. 17. 8. That the cognomen Drusus was prohibited in the present case, was probably because of its association with the imperial family, in the father of Germanicus and the sons of both Germanicus and Tiberius.

3. Pomponii Flacci: now consul designatus. — L. Piso: probably brother of Cn. Piso; 34. 1, III. 11. 1. — Gallus Asinius: see I. 12. 4. — L. Apronius: see I. 56. 1.

4. Concordiae; see Orelli, 25: pro salute Tiberii Caesaris Augusti optimi ac iustissimi principis. For other fragments of inscriptions found in the ruins of the Temple of Concord, above the arch of Septimius Severus, see Jordan, Topographie der Stadt Rom. I. 2. 333.

decrevere, proposed.

vetus id . . . malum: i.e. adulation: as old as the time of Tiberius, — in the time of Tacitus this abuse had reached a great height.

5. de mathematicis: i.e. astrologers; such votes were often passed, but never carried out persistently.

saxo: sc. Tarpeio; this punishment was inflicted for false witness, incest, sorcery, and perhaps other crimes.

cum classicum . . . iussissent: on the morning of the day of trial, the trumpet was sounded on the citadel, ars, around the walls, and finally before the house of the accused.

more prisco advertere: the punishment more prisco, of one who was judged a public enemy, was to be put naked in the pillory and flogged to death: cum comperisset nudi hominis cervicem inseri furcae, corpus virginis ad necem caedi (Suet. Nero, 49). Usually, however, he was scourged for a while and then beheaded.

22. Q. Haterio: see I. 13. 4.

praetura functo: not merely of praetorian rank (praetorius), but having actually held the office; for many by special grant enjoyed the rank (ornamenta) without having held the office.

This passage really has no bearing on the subject, inasmuch as Fronto's proposition was a legitimate amendment; it is therefore placed by Nipperdey in brackets, as a gloss.

frequens, a common practice.

3. id: i.e. adolevisse . . . opes.

apud Fabricios: in the early part of the third century B.C.

apud Scipiones: during the second century B.C. In the mean time there had been a great increase of wealth and luxury. In the time of Fabricius it was forbidden to have of silver plate more than one dish and a saltcellar, and he, as censor, removed from the senate the consular and ex-dictator Publius Cornelius Rufinus, for having ten pounds of plate (Livy, Epit. 14).

Facilem assensum Gallo sub nominibus honestis confessio vitiorum et similitudo audientium dedit. Adiecerat et Tiberius non id tempus censurae nec, si quid in moribus labaret, defuturum corrigendi auctorem.

rem publicam: the state of society.

referri, are referred to as a standard, are judged in relation to.

qua tenui: ablative absolute of time, opposed to postquam...venerit.

angustas: sc. esse.

eo magnificentiae, to that pitch of splendor.

gliscere, grow in wealth, etc.

5. distinctos: sc. a plebe.

senatus et equitum census: the senatorial census was according to Mommsen (Röm. St. I. 400) fixed at 1,000,000 sesterces = $50,000; the equestrian census was 400,000 sesterces = $20,000 (id. III. 499).

locis: places in the theatre, where the senators occupied the orchestra, and the equites, by the Roscian law, the first fourteen rows of the cavea. ordinibus relates to the class (senatorial and equestrian); dignationibus (as distinguished from dignitate), to their qualifications, in property, birth, etc., for offices and responsibilities.

ita iis (sc. antistare), so likewise they (have the advantage) in those things, etc. The passage is harsh and very likely corrupt.

clarissimo: a standing epithet for senators, as splendidus for knights having a senatorial census.

subeunda, carentum esse: following nisi. The extension of the accusative with infinitive to dependent clauses in oratio obliqua had begun before Tacitus, though no case of protasis occurs before him; cf. Intr. 35 s.

delenimentis: the comforts of wealth.

6. non id tempus censurae: the regimen morum was a regular part of the duties of the censors during the republic, and during the empire was assumed by the emperors. Tiberius hints that he will himself see to that, when the time comes (nec . . . defuturum corrigendi auctorem).

fori, courts; these were regularly held upon the Forum.

ambitum: see I. 2. 2 n.

abire, was going away; expressing future time, as frequently in colloquial language.

imminui: i.e. in her dignity.

 2 diversas sententias noscere. Piso, quamquam afuturum se dixerat Caesar, ob id magis agendas censebat, ut 3 absente principe senatum et equites posse sua munia
 3 sustinere decorum rei publicae foret. Gallus, quia speciem libertatis Piso praeceperat, nihil satis illustre aut ex dignitate populi Romani nisi coram et sub oculis Caesaris, eoque conventum Italiae et affluentis provincias praesentiae eius servanda dicebat. Audiente haec
 4 Tiberio ac silente magnis utrimque contentionibus acta, 86 sed res dilatae. Et certamen Gallo adversus Caesarem exortum est. Nam censuit in quinquennium magistratum comitia habenda, utque legionum legati, qui ante praeturam ea militia fungebantur, iam tum praetores destinarentur; princeps duodecim candidatos in annos 2 singulos nominaret. Haud dubium erat eam senten-sacred and highly privileged personages in the state.

85. res prolatae, postponement of business. Of this phrase res dilatae (4) is a variation.

pretium: used for operae pretium only by Tacitus; cf. I. 57. 4.

2. agendas: sc. rea.

equites: i.e. as iudices in the courts, distinguished from the judicial action of the senate (I. 72. 4 n., and 73. 3 n.).

3. conventum . . . provincias: deputations from Italian towns and from the provinces; they came to Rome on business connected with taxes, public contracts, etc.

4. haec: nominative.

86. in quinquennium: the election, by the senate (I. 15. 1) should be made for five years in advance, as had been done under Caesar; the intention probably was to establish the custom of each year designating those who should hold office five years later. Those who at present were in command of legions — legati pro praetore, many of whom were not yet of praetorian rank — were to be appointed at once to the praetorship, while the rest of the appointments for the five years were to be made by the emperor.

utque, etc.: Intr. 35 r.

2. haud dubium erat, etc.: the infinitive after negative expressions of doubt (for quis with subjunctive) belongs to Livy, Nepos, and late writers.

tiam altius penetrare et arcana imperii temptari. Tiberius tamen, quasi augeretur potestas eius, disseruit: grave moderationi suae tot eligere, tot differre; vix per 3 singulos annos offensiones vitari, quamvis repulsam propinqua spes soletur: quantum odii fore ab iis qui ultra quinquennium proiciantur? Unde prospici posse quae cuique tam longo temporis spatio mens, domus, fortuna? Superbire homines etiam annua designatione: quid si 4 honorem per quinquennium agitent? Quinquuplicari 5 prorsus magistratus, subverti leges, quae sua spatia exercendae candidatorum industriae quaerendisque aut potiundis honoribus statuerint. Favorabili in speciem oratione vim imperii tenuit.

arcana imperii: by interfering with the details of administration, which were reserved to the emperor and his privy council. One of the principles of the imperial government was the withdrawal of the military authority from the senate, and its concentration in the hands of the emperor.

quasi, etc.: cf. I. 14. 6 n.

differre: i.e. in quinquennium.

3. mena, sentiment (loyalty, etc.); domus, family connections: fortuna, means; all of these might change in the course of five years.

4. honorem: as magistratus designatus. The consul elect ranked above the consulares, and was asked his opinion (sententia) in the senate before them; and so with the other magistracies. To enjoy this dignity for five years would excite arrogance and give rise to complications.

5. leges: the laws which fixed the age at which the several magistracies could be held, their order, and the intervals of time which must elapse between them.

vim imperii tenuit: he kept in his hands the substance of power.

87. census, property-standing; cf. Vell. Pat. II. 129: senatorum census . . . quam libenter supplevit, ut neque luxuriam invitaret, neque honestam paupertatem pateretur dignitate destitus.

accepisset: the thought of those who felt surprise.

2. oratoris Hortensii: the orator, the rival of Cicero, but older than he, and opposed to him in the case of Verres. Hortensius was distinguished for prodigality and luxury, hence no doubt in part the poverty of the family; his son, father of this Hortalus, had gone over from the deciens sestertii: 1,000,000 sesterces = $50,000; see I. 8. 3 n.

ducere, etc.: Intr. 35 l.

suscipere: this word, like sustuli below, describes the formal act by which the father recognized his children and undertook to rear them. They were laid at his feet directly after birth, and if he lifted them up (sustulit), they were cared for; if he refused to do this, they were exposed in the mountains and forests, and allowed to die.

3. loco sententiae: i.e. when he was called upon for his opinion upon the question under discussion; an illustration of the custom described in 33. 2; cf. egredi relationem, 38. 3.

in Palatio: in the library upon the Palatine, where Augustus, in his old age, often held meetings of the senate (Suet. Oct. 29). As we see, it was adorned with images of distinguished men.

5. studia populi, popularity.

gentile, hereditary in our gens.

varietate temporum, under the changed conditions of the time.

accipere: by inheritance; parare: by his own exertions.

6. tot consulum, tot dictatorem: the Hortensian gens had contributed only one of each,—the orator Hortensius, consul B.C. 69, and Quintus Hortensius, dictator B.C. 286; on the mother's side, however, Hortalus was descended from the Marcian, and probably other distinguished gentes.

7. florente te, under your reign; i.e. conferred by you.

38. inclinatio, favorable disposition.

incitamentum: explained by Furneaux in relation to promptius, — "he had made up his mind, and seeing the sympathy of the senate, spoke at once before it had gone too far."

2. res publica, the public resources (common wealth).

3. egredi . . . relationem: see note on erat quippe, 33. 2, and relationi, I. 13. 4.

senatus, principum: objective genitives.

indulserint: with the accusative of the thing granted; it would take a dative of the person.

4. modestiam, delicacy of feeling. perfringere, break by force into. ambitione, desire of gaining favor.

5. compellatus, addressed; i.e. requested.

6. ex se: their hopes and fears should depend upon their own exertions.

7. haec atque talia: they were wise and timely words, expressing the true principle of charitable action.

8. ducena sestertia = $10,000 apiece, the census of the fourth decuria of judges, which Augustus added to the three chosen from the senators, equites, and tribuni aerarii.

9. retinens: a participle having the regimen of the verbal adjective in -ns, governing the objective genitive; commoner in Tacitus than in any other writer.

10. quamvis: Intr. 35 j.

89. mancipii: see 2. 4 n.

concepit, conceived the purpose; a very rare use of concepit with the infinitive.

3. praecipitia, perilous.

furatur cineres: in order to destroy the evidence of Agrippa's death.

Cosam: an old Etruscan city, occupying the principal promontory on the Etruscan coast, and the point most accessible from Planasia. A Latin colony was established here B.C. 273; so that it was, upon this coast, the northernmost seat of the Roman power at the time of the Punic Wars.

instance of this construction after similis or dissimilis. Cf. Intr. 35 i.

4. crebrescit, the rumor spreads.

5. relinquebat . . . praeveniebat: he gave no opportunity for comparing the reality with the report, but relied upon expectation or memory for gaining adherents. The combination of these imperfects with the historical infinitives adire and aspici is peculiar.

40. Ostiam: the port of Rome, at the mouth of the Tiber.

celebrabant: this is taken by Doederlein to be a zeugma,—the populace thronged about Clemens in Ostia, and he was secretly talked about in Rome,—on the ground that the impostor did not probably enter the city until he was carried in chains to the emperor. The meaning seems, however, to be that he entered Ostia publicly, but Rome secretly; and the expression in Palatium traxere, after his arrest, implies that he was already in the city.

cum . . . distrahere: Intr. 35 i. suum: because whatever had been Agrippa's he had inherited.

2. pudoris, metus: cf. 24. 6 n.

Sallustio Crispo: the one through whom the murder of Agrippa had been effected; see I. 6. 6.

3. conscientia, complicity.

pericula: participation in perils.

5. quomodo tu Caesar: persisting in his claim, or perhaps insolently reminding Tiberius that he was no real Caesar. Furneaux takes it as imputing fraud to Tiberius; but his succession was public and regular.

6. haud quaesitum: a wise and mild policy. The rumor, however, of accomplices within the palace, following the discovery of Libo's conspiracy, must have been one of the predisposing causes of Tiberius' jealous and suspicious disposition in his later years.

41. arcus: this arch stood over the Sacred Way, at the point where it met the Vicus Iugarius, at the corner of the Basilica Julia, just below the Temple of Saturn.

aedem Saturni: the temple, at the foot of the Clivus Capitolinus, used as the treasury (aerarium).
 There still stand eight columns belonging to it, or rather to a restoration of it in the fourth century.

ob recepta signa: see I. 60. 4 and II. 25. 2.

ductu Germanici, auspiciis Tiberii: cf. I. 18. 2 n; even a victory gained by a colleague or crown prince, as Germanicus was, was referred to the auspices of the emperor, as in the case of an ordinary legatus. Momms. Röm. St. II.

Fortis Fortunae: the goddess of Chance; her temple, on the other side of the Tiber, was the scene of a popular festival, June 24, frequented especially by slaves and unfortunate people; the river was thronged with gayly-adorned boats.

4. augebat, enhanced. visus, attention, interest.

eximia . . . species: he inherited the physique of his father Drusus (I. 33. 3 n.); see portrait at end of book. Omnes Germanico corporis animique virtutes, et quantas nemini cuiquam, contigisse satis constat: formam et fortitudinem egregiam, ingenium in utroque eloquentiae doctrinaeque genere praecellens, benevolentiam singularem, conciliandaeque hominum gratiae ac promerendi amoris mirum et efficax studium. Suet. quinque liberis: Nero (V. 3. 2), Drusus (VI. 23. 4), Gaius (better known as Caligula), Agrippina (mother of Nero), and Drusilla; for the birth of his youngest child Julia (Livilla) see 54. 1.

avunculum, uncle on the mother's side, — mother's brother. The mother of Germanicus was Antonia minor, and her half-brother was the Marcellus addressed by Vergil. The mother of Antonia and Marcellus was Octavia, sister of Augustus, who married first Gaius Marcellus, then Mark Antony. See table, Intr. p. xxix.

4. versa = eversa (Intr. 35 6). With the death of Gaius and his brother Lucius, and the murder of Agrippa Postumus, the family of Augustus became extinct in the male line, and the succession passed to his step-son Tiberius. See I. 3. 3.

5. si intellegere crederetur: the apodosis is implied in vim metuens.

immiti: a case of enallage, the adjective, agreeing with principe, being put for the adverb.

non ob, etc.: construed with finem . . . implevit.

crimina: Dio Cassius (LVII. 17. 7) says that he was acquitted (ἀπαλλάττειν), being so weak (fessus senio) that he could not stand, and was carried into the senate in a litter.

aequa: to be treated like a common man.

6. in provinciam: this decree was carried out the next year (56. 4), and the number of organized provinces thus brought to twenty-nine. Cappadocia was governed by procurators until the time of Vespasian.

centesimae vectigal: see I. 78.

2. Tiberius had declared the year before that it could not be dispensed with; now the increase of revenue accruing from the new province warranted its reduction to one-half of one per cent (ducentesimam partem).

7. Antiocho: his kingdom, Commagene, lying north of Syria, was, as appears from 56. 5, annexed to the empire. It became a part of the province of Syria; but after twenty years its independence was restored by Caligula.

Philopatore: he ruled over the eastern part of Cilicia, lying between Commagene on the east and the Roman province of Cilicia on the west.

part of the province of Syria, but had a separate financial administration, under a procurator. It became an independent province after its subjection by Titus, A.D. 70.

nec: connects haec, etc., with the clause posse . . . componi.

motum: used adjectively.

vergere: not used in relation to time by earlier writers. Tiberius was now fifty-nine, Drusus about thirty.

2. provinciae quae mari dividuntur: i.e. all the provinces of Asia, — Syria, Cilicia, Cyprus, Bithynia, Galatia, Pamphylia, and Asia. The republics of Rhodes and Lycia, the kingdom of Cappadocia for a short time, and that part of Pontus which lay north of Cappadocia, were still independent, but were shortly incorporated in the empire. Egypt was not included in his command, for the reason that Egypt was never reckoned as a province, but as a kingdom; see 59. 4 n.

maius imperium: so that the governors of the provinces were placed under his authority. Momm. Röm. St. I. 57.

sorte aut missu principis: i.e. imperial or senatorial governors (Intr. 17). The governors of the senatorial provinces were assigned by lot; those of the imperial provinces were appointed by the emperor.

3. Creticum Silanum: see 4. 4.
Cn. Pisonem: the family of the Pisos was among the oldest and most powerful of the noble families of Rome, and Gnaeus was at this time perhaps its leading member. He was a man of large experience, ambitious, and self-asserting (see I. 13. 3), and of a violent temper. Seneca (de Ira, I. 18. 3), relating a gross instance of cruelty and injustice perpetrated by him as governor of Spain, calls him vir a multis vitiis integer, sed pravus et cui placebat pro constantia rigor. That he was appointed by Tiberius with the commission to murder Germanicus, as Tacitus insinuates, there is absolutely no evidence; if the emperor wished to be rid of his adopted son, he needed not to resort to this clumsy method of attaining his end. That Piso committed the murder for his own end has as little evidence, and is in the highest degree improbable; if he had intended to do this, he would not have begun by insubordination and insult, but quii ignarum, insita ferocia a patre Pisone, qui civili bello resurgentes in Africa partes acerrimo ministerio adversus Caesarem iuvit, mox Brutum et Cassium secutus, concesso reditu petitione honorum abstinuit, donec ultro ambiretur delatum ab Augusto consulatum accipere. Sed praeter paternos spiritus uxoris quoque Plancinae nobilitate et opibus accendebatur: vix Tiberio concedere, liberos eius ut multum infra despectare. Nec dubium habebat se delectum qui Suriae imponeretur ad spes Germanici coercendas. Credidere quidam data et a Tiberio occulta mandata; et Plancinam haud dubie Augusta monuit aemulatione muliebri Agrippinam insectandi. Divisa namque et discors aula erat tacitis in Drusum aut Germanicum studiis. Tiberius ut proprium et sui sanguinis Drusum fovebat; Germanico alienatio patrum amorem apud ceteros auxerat, et quia claritudine materni generis anteibat, avum M. Antonium, avunculum Augustum ferens. Contra Druso proavus by courting the favor and confidence of his intended victim. That he rejoiced at his death seems, however, certain. Furneaux's suggestion seems reasonable, that the emperor, whose suspicious disposition was excited by the popularity of Germanicus,—and, it must be added, the scheming ambition of Agrippina,—and who at the same time was somewhat apprehensive of Piso, as a man adipisci principem locum non indignum, et si casus daretur, ausurum, placed them together of set purpose—that Piso “was to be some check on his young ‘imperator,’ who in turn was to check him by an ‘imperium maius’ on the spot.” What seemed a sagacious piece of policy resulted in a tragedy.

partes: i.e. the republican party. After the defeat of Pompey at Pharsalus, B.C. 48, the senatorial leaders gathered their forces in Africa, where they were defeated by Caesar at Thapsus, B.C. 46.

reditu: to Rome as a citizen.

abstinuit: as a sign of dissatisfaction.

ambiretur, was solicited.

consulatum: he was consul suffectus, B.C. 23.

4. Plancinae: probably daughter or grand-daughter of Lucius Munatius Plancus (censor B.C. 22); sister of the Plancus mentioned, I. 39. 4.

5. insectandi: appears to limit monuit. Nipperdey, however, declares this to be an impossible construction, and explains it as a genitive of purpose, like cognoscendae antiquitatis, 59. 1.

tacitis . . . studiis: cf. quandoque distrahant, I. 4. 5.

7. Druso: dative of reference — in the case of Drusus.

Pomponius Atticus: Cicero's well-known correspondent. His daughter Pomponia married Agrippa, and was mother of Vipsania, mother of Drusus; see I. 3. 1 n. and 12. 6 n.

Liviam: sister of Germanicus and better known as Livilla (IV. 3. 3 seq.).

44. Illyricum: see I. 5. 5 n. suesceret: neuter.

pararet, gain.

2. Suebi (Swabians): the great race of south Germany (the Hoch-Deutsch), divided into a number of independent nations. Most of these had united under the rule of Maroboduus, the seat of whose kingdom was in Bohemia. The name of the nation thus formed was Marcomani, 'men of the frontier'; ea Germaniae velut fons est. Germ. 42. They were the source of the modern Bavarians.

45. Semnones et Langobardi: see the Germania, 39 and 40. They occupied the country upon the Elbe. The Langobardi are those who invaded Italy in the sixth century and are known as Lombards.

2. clientium: no doubt the personal followers (comites) described in the Germania, 13, 14, and 15. They were the thegns and gesithcundmen of the Anglo-Saxons.

iuveni: Arminius was now thirty-five years old (88. 4).

3. incursibus: ablative of manner. sequi signa, etc.: cf. the description of the Chatti, Germ. 30.

4. adhuc, moreover.

proeliorum expertem: because Maroboduus had never fought with the Romans; he had, however, fought with other Germans.

Hercyniae: the great mountain ranges of Germany, especially those which surround Bohemia, the seat of the kingdom of Maroboduus.

proditorem patriae: he had made an honorable peace with Tiberius (26. 3 n.).

illius consiliis: but (I. 68. 1) it was by the advice of Inguiomerus, against the judgment of Arminius, that the Germans made their unsuccessful attack upon the Roman camp.

vacuas, unprepared, as in Agr. 37, paucitatem nostrorum vacui spernebant. The reading is not very satisfactory, and is changed by Dräger to vagas, which would describe their condition after leaving the main road, while traversing the Teutoburg Forest.

coniunx, etc.: I. 57. 5.

2. duodecim legionibus: this was A.D. 6. The size of this army, four times the size of that of Varus, shows the strength of the kingdom of Maroboduus. Peace was made before they came to blows.

ipsorum: the Marcomani.

3. aut: the ancient glory of the Cherusci contrasted with the newly established independence of the Langobardi.

contra: i.e. by Maroboduus.

5. percussus: sc. eius.

6. paci: Intr. 35 f; the dative is often used, instead of a genitive, to express the function which one is designed to fulfil.

47. duodecim urbes: an inscription of the year 30 (Orelli, 687) mentions fourteen: Ephesus and Cibyra, in addition to the twelve here given. For the destruction of Cibyra, see IV. 13. 1; that of Ephesus may have been related in the lost portion of the fifth book.

aerario aut fisco, the treasury of the state or the privy purse.

remisit: no doubt by a senatus consultum; cf. IV. 13. 1.

4. damno ac remedio, in amount of loss and need of relief.

Mosteni . . . Hyrcani: two towns, called respectively Hyrcania Mostenorum and Hyrcania Macedonum. For this use of aut cf. 46. 3 n.

5. consulari obtinente Asiam: the proconsul of Asia was regularly of consular rank; if, therefore, a commissioner of the same rank should be sent, questions of precedence and authority might arise.

48. in publicum, of a public character. It cannot be intended to contrast the liberality of the state with that of Tiberius as an individual, because, although the remission of tribute was made by the senate, the gift of ten million sesterces was made by the emperor himself. The next case was one of private necessity.

Aemiliae, Musae: probably a libertina, or freedwoman. As her property was to go to the fiscus, it would seem probable that she not only had no heirs, but that even her manumissor was uncertain; the kinship of Aemilius Lepidus was not certain (videbatur). He is probably the one who is called (III. 32. 2 and 72. 3) inops and pecuniae modicus.

Aemilio Lepido: dative after tradidit.

in parte: it was common to associate the emperor with the legiti-mate heirs; Augustus is said in this way to have inherited, in the last twenty years of his life, about $70,000,000 (Suet. Oct. 101). Cf. Tac. Agric. 43.

prioribus... tabulis, an earlier will. Wills might still be made orally, but were regularly written on waxen tablets, which were then tied together and sealed.

scriptum: i.e. as sole heir.

nobilitatem, etc.: showing that his reluctance in the case of Hortulus (38) was on the ground of unworthiness; see below.

2. nuncupantes: this word, originally meaning to name the heir orally in the presence of witnesses, appears to be used here for any form of appointment, as in Pliny (Paneg. 43), nec quia offendit alius nuncuparis, sed quia ipse meruisti.

3. Q. Vitellium: an uncle of the emperor, and brother of Publius Vitellius (I. 70. 1); cf. Suet. Vit. 2.

49. coeptas ab Augusto: it was the policy of Augustus to revive early forms of Roman worship, which had fallen into disuse, being obscured by the more fashionable rites of Greece and the Orient. This revival of the national deities had a certain value as a conservative force in society, and especially in quickening the sense of patriotism; but as a religion, it was a mere piece of antiquarianism, with no vitality.

Libero, etc.: this is the Eleusinian triad, introduced very early in the republic, as the first Greek rite formally established in Rome. The Roman deities identified with Demeter, Dionysus, and Core hardly appear at all in the primitive religion of Rome, and their worship is purely Greek. The temple in question was vowed by the dictator Aulus Postumius, at the battle of Lake Regillus, B.C. 496, and dedicated by Spurius Cassius, three years later.

Lucio et Marco Publiciis: they were brothers, and aediles, B.C. 240 or 238.

apud forum holitorium: the vegetable market was north of the Forum Boarium, or cattle market, between the Capitoline and the river, outside of the walls. Janus was one of the most ancient gods of Rome, originally a god of the sun, but who had come to be regarded as the god of beginnings. The victory of Gaius Duilius here mentioned, the first naval battle gained by the Romans, was in the first Punic War, B.C. 260.

2. Spei: the deification of abstract qualities, — Concordia, Pudicitia, Honor, etc., — was very characteristic of the Roman religion.

50. adolescebat: its beginnings have been described (I. 72-74); it afterwards became the curse of society in this reign. On this occasion the emperor set himself against the abuses of this law, and mitigated the punishment of adultery.

neptem: her mother was probably one of the two daughters of Octavia, by her first husband, Marcellus. The other daughter married Agrippa, and was mother of Haterius Agrippa, mentioned in the next chapter.

conexa, being related: her connection with the imperial family gave ground for bringing her offence under the charge of maiestas. This interpretation had been given to the law by Augustus, and is contained even in the English law of treason of Edward III. But Tiberius rejected the principle, by declaring that the charge of adultery should be tried by the Julian Law, just as in the case of other persons, while that of maiestas should be limited to language in disparagement of Augustus.

2. lege Iulia [de adulteriis et stupris]: passed by Augustus, B.C. 17; it established fine and banishment in place of the punishment by the husband, which had been allowed by the old law. See below.

distingui: that the two charges should be considered separately.

3. eius: of Tiberius.

secus: i.e. otherwise than was true and fitting.

illius: his mother.

5. graviolem poenam deprecatus: the punishment, by the Julian Law, was deportation to an island, and the confiscation of one-third of the fortune and half of the dowry, while the man lost half his property; this he would commute to banishment within Italy, with no confiscation.

propinquis: dative of agent; by a council of kinsmen, as in ancient times.

Italia atque Africa: ablative of separation with interdictum est.

51. subrogando: the prefix sub, as in consul suffectus, indicates an election to fill a vacancy.

2. propinquum Germanici: he was grandson of Agrippa, and, therefore, nephew of Agrippina, wife of Germanicus. See note on neptem, 50. 1; also I. 77. 3.

3 praepolleret, quod lex iubebat. Laetabatur Tiberius cum inter filios eius et leges senatus disceptaret. Victa est sine dubio lex, sed neque statim et paucis suffragiis, quo modo, etiam cum valerent, leges vincebantur.

2 Tacfarinate. Is natione Numida, in castris Romanis auxiliaria stipendia meritis, mox desertor, vagos primum et latrociniis suetos ad praedam et raptus congregare, dein more militiae per vexilla et turmas componere, postremo non inconditae turbae, sed Musulamiorum dux 3 haberi. Valida ea gens et solitudinibus Africae propinqua, nullo etiam tum urbium cultu, cepit arma Maurosque accolas in bellum traxit: dux et his, Mazippa.

lex: sc. Papia Poppaea; by this law Augustus attempted (A.D. 9) to check the growing tendency to an unmarried life; see III. 25. 1. For the preference of fathers as candidates, cf. XV. 19, Plin. Ep. VII. 16. 2.
3. laetabatur: the imperfect would seem to show that he was always glad to throw the responsibility on the senate. Nothing in the language implies a triumph over law "in the interest of autocracy," as Furneaux says: although the words sine dubio, of course, indicate that Tacitus so regarded it.

etiam cum valerent: i.e. during the republic.

52. Tacfarinate: called by Mommsen "an African Arminius." This insurrection, he tells us, was only one incident, "of unusual proportions," of a warfare between the civilized province and the wild tribes of the south, which "must have been permanent" (Provinces, II. p. 345).

2. Numida: Numidia corresponded in general to the eastern half (Constantine) of the modern Algiers. It lost its independence after the battle of Thapsus, B.C. 46, and was united with the province of Africa, B.C. 25 (Intr. 18. A. 1): after the reign of Tiberius it was placed under the military government of a legatus of the emperor, of praetorian rank, and was at last organized as a separate province, probably in the time of Septimius Severus.

auxiliaria . . . meritis, having served in the auxiliaries (I. 36. 4 n.).

per vexilla et turmas: turmae were divisions of cavalry; the vexillum was used for cavalry, and also for squads and detached bodies of infantry. As the Numidians were almost exclusively a nation of horsemen, it is likely that their infantry was composed of only a few scattered companies, not organized into cohorts and maniples (which would have used metal signa), but having each its own vexillum. The phrase means, therefore, in companies of foot and horse.

Musulamiorum: these were a people of western Numidia, near Mauretania — Mauros accolas.

3. dux et his, these also had a leader.

Divisusque exercitus, ut Tacfarinas lectos viros et 4 memoramus, bellorum experts habebatur. Eo pronior 9 Tiberius res gestas apud senatum celebravit; et decrevere patres triumphalia insignia, quod Camillo ob mo-destiam vitae impune fuit.

4. attineret, held, a favorite word with Tacitus.

disciplina: suesceret is used here as a transitive verb, and with the ablative, like adruescere; many editions change to disciplinae.

5. Cinithios: these lived further east, near the Lesser Syrtis.

pro consule Africae: this is the original and correct term, the pro-consul acting for the consul.

spectares: subjunctive of indefinite subject, in the second person singular.

eluderent: i.e. the Numidians, "if a larger force was brought against them." Furneaux. The chief point in his strategy was not to alarm the enemy.

6. leves cohortes duaeque alae: these were auxiliary troops; Roman troops were organized in maniples of infantry, and turmae of cavalry.

8. recipitorem urbis: the great Camillus, who recovered the city after its capture by the Gauls, B.C. 390. The Lucius Camillus who triumphed B.C. 338 was probably not his son, but grandson.

familias: Publius Furius Philus triumphed B.C. 223, and Lucius Furius Purpureo, B.C. 200; they were of the same gens, but not the same family as Camillus.

not cause him to be an object of envy and suspicion to the emperor.

53. annus . . . habuit: Tacitus is very fond of personification with expressions of time; cf. annus, I. 54. 1, nox, I. 28. 1, des, I. 49. 2, lux, I. 70. 7.

tertio: the regular form of the adverb is tertium; but both forms were in use in the time of Cicero (Aul. Gell. X. 1. 7). It was probably preferred here to avoid the jingle, Tiberius tertium Germanicum iterum.

Nicopolim, city of victory; built by Augustus in the neighborhood of the promontory of Actium, in order to celebrate his victory over Mark Antony, B.C. 31. Epirus, in which this city was situated, was a part of the province of Achaia, and was made a separate province perhaps in the reign of Vespasian.

2. sinus: the shores of the Ambracian Gulf.

manubias: Suetonius (Oct. 18) says, locum castrorum, quibus fuerat usus, exornatum navalibus spoliis, Neptuno ac Marti consecravit.

castra Antonii: this was on the promontory of Actium, opposite the promontory on which Nicopolis was situated.

3. avunculus Augustus, avus Antonius: see 41. 5 n.; it was a cheerful association with the former, a sorrowful one with the latter.

uno lictore: he was entitled to twelve lictors; this concession was made to the ancient glories of Athens. According to Suetonius (Calig. 3), libera ac foederata oppida sine lictoribus adibat.

4. praeferentes, displaying, mentioning with pride.

dignationis (not dignitatis): it implies, as a verbal noun, the regard which they bestowed, the action of the verb dignari.

54. Iuliam: also called Livilla.

2. Perinthum: on a promontory of the Propontis; Byzantium, on the site of Constantinople.

Propontidis angustias: the straits of Constantinople, beyond the Propontis, or Sea of Marmora; os Ponticum is the entrance to the Black Sea.

magistratuum: both Roman governors and native magistrates.

3. sacra Samothracum: the mysteries celebrated in the island of Samothrace by the Cabiri.

Ilio: a recent city, built on the supposed site of Troy, by Sulla. It was on the hill of Hissarlik, recently explored by Dr. Schliemann.

quae: its antecedent is in the same construction as Ilio.

nostri: a subjective use of this genitive, common in late writers. But it is objective in a certain sense — that which gave origin to us.

Colophona: one of the lesser cities of the famous Ionian league; Miletus was one of the most important of these.

Clarii Apollinis oraculo: this oracle was, according to tradition, founded by Manto, daughter of the seer Tiresias, and was afterwards presided over by her son Mopsus.

4. modo, only.

5. ut mos oraculis: the oracles being generally easy to interpret after the event.

55. destinata: referring to the supposed intent of Tiberius to procure the death of Germanicus.

oblique . . . perstringens: not by name; the reproaches against the city necessarily reflected upon Germanicus.

colluviam illam nationum: Demosthenes upbraided his countrymen for their lavishness in bestowing citizenship. In later days this privilege was openly sold.

adversus Sullam: Athens was occupied forcibly by Mithridates; oppugnabantur ab amicis, et animos extra moenia, corpora necessitati servientes intra muros habebant (Vell. Pat. II. 23). For their subservience to Antony, Augustus deprived them of the privilege of selling their citizenship.

2. vetera, their ancient misdemeanors, — their feebleness against Philip, their injustice towards Aristides and others.

Areo iudicio = Arei pagi iudicio, by a judgment of the Areopagus, the chief court of Athens.

falsi, forgery.

3. compendia maris: cf. compendiis viarum, I. 63. 6.

raperet: sc. Pisonem.

4. veteres centuriones, etc.: here he went beyond his powers, as the appointment of these officers belonged exclusively to the emperor. Momm. Röm. St. II. 798.

desidiam, etc.: see III. 13. 3.

5. feminis: dative after decora. decursibus: a military review which, by order of Augustus, took place three times a month (Veg. I. 27).

6. praeverti: the prefix prae expresses his desire to anticipate any further movements in this place.

56. ambigua: the twofold application of this word is expressed in the chiasmic order—hominum ingeniis, as being divided in sympathy between the Romans and the Parthians; situ terrarum, as their land stretched along the Roman provinces and reached to Media, maximis imperiis interiecti.

discordes: not inter se, but towards both empires.

odio, invidia: the Romans were enemies; the Parthians, rivals.

2. amoto Vonone: see 4. 4.

Polemonis, regis Pontici: this Polemo was made king of that part of Pontus which lay east of the Thermodon, by Antony and Octavius, B.C. 34, his kingdom also including Armenia Minor. It was annexed to the Roman empire by Nero, A.D. 63, and became a part of the province of Galatia, under the name Pontus Polemoniacus.

instituta . . . aemulatus: compare the demeanor of Vonones, 2. 5.

3. Artaxata: capital of Armenia, founded by King Artaxias, on the advice of Hannibal; the name of this founder was now bestowed upon the new king. The word is generally a neuter plural.

approbantibus nobilebus, etc.: as usual, in barbarous states, the nocircumfusa multitudine, insigne regium capiti eius imposuit. Ceteri venerantes regem Artaxiam consalutare, quod illi vocabulum indiderant ex nomine urbis.

bles gave their consent, the people their acclamations.

quod: a relative.

4. Cappadoces, etc.: see 42, with notes. The officers here named, Veranius and Servaeus, devoted friends of Germanicus, were commissioners to organize the new government; this being done, they returned to him.

5. ad ius praetoris: i.e. to the condition of a province. The imperial governor (legatus Caesaris pro praetore), exercised essentially praetorian powers. Commagene was annexed to Syria, its independence was restored by Caligula, and it was again annexed by Vespasian.

57. socialia, the affairs of the allies.

2. Cyrrus: a town upon the principal road from Antioch to Commagene.

decimae legionis: the name of this legion was Fretensis.

firmato = composito: each tried to conceal his feelings. The same idea is expressed by dissimulatio below.

3. intendere, exaggerate (Intr. 35 f.).

4. precibus contumacibus, requests which betrayed an insubordinate spirit.

dissentire manifestus: a very rare Grecism (cf. properus clarescere, IV. 52. 2; Intr. 35 s).

5. Nabataeorum: a people of Arabia, whose power at this period stretched from Damascus to the confines of Egypt, having Petra for their capital. They were conquered by Trajan, and their territory erected into the province Arabia.

clause is the object of daturum. gentium: i.e. Parthia and Armenia.

2. cultu sui, the honor to be paid to himself.

3. Pompeiopolim: the ancient Soli, a city of Cilicia, rebuilt by Pompey, after subduing the pirates of Cilicia, B.C. 67.

Pisonis: objective genitive.

tis: a causal genitive, common in Tacitus, rare in other writers (Intr. 35 n.).

2. provinciae: Egypt was not strictly a province (see 4 n, and Intr. 18. B. iv).

horreis: the public granaries, — an object of great importance in Egypt, as illustrated in the story of Joseph.

pretia frugum: Suetonius (Tib. 52) says that he went to Egypt propter immensam et repentinam famem.

P. Scipionis aemulatione: Livy (XXIX. 19) says of Scipio, cum pallio crepidisque inambulare in gymnasio. The Greek pallium was a square garment, the Roman toga was long and with partly rounded ends; both were worn in nearly the same way, folded over the shoulders and around the body. The apertis was a sandal — pedibus intectis, — while the Roman calceus was a shoe, covering the foot.

3. sponte, consensu; properly used with a possessive, in late writers with a genitive.

4. illustribus: i.e. those equites who had a senatorial fortune, one million sesterces.

seposuit Aegyptum: Egypt was never formally made into a province, but was governed by the emperor as a separate kingdom, always having common equites as its governors. It was, therefore, a serious offence in Germanicus to visit it without permission.

fame urgeret: Egypt was one of the chief sources of the corn supply for Italy, and must not be exposed to the chances of war and revolution.

quisquis, whoever, pretender or rebel; subject of urget.

claustra terrae ac maris: Alexandria and Pelusium, at the extreme west and east, which could be easily held adversum ingentes exercitus.

60. Canopo: spelt also Canopus; an ancient city upon the westernmost mouth of the Nile; its prosperity was ruined by the founding of Alexandria, near by.

3. proximum amnis os: object of visit: the Canopic mouth was called also Heracleotic.

antiquissimum: of all the Heracles of tradition.

in cognomentum eius ascitos: identified with the hero.

veterum Thebarum: it appears from Pliny (N. H. VIII. 185) that he visited Memphis also, where he received an omen of his approaching death from the Bull Apis; Germanici Caesaris manus aversatus est haud multo postea extincti. According to Ammianus Marcellinus (XXII. 14. 8), the bull refused food from his hand.

4. structis molibus: the immense structures, the ruins of which still stand, — temples, palaces, tombs, etc.; ablative of place.

litterae: written characters (hieroglyphics).

complexae, containing a statement of.

regem Rhamsen: Rameses II., the Great (Sesostris), of the 19th dynasty, in the 15th century, B.C. For a graphic delineation of this king and of Egyptian life at this period, see Eber's Uarda.

Lybia, etc.: they boasted overmuch, as the monuments show that the conquests of Rameses never extended beyond Syria.

Bithynum . . . Lycium ad mare: the Bithynian Sea was the Euxine; the Lycian, that part of the Mediterranean which lay between Cyprus and Rhodes.

5. legebantur: all these are read odores: spices and perfumes.

61. Memnonis saxea effigies: this was a colossal statue of King Amenophis III. of the 18th dynasty, sixty feet in height, cut from a single block of granite. It was believed by the Greeks to represent the hero Memnon, son of Eos, slain in the Trojan war; and the sound heard at sunrise was explained as his salutation to his mother, the Dawn. The name Memnon would seem to have been an easy confusion of sound with Amenophis; the sounds heard were probably caused by some expansion of the stones in the heat of the sun.

pyramides: these works of the 4th dynasty are in the neighborhood of Memphis.

lacus: the lake, or reservoir, of Moeris, somewhat further up the river, constructed by a king of the 12th dynasty, about 2200 B.C. This also has been recently discovered.

angustiae . . . altitudo: s. fluminis: this refers to the first cataract, where the river is narrow and so swift that it cannot be sounded.

spatiis: i.e. of line.

2. Elephantinen ac Syenen: the proper limits of Egypt towards Ethiopia.

rubrum ad mare: the Indian Ocean, comprehending also the Arabian and Persian Gulfs. The reference is to the expedition of Trajan, A.D. 116, when he launched upon the Persian Gulf, which he had now made the boundary of his empire. This passage, therefore, gives a clew to the date of composition of the Annals (Intr. 2).

62. ut insisteretur: depends upon illiciens Germanos, connected by que to ad discordias.

2. Gotones: the Goths, who were at this time upon the mouth of the Vistula (see Germ. 43). They afterwards migrated to the regions north of the Lower Danube and the Black Sea. It has been suggested that the tribe in question was not the German Gothones, but the Celtic Gothini (Germ. 43), who lived much nearer, in Silesia; and this suggestion is supported by the Celtic-sounding name of the prince Catualda.

3. regiam: Ptolemy (2. 11, § 29) mentions a place named MapóBouδov, probably near Budweis in Bohemia.

4. ius commercii: granted by a treaty between Maroboduus and the Romans.

63. Noricam: used here as an adjective. The province of Noricum comprised Eastern Bavaria and Upper Austria, bordering upon the dominions of Maroboduus.

ad se: i.e. in alliance.

2. aliud: the refuge with multis nationibus.

fide qua: Dräger remarks that this ellipsis does not occur earlier than the Annals; cf. 78. 1, eadem fide qua.

4. exstat oratio, etc.: with the fall of Maroboduus the power of the Marcomani collapsed; and Tacitus, in his Germania (42), says of them: iam et externos patiuntur, sed vis et potentia regibus ex auctoritate Romana. About 140 years later they had again become a formidable power, and the Marcomanic wars of Marcus Aurelius (A.D. 166-179) were the beginning of the great German invasions.

5. Ravennae: this old Etruscan town had been made by Augustus his principal naval station upon the Adriatic; from this it rapidly grew in importance, until it became, in the 5th century, the residence of the emperors. It was the residence assigned also to the son of Arminius (I. 58. 9).

si quando, etc.: i.e. if at any time the Suevi should become dangerous, Maroboduus would be sent to hold them in check.

7. Hermundurorum: they lived in Northern Bavaria (see Germ. 41), and were known in later times as Thuringians.

Vibilio: he was still king of the Hermunduri, A.D. 50 (XII. 29. 2).

Forum Iulium: the modern Frijus; a colony had been established there by Julius Caesar, and Augustus sent there the ships captured at Actium. It was now the chief naval station west of Italy (see IV. 5. 1).

comitati: a participle; referring to the personal followers (cf. mans clientium, 45. 2).

immixti: i.e. with the population.

Marum et Cusum: the March and probably the Waag. This region was outside the bounds of the Empire.

Quadorum: they inhabited Moravia, east of the Marcomani (see Germ. 42).

inferior form of triumph, granted for less considerable victories, or when the victory was gained under the auspices of another. It differed from the triumph, in that the victor did not ride in a chariot, but walked or rode on horseback; wore, not the  toga picta , but the  praetexta , and a wreath of myrtle instead of laurel.

2.  Martis Ultoris : erected by Augustus, B.C. 2, in commemoration of the vengeance inflicted by him upon the murderers of Julius Caesar. It was upon his forum, east of the Forum Romanum. Three columns of it are still standing; but the arches here spoken of have disappeared.

3.  Thraeciae :  i.e.  of the interior parts of Thrace; for the sea-coast was under the Roman rule, administered by the governor of Macedonia. The free Thracians here spoken of are the ancient nation of the Odryae, which occupied the valley of the Hebrus. Rhoemetalces had succeeded his brother, Cotys IV., B.C. 20. The whole of Thrace was made a Roman province by Claudius.

4.  hostibus : the Dacians, etc., on the north.

nomen Germanici plumbeis tabulis insculptum, semusti cineres ac tabo obliti aliaque malefica, quis creditur animas numinibus infernis sacrari. Simul missi a Pisone incusabantur ut valetudinis adversa rimantes. Ea Germanico haud minus ira quam per metum accepta. 70 Si limen obsideretur, si effundendus spiritus sub oculis inimicorum foret, quid deinde miserrimae coniugi, quid infantibus liberis eventurum? Lenta videri veneficia; festinare et urgere ut provinciam, ut legiones solus habeat. Sed non usque eo defectum Germanicum, 3 neque praemia caedis apud interfectorem mansura. Componit epistulas quis amicitiam ei renuntiabat; addunt plerique iussum provincia decedere. Nec Piso 4 moratus ultra navis solvit, moderabaturque cursui quo propius regrederetur, si mors Germanici Suriam aperuisset.

plumbeis tabulis: this inscription, cut on a leaden tablet, was found in a tomb upon the Latin Way: — Quomodo mortuos qui istic | sepultus est nec loqui | nec sermonare potest, seic | Rhodine apud M. Licinium | Faustum mortua sit nec | loqui nec sermonare possit | ita uti mortuos nec ad deos | nec ad homines acceptus est | seic Rhodine apud M. Licinium accepta sit et tantum valeat | quantum ille mortuos qui | istic sepultus est Dite Pater Rhodi | ne tibi commendo uti semper odio sit M. Licinio Fausto, etc. (C. I. L., I. 818; Orelli-Henzen, 6114). For analogous superstitions, cf. Verg. Buc. VIII., and the famous case of Robert of Artois, A.D. 1329.

missi a Pisone: compare the messengers sent by Domitian during the sickness of Agricola (Agr. 43).

70. 2. liberis: these were Galus (Caligula) and Julia (54. 1); the others had been left in Rome.

festinare et urgere: i.e. Piso; he could not wait for the slow working of poison.

3. defectum: i.e. in strength.

epistulas: cf. I. 30. 4 n. renuntiabat: Suetonius (Calig.

3) says, ne tunc quidem ultra progressus quam ut amicitiam ei more maiorum renuntiaret mandaretque domesticis ultionem, si quid sibi accideret.

iussum . . . decedere: it does not appear that Germanicus had the power to dismiss a governor appointed by the emperor; but the quarrel had reached such proportions that Piso seems to have thought it advisable to leave the province, only returning when he learned of the death of Germanicus (75. 2). His attempt then to resume his command is a proof that in his own opinion he had not been lawfully deprived of it.

4. propius: from a nearer point.

Quod si solus arbiter rerum, si iure et nomine regio fuisset, tanto promptius aemulatione potentiae: as if foreseeing her ambitious designs.

2. ingenti luctu: Suetonius says (Calig. 5), quo defunctus est die, lapidata sunt templa, subversae deum arae, — the temples and altars of the pitiless gods.

3. indoluere: Suetonius (Calig. 5) says, regulos quosdam barbam posuisse et uxorū capita rasisse, ad indicium maximi luctus: regum etiam regem et exercitatione venandi et convictu megistanum abstinuisse, quod apud Parthos iustitiae instar est.

78. sine imaginibus et pompa: the imagines, or wax busts of ancestors, were kept in the atrium of the house, and were, therefore, not with him; the procession also appears to have been omitted.

2. ob propinquitatem: hundreds of miles apart, but alike in the far east.

magni Alexandri: he died at Babylon, B.C. 323, aged thirty-two; Germanicus was thirty-three. In the case of Alexander, too, there was suspicion of poison.

3. mitem, etc.: a strong contrast with Alexander's ferocity and intemperance.

certis, legitimate.

praepeditus sit: with the infinitive, after the analogy of prohibeo.

 surely, if there had been any clear evidence of foul play, Tacitus would not have failed to mention it.

74. consultatum, etc.: the death of Germanicus and the departure of Piso having left the province without any head, the senators present, part officially, part unofficially, took upon themselves the responsibility of establishing a provisional government, no doubt as representing the Senate, the official organ of government at Rome. So Germanicus (I. 43. 2) says, in the event of his death, legissetis ducem.

 The action, however, was irregular and probably invalid.

Ad fluebant centuriones monebantque prompta illi legionum studia: repeteret provinciam non iure ablatam et vacuam. Igitur quid agendum consultant M. Piso filius properandum in urbem censebat: nihil adhuc inexpressibile admissum, neque suspensiones imbecillas aut inania famae pertimescenda. Discordiam erga Germanicum odio fortasse dignam, non poena; et ademptione provinciae satis factum inimicis. Quod si regrederetur, obsistente Sentio civile bellum incipi; nec duraturos in partibus centuriones militesque, apud quos recens imperatoris sui memoria et penitus infixus in Caesares amor praevaleret. Contra Domitius Celer, ex intima eius amicitia, disseruit: utendum eventu; Pisonem, non Sentium Suriae praepositum; huic fasces et ius praetoris, huic legiones datas. 4. si teneat: i.e. keeping on his present course.

5. an festinamus: the present colloquially with a future force; cf. quoniam consuevimus equos? Livy, I. 57. 7.

6. conscientia: i.e. the private understanding.

78. ferocibus: dative, neuter.

luxus: see 57. 5.

pulsum: apparently by Germanicus; cf. insum provincia decedere, 70. 3. Furneaux refers it to Sentius, but the word pulsus can hardly be applied to his action; moreover the words rebus novis appear to contain a suggestion of disloyalty on the part of Germanicus, designed to excite or confirm the suspicions of the emperor against him and his family, a suspicion which would be absurd in the case of Sentius.

3. in continentem: i.e. from the island of Cos.

vexillum, detachment (I. 20. 1 n).

Ille eludens respondit ad futurum, ubi praetor, qui de veneficiis quaereret, reo atque accusatoribus diem prodixisset.

Interim Domitius Laodiciam urbem Suriae appulsus, 3 cum hiberna sextae legionis peteret, quod eam maxime novis consiliis idoneam rebatur, a Pacuvio legato praevenitur. praelegentes: Piso and his company proceeded between the island of Rhodes and the mainland, while Domitius had gone lato mari.

infensi: the construction is irregular; praelegentes belongs to Domitius and his company, infensi to Agrippina as well.

2. eludens, in derision.

praetor qui de veneficiis quaereret: there was a special quaestio de veneficiis, established by Sulla among the quaestiones perpetuae, and presided over by one of the praetors selected by lot. Whether any given case should be brought before this tribunal or before the senate depended partly upon the accuser, partly upon the court itself (I. 72. 4 n). In this case, Piso's request to be tried before the regular tribunal was refused, and the trial was conducted before the senate. (Momm. Röm. St. II. 105.)

prodixisset: the technical term for the praetor's appointing a day for the trial, after the formal presentation of charges.

3. Laodiciam: a few miles south of Antioch, on the sea-coast.

sextae legionis: this was named Ferrata, — the "iron brigade."

Pacuvio: see Seneca, Ep. 12. 8. legato: sc. legionis (I. 44. 3 n).

seditionem: among the soldiers of Sentius. signifer: not aquilifer, the standard-bearer of the legion. Each maniple, as well as, probably, each cohort, had its signum (I. 18. 3 n.), and there were as many signiferi. It was only one out of this number that deserted.

2. aggerem: materials for a mound, preparatory to an assault (I. 65. 10).

3. cui: interrogative.

82. 2. ideo: begins the complaints.

hoc egisse, this was the meaning of; a common use of agere.

3. de Druso: cf. II. 41. 5.

displicere . . . ingenia: Suetonius (Claud. 1) says, nonnullos tradere ausos, suspectum eum [sc. Drusum] Augusto, revocatumque ex provincia, et quia cunctabatur, interceptum veneno. But it was a groundless rumor.

filiorum: Drusus was step-son of Augustus; Germanicus, adopted son of Tiberius.

magistratuum, ante senatus consultum sumpto iustitio 5 desererentur fora, clauderentur domus. Passim silentia et gemitus, nihil compositum in ostentationem; et quamquam neque insignibus lugentium abstinerent, altius 6 animis maerebant. Forte negotiatores, vivente adhuc Germanico Suria egressi, laetiora de valetudine eius 7 attulere. Statim credita, statim vulgata sunt; ut quisque obviis, quamvis leviter audita in alios atque illi in 8 plures cumulata gaudio transferunt. Cursant per urbem, moliuntur templorum fores; iuvat credulitatem nox et promptior inter tenebras adfirmatio. Nec obstitit falsis Tiberius, donec tempore ac spatio vanescerent; et pō-pulus quasi rursus ereptum acrius doluit.

88 Honores, ut quis amore in Germanicum aut ingenio 2 validus, rēpti decrctique: ut nomen eius Saliari carmine caneretur; sedes curules sacerdotum Augustalium locis superque eas querceae coronae statuerentur; ludos circenses eburna effigies praeiret, neve quis flamen aut augur in locum Germanici nisi gentis Iuliae crearetur;

4. iustitio: see I. 16. 2 n.

5. nihil compositum: no formal arrangements.

7. ut quisque obviis (sc. est negotiatoribus): equivalent to quicumque obviis est, subject of transfert understood.

8. moliuntur . . . fores: which had been closed for the night.

tempore ac spatio: a hendiadys, in the course of time.

88. 2. Saliari carmine: the Salii, special priests of Mars, were a very ancient collegium, membership in which was reserved for men of high rank. Their chant had come down from high antiquity, and was scarcely intelligible. Of those who received the honor of having their names inserted in this hymn, we know only of Germanicus, probably the younger Drusus (IV. 9. 2), Lucius Verus, and perhaps Caracalla (Marquardt, Röm. Staatsverf. III. 420).

sedes curules, etc.: a curule seat at the theatre was a special honor highly esteemed, which had been granted to Julius Caesar and to Marcellus after his death, and was now bestowed upon the whole college to which Germanicus had belonged (I. 54. 2). The oaken wreath was a reward of civil distinction; those here described were made of precious materials (θαλασσορ καὶ ἀδάχυσσος. Dio, XI.IV. 6. 3).

effigies: of Germanicus.

praeiret: in the sacred wagon (lensa), along with the images of the gods.

flamen: sc. Augustalis.

Ceterum recenti adhuc maestitia soror Germanici 84

3. Amano: north of Antioch, separating Syria from Cilicia.

rerum . . . obisse: depending upon inscriptione (Intr. 35, r).

sepulcrum, a cenotaph.

tribunal, a catafalque: a structure in the shape of a scaffold or bier, no doubt with an inscription.

Epidaphnae: a suburb of Antioch, about five miles from the city; it had its name from a grove and sanctuary of Apollo.

4. censeretur, was proposed; cf. decrevere, 32. 4.

clipeus: a medallion bust, such as was common for distinguished persons. Tiberius held, sensibly enough, that his place among orators should not be distinguished by a medallion superior to others; Suetonius says (Calig. 3), ingenium in utroque eloquentiae doctrinaeque genere praecellens.

scriptores, masters.

5. equester ordo: the turmae equitum, mentioned below; in the empire there were no knights except these equites equo publico (Momm. Röm. St. III. 484).

cuneum: a wedge-shaped division of seats at the theatre. The equites occupied fourteen concentric rows, which were divided by aisles into cunei; some of the cunei of the knights appear to have been assigned to iuniores, some to seniores. This honor was probably given to Germanicus as princeps iuventutis; cf. Ovid, Ex Pont. II. 5. 41: te iuvenum princeps, cui dat Germania nomen: (see also I. 3. 2 n.).

turmae: the eighteen centuriae equitum, a part of the centuriate organization for voting purposes, were, for purposes of parade, divided into squadrona, turmas, of thirty men each. Their principal display was the transvectio equitum, or annual procession of the equites, from the Porta Capena to the Temple of Castor, which took place upon July 15, with great splendor. The image of Germanicus was to lead the procession like a banner.

duos virilis sexus: one (Germanicus) died in childhood (IV.
 15. 1); the other (Tiberius) was put to death by order of Caligula; see VI. 46. 8; Suet. Calig. 23.

2. modicis penetibus, households of inferior rank.

3. tamquam, etc., as if the exaltation of the house of Drusus was a further humiliation to that of Germanicus.

85. 2. satis poenarum, etc.: i.e.
 by becoming professional prostitutes, they were no longer subject to the laws of adultery. The declaration was made apud aediles.

3. exactum: sc. est, account was demanded.

ultionem legis: the Julian law (50. 2) required separation, and then allowed an action to be brought by the husband within sixty days; as this time had not elapsed, Titidius was not deemed guilty of neglect.

4. Seriphon: one of the Cyclades.

5. sacris Aegyptiis et Iudai-cis: the worship of the Egyptian goddess Isis was extremely fashionable among the Roman women, especially those of the lower classes, and was often attended with im-dis factumque patrum consultum, ut quattuor milia libertini generis ea superstitione infecta, quis idonea aetas, in insulam Sardiniam veherentur, coercendis illic latrociniiis et, si ob gravitatem caeli interissent, vile damnum; ceteri cederent Italia, nisi certam ante diem profanos ritus exuissent. moral practices. The Jews also were numerous and influential at Rome. The scandalous incidents which led to the demolition of the temples of Isis, and to the banishment of the Jews, are related by Josephus (Ant. Jud. XVIII. 3, 4 and 5).

libertini generis: they had been brought to Rome as slaves.

ea superstitione: apparently the Jewish, for Suetonius says (Tib. 36), Iudaeorum inventum per speciem sacramenti in provincias gravioris caeli distribuit.

quis: dative of possession.

latrociniiis: Intr. 35 f. Sardinia was then, as in modern times, infested with banditti, whom they were to suppress. Its climate still continues unhealthy.

86. rettulit: brought the business before the senate.

virginem: sc. Vestalem. The word capere is used technically for the selection of a vestal. (Aul. Gell. I. 12. 13).

Vestalibus sacris praesederat: this does not mean as head or eldest of the collegium, maxima virgo; it is the technical expression for having charge of the sacred rites, and is thus applicable to all the vestals.

2. discidio, divorce.

domum: i.e. dignitatem domus. This was not an absolute bar, for the law only required that both parents should be living.

imminuerat: cf. auctus, 84. 3.

87. binos nummos: two sesterces = ten cents. This was the difference between the legal price and the market value at the time. The modius was about a peck.

2. delatum et antea: I. 72. 2. divinas, etc.: Suetonius says (Tib. 27) that when some one spoke of his occupations as sacras, he directed him to say laboriosas, and that the use of the word dominus to him he denounced as continuae causae. This word properly expresses the relation of master and slave, and was inconsistent with the semi-republican constitution of the early empire, but afterwards became common among other slavish practices. Tiberius used to say that he was imperator to his soldiers, dominus to his slaves, and princeps to others. δεσπότης μὲν τῶν δούλων, αὐτοκράτωρ δὲ τῶν στρατιωτῶν, τῶν palam et armatum: contrasted chiastically with fraude and occultis.

88. principis, a chief; the principes of the Germans were elected in the public assembly, and, no doubt, for life (Germe. 12).

2. venenum . . . vetuerant: it was the consuls Gaius Fabricius and Quintus Æmilius, to whom the physician of Pyrrhus made the offer.

1. Corcyram: Corfu, the most important of the Ionian islands.

Calabriae: this name, given now to the southwestern promontory of Italy, was applied by the ancients to the southeastern portion opposite Greece: it has been transferred from the keel to the toe of the boot.

2. plerique, a good many.

ut quique = quicumque.

in principem: i.e. Tiberius.

celerrimum fidissimumque, quickest and safest. Brundisium (Brindisi) was the regular port for transit between Italy and Greece.

3. maris: partitive genitive.

turba: ablative.

4. pro tempore, suitable to the occasion.

5. discerneres: subjunctive of indefinite subject, in second person singular, — one could distinguish.

Agrippinae longo maerore fessum obvii et recentes in dolore anteibant.

Miserat duas praetorias cohortes Caesar, addito ut 2 magistratus Calabriae Apulique et Campani suprema erga memoriam filii sui munera fungerentur. Igitur 2 tribunorum centurionumque umeris cineres portabantur; praecedebant incomperta signa, versi fascces; atque ubi colonias transgrederentur, atrata plebes, trabeati equites pro opibus loci vestem odores aliaque funerum sollemnia cremabant. Etiam quorum diversa oppida, tamen obvii 3 et victimas atque aras dis Manibus statuentes lacrimis et conclamationibus dolorem testabantur. Drusus Tar- 4 racinam progressus est cum Claudio fratre liberisque Germanici, qui in urbe fuerant. Consules M. Valerius 5 et M. Aurelius (iam enim magistratum occeperant) et senatus ac magna pars populi viam complevere, disiecti et ut cuique libitum flentes; aberat quippe adulatio, obvii, those who had gone to meet her.

in dolore: qualifies recentes.

2. Calabriae, etc.: as she landed at Brundisium, her route lay through Calabria, Apulia, and Campania.

munera fungerentur: see App.

I.

2. versi fascces: cf. Verg. Aen. XI. 93; tum maesta phalanx Teucrique sequuntur | Tyrrhenique omnes et versis Arcades armis. Cf. I. 24. 4.

colonias: no doubt the municipia also (see I. 79. 1 n.). The important towns through which they passed — Tarentum, Venusia, Beneventum, Capua, Sinuessa — were as a fact colonies. The municipal aristocracy belonged to the equestrian order; hence plebs and equites.

transgrederentur: subjunctive of repeated action.

trabeati: the trabea was a toga, striped white and purple, worn by the equites on public occasions.

vestem: for an offering; so at Caesar's funeral: sibicines et scaenici artifices vestem quam ex triumphorum instrumento ad praesentem usum induerant, detractam sibi atque discussam iniecere flammam, et veteranorum militum legionarii arma sua, etc. (Suet. Iul. 84).

3. diversa, off the road. Cf. diversas terras, I. 17. 5.

4. Tarracinam: the old Volscian town of Anxur, fifty-eight miles from Rome, made a maritime colony, B.C. 329. Being at the point where the Appian Way reached the sea, it was a convenient place of meeting; cf. Hor. Sat. I. 5. 26.

liberis Germanici: these were Nero, Drusus, Agrippina, and Drusilla; Gaius (Caligula) and Julia were with their mother. (II. 70. 2 n.)

5. ut cuique libitum: i.e. with laetam . . . mortem, joy at the death (Intr. 35 q); subject of dissimulari.

8. falsi: predicate—known to be false.

2. Antoniam: this was Antonia minor, the younger daughter of Mark Antony and Octavia (Intr. 26 c): the elder married L. Domitius Ahenobarbus, and was grandmother of the emperor Nero. Plutarch (Ant. 87) pronounces the younger sister σωφροσύνη καὶ πολλὰ περιβόητος.

diurna actorum scriptura: this was an official bulletin of events of public interest first established by Julius Caesar; scriptura is ablative.
 non toleravit, could not endure,

3. Augusta: see App. I.

par maeror: the verb is not esset understood, but it is to be taken with viderentur.

4. tumulo Augusti: the mausoleum of Augustus, in the northern part of the Campus Martius, still partly preserved.

faces: these were regularly carried at funerals.

2. miles . . . tribus: all of these were present officially and in their organizations, but the magistrates without their insignia, etc. The tribes here mentioned were probably not the organization described in I. 8. 3 n., but the entire people (populus), organized in voting tribes.

reliquum clamitabant, promptius apertiusque quam ut meminisse imperitantium crederes. Nihil tamen Tiberium magis penetravit quam studia hominum accensa in Agrippinam, cum decus patriae, solum Augusti sanguinem, unicum antiquitatis specimen appellarent, versique ad caelum ac deos integram illi subolem ac superstitem iniquorum precarentur. Fuere qui publici funeris pompam requirerent compararentque quae in Drusum patrem Germanici honora et magnifica Augustus fecisset: ipsum quippe asperrimo hiemis Ticinum usque progressum neque abscedentem a corpore simul urbem intravisse; circumfusas lecto Claudiorum Iuliorumque imagines; defletum in foro, laudatum pro rostris, cuncta a maioribus reperta aut quae posteri invenerint cumulata: at Germanico ne solitos quidem et cuicumque nobili debitos honores contigisse. Sane corpus ob longinquitatem itinerum externis terris quoquo modo crematum; sed tanto plura decora mox tribui par fuisse, quanto prima fors negavisset. Non fratrem, nisi unius meminisse imperitantium: it was in truth an affront to the rulers, and Tiberius might have been pardoned for taking offence.

3. studia . . . Agrippinam: the suspicion of Agrippina's loyalty, which led to such tragic results, may have begun now; but even before the emperor appears to have felt some uneasiness (see I. 69. 4).

solum Augusti sanguinem: she was the only descendant of Augustus living, except her dissolute sister Julia (see 24. 2).

integram . . . precarentur: the partial fulfilment of this prayer, in the survival of Caligula and the younger Agrippina, brought no good to the people.

5. requirerent, missed.

2. ipsum, etc.: cf. Suet. Tib. 7.

asperrimo hiemis: Intr. 35 d. Ticinum: the modern Pavia.

circumfusas . . . imagines: referring to the great number of these. Other families (as the Livii) must also have been represented. Drusus, having never been adopted into the Julian gens, was not properly entitled to its imagines, but the rule was probably relaxed in his favor. He died B.C. 9 from a fall of his horse in the heart of Germany.

laudatum pro rostris: the funeral oration, by some near relative, was an essential part of the ceremony.

cuncta: i.e. ceremonies of honor.

4. sane: that is, this could not have been avoided. These first ceremonies (prima) chance had made informal.

- 6 diei via, non patrum saltem porta tenus obvium. Ubi illa veterum instituta, praepositam toro effigiem, meditata ad memoriam virtutis carmina et laudationes, et lacrimas vel doloris imitamenta?
- 6 Gnarum id Tiberio fuit; utque premeret vulgi sermones, monuit edicto multos illustrium Romanorum ob rem publicam obisse, neminem tam flagranti desiderio celebratum. Idque et sibi et cunctis egregium, si modus adiceretur. Non enim eadem decora principibus viris et imperatori populo, quae modicis domibus aut civitatibus. Convenisse recenti dolori luctum et ex maerore solacia; sed referendum iam animum ad firmitudinem, ut quondam divus Iulius amissa unica filia, ut divus Augustus creptis nepotibus abstruserint tristitiam. Nil opus vetustioribus exemplis, quotiens populus Romanus clades exercituum, interitum ducum, funditus amissas nobiles familias constanter tulerit. Principes mortales, rem publicam aeternam esse. Proin repeterent sollemnia, et quia ludorum Megalesium spectaculum suberat, etiam voluptates resumerent.

5. fratrem: Drusus; but he appears to have come all the way from Illyricum, where he had been in command (see II. 1 n.); moreover, Tarracina is fifty-eight miles from Rome, more than a day's journey.
saltem porta tenus, if it were only as far as to the gate.

6. praepositam: see App. I. vel . . . imitamenta: even if they were pretences.

6. premeret, repress.
egregium, honorable.

2. decora: from decorus.
principibus . . . populo, the men who are at the head of the state, and the nation that rules the world.

recenti: cf. II. 77. 3 n.

3. unica filia: Caesar's daughter

Julia, wife of Pompey, died B.C. 54, while her father was on his expedition to Britain. Augustus lost two grandsons, Gaius and Lucius (I. 3. 3); and Suetonius says of him (Oct. 65), aliquanto patientius mortem quam dedecora suorum tulit.

4. funditus . . . familias: e.g. the destruction of the Fabii in the war against Veii, B.C. 477.

5. sollemnia = solita munia.
Megalesium: the festival of the Great Mother was held April 4 to 10, and celebrated, with a remarkable and vivid symbolism, the death of nature and its re-animation at this season.

suberat: indicative, as being the reason assigned by Tacitus.

Tum exuto iustitio reditum ad munia, et Drusus Illy- 7 ulla in corpore signa sumpti exitii reperta. At Piso 8 praemisso in urbem filio datisque mandatis, per quae principem molliret, ad Drusum pergit, quem haud fratris interitu trucem quam remoto aemulo aequiorem sibi sperabat. Tiberius quo integrum iudicium ostentaret, exceptum comiter iuvenem sueta erga filios familiarum nobiles liberalitate auget. Drusus Pisoni, si vera forent 3 quae iacerentur, praecipuum in dolore suum locum respondit: sed malle falsa et inania nec cuiquam mortem Germanici exitiosam esse. Haec palam et vitato omni 4 secreto; neque dubitabantur praescripta ei a Tiberio, cum incallidus alioqui et facilis iuventa senilibus tum artibus uteretur.

7. iustitio: see I. 16. 2 n.

Illyricos ad exercitus: see II. 44. 1; he had returned to meet the body of his cousin (2. 4), and returned again for the trial (11. 1).

arroganti: by his proud and defiant bearing, as if he had no need to clear himself.

subverteret: i.e. in the hope that his crime would be forgotten in the long interval. It is explained by the sentence that follows.

2. ut dixi: see II. 74. 2.

nodo crinium: by means of a hollow bodkin or hair-pin.

nec . . . reperta: as there were no indications of suicide, it was inferred that she had been put out of the way by Piso. As in the case of Germanicus, there appears no real ground for suspicion.

8. haud = non tam; cf. Intr. 35 m; but the affection of Drusus for Germanicus was well known.

2. liberalitate: a present, such as was usual; cf. II. 37. 2; the service, in cases like this, was gratuitous, but was rewarded with gifts.

3. si . . . iacerentur: belongs to the indirect discourse.

falsa et inania: sc. ea esse: Intr. 35 c.

9. Anconam: a city of Greek origin, with a very fine harbor, on the coast of Picenum; it was made a colony by Augustus.

Flaminiam viam: the great highway which led northeast from Rome across the Apennines to Ariminum, laid out by Gaius Flaminius just before the Second Punic War.

legionem: the IX. (IV. 23. 2); it belonged to the Pannonian army (I. 23. 6), and was transferred temporarily for the war with Tacfarinas (II. 52. 1).

ea res: i.e. ut . . . ostentavisset. He was accused of trying to secure their favor, as in Syria (see II. 55. 4).

2. vitandae suspicionis: Intr. 35 n.

tumulo Caesarum: the mausoleum of Augustus; his landing here was an indignity to the memory of Germanicus.

3. celebritate: conspicuous situation.

nihil occultum: Intr. 35 g.

10. Fulcinius Trio: II. 28. 3. postulavit (i.e. for trial), accused; a technical term.

2. tendebant: it would damage their cause to have it conducted by a man like Trio, of whom it has been said (II. 28. 4), celebre inter accusatores Trionis ingenium erat avidumque malae famae.

 priore aestate gestas ut ovans iniret, prolato honore urbem intravit. Post quae reo L. Arruntium, P. Viexciperet, take into his own hands. This he could do by virtue of his special judicial authority, coordinate with that of the senate (I. 72. 4 n.). To this senators were especially subject, and in the reigns of Gaius, Claudius, and Nero the imperial court was converted into a regular engine of tyranny. Tiberius, on the other hand, characteristically allowed the senate to make itself responsible for "orgies of judicial murder" (Momm. Röm. St. II. 898).

4. studia: the emperor's court would be less influenced by the popularity of Germanicus; moreover, the emperor himself cared little for public opinion.

in deterius credita, that which looked worse than it was.

iudice ab uno: see note on initio ab Senae, IV. 5. 4.

6. paucis . . . adhibitis: the prince joined others with himself, but was not bound by their judgment.

hinc: i.e. on the part of the defendant.

integram, etc.: it rested with the emperor, as it did with the senate (IV. 21. 3), to decline to undertake the case. (Cf. also 12. 10.)

11. ob receptum Maroboduum: II. 63. 1.

priore aestate: the military successes belonged two years before, and the intervening year had been passed in securing what had been won. It may be that priore here means a former (see 20. 1 n.).

ovans: see II. 64. 1.

prolato honore: it was no occasion for festivity and display; moreover, by entering the city he would lose his imperium, and with it his right to a triumph. This entrance, of course, preceded the events narrated in 2, etc. He appears to have hastened from his province and foregone the ovation, in order to do honor to Germanicus.

2. L. Arruntium, etc.: for Arruntius and Gallus see I. 12. 2 and 13. 1. Pompeius was consul A.D. 14 (I. 7. 2). Publius Vinicius, consul A.D. 2, was distinguished for eloquence and literary tastes: summus amator Ovi-

M'. Lepidus, etc.: for Lepidus see I. 13. 2; Lucius Piso was brother of the accused (II. 34. 1, IV. 20. 4); of Regulus nothing is known.

Atque ipsa, donec mediae Pisoni spes, sociam se cuiuscumque fortunae et, si ita ferret, comitem exitii promittebat. Ut secretis Augustae precibus veniam obtinuit, paulatim segregari a marito, dividere defensionem coepit. Quod reus postquam sibi exitiabile intellegit, adhuc experiretur dubitans, hortantibus filiis durat mentem senatumque rursus ingreditur; redintegratamque accusationem, infensas patrum voces, adversa et saeva cuncta perpressus, nullo magis exterritus est quam quod Tiberium sine miseratione, sine ira, obstinatum clausumque vidit, ne quo adfectu perrumperetur. scripsissent: there is here a gap, as Nipperdey thinks, of considerable length, containing some change in the conduct of the trial, a comperendinatio (adjournment), and production of new evidence. Another gap (the other side of the same torn leaf) is found 16. 3.

6. in Gemonias: the stairs which led from the Arx, or northern summit of the Capitoline, to the prison at its foot (cf. V. 9. 3).

divellebant ni, etc.: a condensed form of condition common in Tacitus.

repositae: i.e. in their place of honor.

2. mediae: i.e. not hopeless.

4. quod: his wife's demeanor.

experiretur: sc. ius: doubting whether to continue his defence.

nullo = nulla re: earlier writers use this form substantively only as masculine.

ne . . . perrumperetur: whether by feeling or influence from without.

8. referente, presiding: to bring business before the senate (I. 13. 4 n.) is the function of the presiding magistrate. Under the republic, the magistrates, during their terms of office, were not members of the senate; under the empire, when the emperor presided, the consul sat in the senate and voted. eo munere refers to the duty of voting; the technical expression for voting in the senate is censere.

cus was forbidden to the Manlian gens.

dignitate: sc. senatoria. He had taken part, although against his judgment, in his father's rebellion.

relegaretur: a mild form of banishment, consisting in exclusion from certain specified territories (as Italy), but not carrying with it any further penalty. It was, says Mommsen (Röm. St. III. 141), "not really a punishment, but an administrative regulation."

By Julia he had, besides Agrippina, whose fate is still to be narrated, Gaius and Lucius, who were believed to have been poisoned (I. 3. 3), Agrippa Postumus (I. 6), and Julia, whose death appears to have been natural (IV. 71. 6), although in exile.

20. priore aestate: really three years before (see II. 52). Probably the meaning is a former summer (cf. II. 1).

excindere, trahere: historical infinitive, joined inelegantly with populationibus.

Pagyda: this river is unknown.

3. inconditis aut desertoribus: see II. 52. 2.

vulnera, os: objects of intendit; his wounds were in front.

fusti necat: the punishment for desertion and cowardice. As in the stoning of the Jews, each soldier took a stone or club, and beat the offender until he was dead.

2. vexillum veteranorum: see L. 17. 3 n.

3. hasta: sc. pura; a headless spear, a gift of honor to soldiers.

4. civicam coronam: of oak-leaves; the special reward for saving the life of a citizen.

haud facile . . . signa: i.e. he was really impartial.

4. M. Servilium: see II. 48. 1. velut: in this word lies the imputation of hypocrisy, — he instigated to the charge which he had just refused to entertain. The grounds of the charge of maiestas appear to have been partly quaesitum . . . Caesaris (2), partly her betrothal to Lucius Caesar (23. 1).

5. militari custodia: probably of the praetorian cohorts. Their transfer from the care of his own body-guard to that of the consuls was a guarantee of impartiality.

6. consulem designatum: the consul-elect was called upon for his sententia before the consulares.

officio: limits cessurum [fuisse]: his withdrawal of Drusus was regarded as an indication that he wished the defendant condemned, but Drusus relieved of the obloquy, — very puerile reasoning.

23. ludorum: probably the Ludi Romani, which were celebrated Sept. 4–19. The occurrence of this festival interrupted the trial.

theatrum: sc. Pompeii: situated on the Campus Martius, west of the Capitoline. It was the largest theatre in Rome, and the earliest constructed of stone. Some remains of it still exist.

cuius . . . imagines: cf. 22. 1.

effusi: the audience.

senectae atque orbitati: Suetonius (Tib. 49) gives this case as one of the earliest proofs of Tiberius' degeneracy: procedente mox tempore etiam ad rapinas convertit animum. Dio also (LVII. 19) places this change for the worse after the death of Germanicus. Tacitus, however, constantly testifies that Tiberius at this period was firmus adversum pecuniam (18. 2).

See also below.

2. itumque in sententiam, it was voted; the vote was taken by going to one side or the other (pedibus ire). This Rubellius Blandus was father of the more distinguished Rubellius Plautus.

3. ne bona publicarentur: this sufficiently disproves the charge of Suetonius, mentioned above.

4. tum demum, etc.: this suppression of a part of the evidence against her shows that Tiberius did not seek her condemnation.

24. adversa: construed with solacio adfecit, which is used, like solari, with the accusative of that for which consolation is offered.

egrediebatur, disregarded (Intr. 35 b).

4. memorabo: Tacitus appears to have had the plan of writing a history of Augustus, which would have served as an introduction to the Annals.

5. ut . . . prohiberetur: such prohibition was a severe penalty, as the right to visit the emperor and claim his friendship appears to have been open to all to whom it had not been forbidden. Momm. Röm. St. II. 781. Cf. II. 70. 3.

imperitante: i.e. in his reign.

6. non senatus consulto, etc.: he had been banished solely by the will of the emperor.

7. quae . . . voluisset: i.e. the renunciation of friendship (5).

25. Papia Poppaea: sc. lege: the law passed in the reign of Augustus, A.D. 9, for the regulation of marriage, and its encouragement by offering privileges to those with families, and imposing penalties or disabilities upon the unmarried (28. 4).

senior Augustus post Iulias rogationes incitandis caelibum poenis et augendo aerario sanxerat. Nec ideo coniugia et educationes liberum frequentabantur, praevalida orbitate; ceterum multitudo periclitantium gliscebatur, cum omnis domus delatorum interpretationibus subverteretur, utque antehac flagitiis, ita tunc legibus laborabatur. Ea res admonet ut de principiis iuris, et quibus modis ad hanc multitudinem infinitam ac varietatem legum perventum sit, altius disseram.

Vetustissimi mortalium, nulla adhuc mala libidine, sine probro scelere, eoque sine poena aut coercitionibus agebant. It made more stringent and comprehensive the provisions of the early part of his reign (post Iulias rogationes), B.C. 28 and 18. The consideration of its importance in the history of legislation suggests the digression which follows.

augendo aerario: by the fines and forfeitures which it prescribed.

2. praevalida, prevailing in men's tastes and preferences. Furneaux suggests that it refers to the social power that childlessness conferred (see 48. 4, praepotentem senectam).

interpretationibus: the strained constructions of these laws by which the delators secured convictions and forfeitures.

laborabatur, the community suffered.

26. 2. honesta, virtue, in a concrete sense; a frequent use of the neuter plural of adjectives.

suo ingenio, from its own nature = on its own account.

nihil: secondary object after vetabantur.

3. postquam exui: Intr. 35 l. dominationes: the rule of kings; this was permanent (aeternum mansere) with the nations of the East. The Greeks and Romans (quidam) chose a republican form of government, — a government of law instead of irresponsible will (leges maluerunt).

4. Cretensium: sc. leges.

Atheniensibus: here is an anacoluthon, arising from a change in construction; supply in thought some such expression as eas quas.

5. ut libitum: the institutions of Romulus — senate, comitia, etc. — were those of self-government; but tradition represented him as having created them by his sole authority.

quaedam, some enactments, going to substitute the rule of law for that of the individual.

6. obtemperarent: the subjunctive expresses the intent of Servius, the supposed founder of the republican constitution.

27. patrum, the senate. The popular rights gained in the early republic — such as the Valerian law of appeal (provocatio) and the auxilium of the tribunes — were for the protection of all, patricians as well as plebeians, against the arbitrary power of the government.

tuendae libertatis: Intr. 35 n. creati decemviri: B.C. 451, for the purpose of codifying and amending the laws. On this occasion an embassy was sent to Greece to examine the laws, and a Greek named Hermodorus accompanied the embassy back to Rome, in order to assist in the codification. This is referred to by the phrase accitis [his] quae usquam egregia [erant].

finis aequi iuris, the last piece of impartial legislation.

2. secutae leges: the sketch here is very cursory, and the reference indefinite. A period of three hundred years is passed over with this brief mention.

dissensione ordinum: this began long before the time of the Decemvirs, and the abuses here spoken of were already rife. Among the distinguished men banished were Coriolanus, Camillus, and Metellus Numidicus.

apiscendi: this construction (Intr. 35 n) is rare with the gerund.

per vim latae sunt: the use of violence in the elections and legislative assemblies began about the time of the Gracchi (B.C. 133 and 123). The legislation of Saturninus was tus Drusus : corrupti spe aut illusi per intercessionem socii. Ac ne bello quidem Italico, mox civili, omissum 4 quin multa et diversa sciscerentur, donec L. B.C. 100. Drusus, B.C. 91, grandfather of the empress Livia, urged reforms in the interest of the senatorial order itself.

3. corrupti, etc.: a principal item of the proposed reforms of Marcus Livius Drusus (B.C. 91) was the admission of the Italian allies (socii) to the citizenship. Their disappointment in this was the cause of the Social or Italian War, which followed the next year; and immediately after (mox) came the civil war of Marius and Sulla.

per intercessionem: i.e. of the tribunes. Each one of the ten tribunes was invested with the power of blocking the actions of the others; as a result, the hopes held out by one party were baffled by the obstructions placed in the way by the other.

4. prioribus (neuter), former measures. Sulla got the upper hand B.C. 82, and held unlimited power for about three years.

plura: the legislation of Sulla was very broad and radical, in the interest of the senate. Many of his reforms were permanent; a part were soon repealed (see below).

eius rei: i.e. from the violent changes of party and abrupt changes in policy.

turbidis Lepidi rogationibus: ablative absolute. Marcus Lepidus, father of the triumvir, was consul B.C. 78, and attempted to overthrow the legislation of Sulla.

tribunis reddita licentia: Sulla took away from the tribunes a great part of their power, especially in regard to making laws; but it was restored to them in the first consulship of Pompey, B.C. 70.

5. in commune, with a general jurisdiction; i.e. as a permanent institution.

in singulos homines latae quaestiones: not privilegia, or laws directed against individuals (like modern bills of attainder), but, rather, special courts organized to try individual offenders, as in the case of Milo, B.C. 52.

corruptissima, etc.: the greatest number of laws when society was most corrupt.

23. tertium consul: in B.C. 52, after several months of anarchy, Pompey was made sole consul (absens et solus, quod nulli alii umquam contigit, Liv. Epit. CVII.), and proceeded to re-establish order by the severe use of his extraordinary powers. For the last five months of the year he took his father-in-law, Metellus Scipio, as colleague.

 giis parentum cessaretur, velut parens omnium populus gravior, etc.: his remedies were more dangerous than the disorders that they sought to abolish.

subversor: his consulship was in violation of the law which required an interval of ten years between two successive occupations of the same magistracy (he had been consul B.C. 55). Moreover, after procuring the passage of a law forbidding the candidacy of any person absent from the city, he inserted a clause in the law, making an exception in the case of Caesar; the clause was, of course, legally invalid. He also used his personal influence to secure the acquittal of Metellus Scipio on a charge of bribery.

quae armis tuebatur: from the year of his second consulship (B.C. 55) he held the proconsulship of Spain, which he governed by legati, remaining himself in the neighborhood of Rome. During his third consulship, therefore (B.C. 52), he was at once consul and proconsul, and thus armed with extraordinary military power.

armis amisit: by the civil war with Caesar.

2. per viginti annos: in round numbers; the civil war began B.C. 49, and was finally ended by the victory of Augustus at Actium, B.C. 31. The reign of force did not, however, cease until the formal establishment of the empire, B.C. 27. exitio: especially in the proscriptions in the Second Triumvirate (of Antony, Lepidus, and Caesar Octavianus).

3. sexto consulatu: B.C. 28 (see note on I. i. 3 and 2. 1).

quae . . . iusserat: the violent and illegal measures of the triumvirate.

iura, the rule of law.

pace et principe: object of uteremur: the emperor was the guaranty of peace,—l'empire c'est la paix.

4. acriora . . . vincla, more severe restraints.

custodes: sc. legum: referring to the informers, through whom the machinery of the laws was set in motion (see Intr. 13). The law excluded the unmarried from inheritance; the childless received only half of the property; while a large share fell to the informer. The rest went to the state (populus vacantia teneret).

vacantia: having no legal heir.

5. penetrabant: i.e. the informers; they began to assail all citizens, wherever they were.

excisi status: they were ruined.
6. quinque consularium, etc.: these formed a commission, who were to mitigate the severity of the law.

nexus: Intr. 35 g.

29. Neronem: the eldest child of Germanicus, now about thirteen years old. For his fate see V. 1-3.

vigintiviratus: the name given collectively to a number of inferior magistracies, including the triumviri capitales, triumviri monetales, etc. They had no connection with each other as magistracies, but were associated together in the series of honores. One of them must be held before the quaestorship.

quinquennio, etc.: the legal age for the quaestorship in the empire was twenty-five.

2. sibi atque fratri: for Tiberius, B.C. 24; for Drusus, B.C. 19.

tum: i.e. in the time of Augustus. The request was then excusable, because the empire was but just founded (initia fastigii), and, besides, the relation (necessitudo) was less close than in the present case.

3. pontificatus: according to Nipperdey, this is a mistake, or a confusion with his brother Drusus, Nero's pontificate being found upon no inscription.

forum ingressus est: the formal entering upon life as a citizen, after assuming the  toga virilis. Suetonius says (Tib. 54): Neronem et Drusum patribus conscriptis commendavit diemque utriusque tircinii congiario plebei dato celebravit. plebi: see I. 8. 3 n.

4. nuptiis Neronis et Iuliae: Nero had before been betrothed to the daughter of Silanus (II. 43. 3).

5. filio Claudii: named Drusus; he died shortly after.

6. videbatur: sc. Tiberius.

ultra, beyond measure.

80. 2. neque egressa, etc.: i.e. none of the family before him had held any higher office.

consulatum intulit: as consul suffectus, B.C. 12.

censoria . . . functus: the office of censor, after being suspended for some years, was restored by Augustus, who, in accordance, as Mommsen remarks, with the original constitution of the republic, exercised its functions as consul. It was abolished by Domitian (Momm. Abm. St.

II. 310). That part of their duties which consisted in an annual inspection of the turmae equitum (II. 83. 5), July 15, he intrusted to a special triumviratus . . . recognoscendi turmas equitum (Suet. Oct. 37), to which Volusius probably belonged. Tacitus, therefore, in using the word enrolling (legendis), is, as Mommsen says, inexact (id. 368).

3. C. Sallustius . . . auctor: the historian, Sallust.

in nomen adscivit: by adoption, the person adopted taking the name of his adoptive father (cf. I. 8. 2).

4. Maecenatem aemulatus: Maecenas never cared for political office, but continued a member of the equestrian order.

luxu: dative.

 patris atque filii collegio insignis. Nam biennio ante

 Tiberius quasi firmandae valetudini in Campaniam conillos: the princes; hos: the favorites.

81. Tiberii, etc.: Dio Cassius says (LVII. 20) that many prognosticated misfortune to Drusus, because every colleague of Tiberius had met an evil fate, — Varus, Piso, and Germanicus; afterwards Sejanus also.

biennio: the consulship of Tiberius and Germanicus, A.D. 18, was not two years before, but with an interval of two years.

2. longam . . . absentiam: five years later he left the city (IV. 57), and never returned to it. On this occasion he was absent a year.

4. Domitius Corbulo: cannot have been the distinguished general who died A.D. 67, in the prime of life; probably his father.

inter . . . gladiatorum: the law of the republic assigned the senators special seats in the theatre; mercus Scaurus et L. Arruntius alique Sullae propinqui eius negotii libens suscepit; quod haud perinde publice

 82 Neque multo post missis ad senatum litteris Tiberius but in the amphitheatre and circus this was not done until the reign of Claudius.

6. patruus, vitricus, uncle (on the father's side, Scaurus and the elder Sulla being half-brothers), step-father (Scaurus having married the widowed mother of Sulla). He had himself been before married to Lepida (23. 3). This Sulla was descended from the Publius Sulla whom Cicero defended in an extant oration.

7. magistratum: the curatores viarum, established by Augustus.

executionem, management; i.e. prosecution.

publice usui, advantageous to the public.

hasta, confiscation: the hasta was the sign of an auction sale, an execution being levied upon the insolvent contractors.

saeviebat: in the reign of Caligula Corbulo allowed himself, by these prosecutions, to be made an agent of gross extortion (Dio, LIX. 15); but the sums extorted were refunded by Claudius (id. LX. 17).

82. rursum: see 20. 1.

iudicio patrum: Africa, although it had an army, was a senatorial province (see Intr. 18. A. 2), and the governor was regularly appointed by lot; the two oldest consulares being assigned to the two wealthiest and most honorable senatorial provinces, Africa and Asia. On this occasion, owing to the military exigency, Africa was withdrawn from the lot, and Lepidus, the oldest consular, was to receive Asia in course. This gave an opportunity to his enemy, Pompeius, to urge that this province too should be made an exception: the judgment of the emperor implying that Lepidus was unfit for Africa, Pompeius argued that this proved him unfit for Asia as well.

Sex. Pompeius agitandi adversus Marcum Lepidum odii nactus, ut socordem, inopem et maioribus suis dedecorum eoque etiam Asiae sorte depellendum incusavit, adverso senatu, qui Lepidum mitem magis quam ignavum, paternas ei angustias et nobilitatem sine probro actam honori quam ignominiae habendam ducebat. Igitur missus in Asiam, et de Africa decretum ut 3 Caesar legeret cui mandanda foret.

Inter quae Severus Caecina censuit ne quem magi-

Haud enim frustra placitum olim ne feminae in socios aut gentes externas traherentur: inesse mulierum comitatu quae pacem luxu, bellum formidine morentur et Romanum agmen ad similitudinem barbari incessus convertant. Non imbecillum tantum et imparem laboribus 3

2. M. Lepidum: not to be confounded with Manius Lepidus (35. 1, also I. 13. 2), a far more distinguished man; they appear to have been second cousins, both being great-grandsons of Marcus Æmilius Lepidus, cos. B.C. 78. The prænomena are constantly confused in the manuscript of Tacitus, but are distinguished by the aid of inscriptions. Nipperdey.

paternas . . . angustias: see II. 48. 1.

3. de Africa, etc.: Furneaux points out that five consulars junior to Lepidus had already held Africa, and suggests that these violations of the rule were in conformity with the Lex Papia Poppæa, or in consequence of the absence from Rome of the one whose turn it was.

88. inter quae: he brought up this matter, which really had nothing to do with the business before the senate (neque relatum de negotio, 34. 1).

Caecina: see 18. 3; this is the same Cæcina that commanded in Germany under Germanicus (see I. 31, etc.).

repetito: ablative absolute with the clause that follows.

seque . . . servavisse: he had himself followed the rule which he would prescribe for others.

cohibita: sc. coniuge.

Paucorum haec assensu audita; plures obturbabant neque relatum de negotio, neque Caecinam dignum tantae rei censorem.

other matters in which they were deemed too luxurious.

84. relatum: sc. esse; the matter had not been formally brought before the senate by the consuls.

2. Messalinus: the same who is called Messalla, I. 8. 5.

paternae facundiae: his father, the distinguished soldier and patron of literature in the reign of Augustus, was, as an orator, nitidus et candidus et quodammodo praeferens in dicendo nobilitatem suam, viribus minor (Quint. X. i. 113).

 nature of an asylum (cf. IV. 67. 6).
 What was intended as a protection against abuse, was converted into a means of covert attacks. It is related, for example, by Philostratus (Apol. I. 15), that it was an offence to chastise a slave who held in his hand a coin stamped with the image of the emperor.

patrono: relating to liberti, as domino to servi; the dominus of the slave became the patronus of the freedman.

 factor who made an asylum of the temple of a god was compared to Utrumque in laudem Drusi trahebatur: ab eo in urbe, inter coetus et sermones hominum obversante, secreta patris mitigari. Neque luxus in iuvene adeo displicebat: huc 3 potius intenderet, diem aedificationibus, noctem convivii traheret, quam solus et nullis voluptatibus avocatus maestam vigilantiam et malas curas exerceret. 3. versas: cf. II. 42. 4; Intr. 35 b.

damnavisset: i.e. had brought about her conviction; the words sub iudice imply that it was a jury trial.

oppositam: held out against him in her hand.

4. precabanturque, etc.: as the fault in suffering this abuse lay in the officers and the courts, a representative of the emperor was called upon to correct it.

accitam, etc.: sc. Anniam.

87. 2. utrumque, both acts; the punishment of Annia and that of these two men.

secreta, the sullen tyranny.

3. luxus: Drusus is represented (I. 29. 4 and 76. 5) as cruel in disposition, but no charge has been made of licentiousness. His luxury seems to have consisted partly in erecting magnificent buildings (aedificationibus).

solus, etc.: these words point to the alleged characteristics of his father's rule; and yet nothing has so far appeared to throw upon him the burden of the charges. He was undoubtedly severe by nature, and disposed to let the laws have their course. In the case of Antistius in the next chapter, the punishment appears to have been merited.

88. et: introduces an illustration of the general statement; cf. II. 50. 1.

repetundis: the usual construction is the genitive, — repetundarum (sc. crimine).

complementum: every charge dragged that of treason along with it.

2. Rhescuporidis consiliis: see II. 64–67; as Cotys is there shown to have been the nephew of Rhescuporis, the word fratre is bracketed.

3. opportuna, accessible.

4. Rhoemetalcen: son of Rhescuporis (II. 67. 4).

insolentia: abl.; because they were not used to our rule; nostri is objective genitive.

discors: i.e. the tributes and other impositions of the Romans they regarded as insuriae. These were inflicted by Trebellienus and submitted to by Rhoemetalces.

sinere: the infinitive after incuso is very rare (cf. VI. 3. 3; Intr. 35 f.).

5. Odrusae: an ancient and powerful nation of Thrace, the nucleus of the kingdom; the two other nations are insignificant.

paribus . . . ignobilitatem: of equally mean extraction.

6. Haemum, the Balkan, which separated Thrace from Moesia.

maxime compositi, those best organized.

regem: Rhoemetalces.

2. populatoribus = those qui vagabantur. The besiegers fell out among themselves, and were then routed by a sally from the town and the arrival of the relieving force.

40. eodem anno, etc.: this rebellion of Florus and Sacrovir was the only formidable uprising in Gaul after that of Vercingetorix, and shows, says Mommsen (Röm. Prov. I. 88),
"the hatred towards the foreign rulers, which still at that time prevailed in the land and particularly among the nobility." The armies of the Rhine, Mommsen thinks, were as important for keeping Gaul quiet, as for holding the Germans in check.

aeris alieni: incurred to pay the tributes and meet the other requirements of Rome, — including private debts, which were enforced by the government. Mommsen maintains that the taxes and financial distress were only the pretext for the rebellion, not its real cause.

Treveros: a tribe in the province of Belgica, represented by Treves in Rhenish Prussia. The Aedui were in Burgundy. These leaders, Florus and Sacrovir, as well as Indus (42. 3), took the name of Iulius, in accordance with usage, from Julius or Augustus Caesar, to whom they owed their citizenship.

2. rarum: Augustus civitatem Ro- manam parissime dedit (Suet. Oct.
40); but from the time of Claudius citizenship became very cheap.

3. componunt, make an agreement.

4. conciliabula: the conciliabulum was in Italy the name of a class of villages inferior to the civitates (municipia and coloniae); the word may here be used in general for villages, but is probably used, as etymologically it may be, to indicate public gatherings. In either case it designates assemblies regularly convened or of a public character, while coetus are irregular gatherings called for some special purpose.

discordare . . . exitio: governed by disserebant; this afforded a favorable opportunity for revolt.

5. inops: sc. esset; depending on cogitarent. This is a significant indication of the economic decay of Italy, discussed in Tiberius' speech, 52-54.

externum: even the Roman legions were now chiefly composed of natives of the provinces.

41. Andecavi [the Andes of Caesar] et Turoni: represented by the modern Angers (Anjou) and Tours, upon the Loire.

2. cohorte: sc. civium Romanorum (I. 8. 3 n.).

Lugduni, Lyons: capital of Gallia Lugdunensis.

3. legionario milite: this, too, appears from 46. 3 to have been a single cohort.

Visellius Varro: he had succeeded Caccina (I. 31. 2).

primoribus: in the same construction as Aviola.

money-lenders. They were looked upon as the instruments of the exactions.

2. obaeratorum aut clientium: Cesar (B. G. I. 4) mentions these same classes as composing the re-liberalibus studiis: the school of Augustodunum, founded by Augustus, was noted in all times of the empire.

2. legionariis armis: helmet (cassis), shield (scutum), greaves (ocreae), breast-plate (lorica), javelin (pilum), and short two-edged sword. It is ablative of characteristic, — a fifth of them provided with, etc.

2. libellis accusatorum: see II. 29. 2.

3. cruentas epistulas: for examples of such letters, common in the last years of Tiberius, see IV. 70. 1; VI. 9. 2; no instances have as yet appeared. Does not Tacitus here project the memories of the reign of terror into an earlier period?

4. altitudine: not loftiness, but dissimulation, or perhaps reticence.

modica: i.e. the insurrection. The experienced general and statesman is entitled to the benefit of this explanation, seeing that his coolness was justified by the event.

45. Sequanorum: the Sequani (of Franche Comté) bordered the Aedui to the east, and their districts adjoining the Aedui had taken part in the rebellion.

2. signiferis: of the two legions. These, as officers, are contrasted with gregario milite.

fremente: in their impatience.

2. decorum principibus: an infinitive may be supplied from profecti . . . forent.

unde . . . regimen: the source of all authority and administration.

4. e Campania: see 31. 2; Pfitzner thinks that this refers to an entrance from this direction after his visit to Gaul; the words peregrinationis suburbanae, however, show that an immediate entrance was intended.

5. spretos triumphos: Velleius (II. 122) asserts that Tiberius was entitled to seven triumphs, but celebrated only three.

48. Sulpicii Quirini: see 22. 1; also II. 30. 4.

3. M. Lollio: he preceded Quirinius in this office, and appears to have been bitterly hostile to Tiberius; Suetonius says (Tib. 12), pruvignum Gaium [Tiberius had married Julia, the mother of Gaius] . . . alieniorem sibi sensu ex criminationibus M. Lollii, comitis et rectoris eius. As Tiberius returned to Rome the same year in which Lollius died (A.D. 2), it seems probable that his intercourse with Tiberius was at an earlier date, when he was proconsul of Asia; this explanation (suggested by Mommsen) requires a period after obtinenti, which most editions place after coluerat.

4. ut memoravi: 22. 3.

49. vulgaretur: he had the poem ready to publish in case of Drusus' death; this was regarded as speculating upon his death.

2. P. Petronii [Turpiliani]: see VI. 45. 3; a friend of the emperor Claudius, who, as governor of Syria, opposed Caligula's design of setting up his own image in the temple at Jerusalem.

4. arguentibus ad perniciem, those who brought evidence for his condemnation.

Agrippae: see I. 77. 3.

2. sin . . . differunt: this protasis describes not the case in hand, but the prevailing condition of things at the time. The apodosis begins with est locus.

temperant, moderate; temper justice with mercy.

3. saepe audiui: see II. 31. 4; III. 16. 3.

4. in integro: he was still alive, and they might spare the emperor this regret. To spare his life would not involve a danger, nor would his death be a warning.

6. censeo, propose: although he did not think him guilty of treason, he was willing to punish it as treason in this degree. This crime was limited to offences against the emperor and his mother (cf. IV. 34. 3). The penalty here proposed was the legal punishment for treason.

51. ductusque, etc.: this is an instructive illustration of the power of punishment still exercised by the senate, independent of the emperor. In this case no direct responsibility rests upon Tiberius; but no doubt his pedantic insistence upon the strict exercise of judicial forms (IV. 30. 4 and Intr. 15) was an incitement to severity.

2. ambagibus, obscurity of speech. pietatem, loyalty; the word sig-

3 laudaret Lepidum neque Agrippam argueret. Igitur factum senatus consultum ne decreta patrum ante diem decimum ad aerarium deferrentur idque vitae spatium 4 damnatis prorogaretur. Sed non senatui libertas ad paenitendum erat, neque Tiberius interiectu temporis mitigabatur.

52 C. Sulpicius D. Haterius consules sequuntur, inturbidus externis rebus annus, domi suspecta severitate adversum luxum, qui immensum proruperat ad cuncta 1 quis pecunia prodigitur. Sed alia sumptuum, quamvis graviora, dissimulatis plerumque pretiis occultabantur; ventris et ganeae paratus assiduis sermonibus vulgati fecerant curam ne princeps antiquae parsimoniae durius adverteret. Nam incipiente C. Bibulo ceteri quoque aediles disseruerant sperni sumptuariam legem nifies dutiful affection towards a father, and the prince stood towards his people as a father.

3. decreta: this word, properly describing the action of the presiding magistrate, is used as "completely synonymous with consultum" (Momm. Röm. St. III. 994).

ante diem decimum: cf. Suet. Tib. 75; see App. I.

ad aerarium: the senatus consulta were deposited in the treasury, in the temple of Saturn. This gave them validity. In early times they were under the care of the plebeian aediles in the temple of Ceres.

4. non . . . mitigabatur: this law worked no improvement, for the Senate was not allowed to reconsider its judgment in this interval, nor did the emperor, as time went on exercise his prerogative of mercy.

52. C. Sulpicius [Galba]: brother of the emperor Galba.

D. Haterius [Agrippa]: 49. 4;

cf. II. 51. 2: son of Quintus Haterius, I. 13. 4.

inturbidus: a word peculiar to Tacitus (Intr. 35 f.).

annus: in apposition with C. . . consules.

suspecta severitate: ablative of characteristic, parallel with inturbidus.

2. sermonibus, town-talk.

antiquae parsimoniae: Suetonius (Tib. 34) says of the economy of Tiberius, pridiana saepe ac semesa obsonia apposuit, dimidiatumque aprum, affirmans omnia eadem habere, quae totum.

adverteret: used absolutely, with the meaning, take notice, punish.

3. aediles: they had the superintendence of the markets.

sumptuariam legem: i.e. the Julian law passed by Augustus, limiting the amount of expense upon banquets. Aulus Gellius (II. 24) mentions also six laws of the republic of the same general purport.

‘Ceteris forsitan in rebus, patres conscripti, magis 58 expediat me coram interrogari et dicere quid e re publica censeam; in hac relatione subtrahi oculos meos melius fuit, ne denotantibus vobis ora ac metum singulorum qui pudendi luxus arguerentur, ipse etiam viderem eos ac velut deprenderem. Quod si mecum ante viri strenui aediles consilium habuissent, nescio an suasurus fuerim omittere potius praevalida et adulta vitia quam hoc assequi, ut palam fieret quibus flagitiis impares essemus. Sed illi quidem officio functi sunt, ut 3 ceteros quoque magistratus sua munia implere velim: mihi autem neque honestum silere neque proloqui expeditum, quia non aedilis aut praetoris aut consulis partis sustineo. unius: i.e. the prince, who has to endure the unpopularity of bad acts, while good ones are placed to the credit of others (sibi quisque trahant).

5. villarum infinita spatia: the peninsula was fast being converted into pleasure-grounds and parks. The word villa, which originally meant farm-house, then a country residence, had now come to mean an estate, with which meaning it came down into the middle ages.

nationes: it was the pride of rich Romans to have slaves of different nations assigned to different employments. See XIV. 44: nationes in familiis habemus, quibus diversi ritus, externa sacra aut nulla sunt.

pondus: i.e. plate, referring to solid metal, not to coined money.

54. in conviviis et circulis: empty declamation against the abuses, with unwillingness to see them corrected.

idem illi: i.e. the same that make the complaints.

verti = everti: Intr. 35 b.

splendidissimo, of most sumptuous life — applied especially to the equites, the wealthy class.

2. corporis . . . auctos: chronic diseases.

At hercule nemo refert, quod Italia externae opis indiget, quod vita populi Romani per incerta maris et tempestatum cotidie volvitur. Ac nisi 7 provinciarum copiae et dominis et servitiis et agris subvenerint, nostra nos scilicet nemora nostraeque villae tuebuntur! Hanc, patres conscripti, curam sustinet 8 princeps; haec omissa funditus rem publicam trahet. Reliquis intra animum medendum est: nos pudor, pau- 9

4. nam si velia, etc.: the supposition is that the thing desired is wrong, and liable to be forbidden by law, although this has not yet been done. Such moral delinquencies are less dangerous than open and unpunished violations of law.

5. unius urbis: down to the time of the Punic Wars Rome was still a city, not yet an empire, and its dominion was confined to Italy.

irritamenta, incitements to luxury. He points to the fatal effects of foreign conquest, in undermining national character; after the great foreign wars of the second century B.C. the tributum or land tax was no longer imposed upon citizens (aliena consumere didicimus).

6. quantulum, etc.: the passage which follows contains a truth of profound importance. The real cause of decay was not to be found in the petty details of luxury censured by the aediles, but in the conversion of all Italy into pleasure-grounds and pastures (nemora villaeque), so that its inhabitants must be supported by tribute levied on all the rest of the world.

per incerta, etc.: relates to the perils of the sea, made necessary by this dependence of Italy upon foreign countries (quod Italia externae opis indiget).

8. hanc curam: the management of the annona, or supply of corn, one of the most important functions of the government at this time.

9. reliquis (neuter): another important truth—the disease was internal, not to be healed by superficial remedies.

nos: Tiberius here identifies himmutationis quaerere libet. Dites olim familiae nobilium aut claritudine insignes studio magnificentiae prolabe-3 bantur. Nam etiam tum plebem socios regna colere et self with the senatorial order, — the governing class, which he contrasts with both rich and poor.

11. simultates . . . relinquunt: they leave him to bear the brunt.

me quoque non: stronger than ne me quidem.

quas, etc.: the necessary ones he is willing to undergo, however burdensome and thankless, — unnecessary ones (inanes et irritas), he excuses himself from. This letter of Tiberius displays high statesmanship and keen insight into the condition of the state. That he favors sumptuary laws is a sentiment that he shares with his times; but he sees that they can accomplish very little in the face of moral and economic causes of decay.

55. remissa, excused; i.e. from following up this line of official action (cf. I. 8. 6). The correction of the abuses was left to time and the working of moral forces, which at last appear to have been efficacious (paulatim exolvere).

a fine . . . adeptus est: the battle of Actium was B.C. 31; Galba began to reign A.D. 68.

rerum: governed by adeptus est, after the analogy of potior; VI. 45. 5, dominationis apisceretur.

paulatim exolvere: i.e. after the hundred years ending with the death of Nero.

2. olim: i.e. during the one hundred years in question.

prolabebantur, fell into ruin; their passion for splendor, finding gratification in display and number of clients, drew upon them suspicion, and caused their overthrow.

3. socios: this term (cf. I. 79. 3 n.) was now applied to all provincials (Kuhn, Städt. Verf. II. 22).

regna: many kings had remained coli licitum; ut quisque opibus domo paratu speciosus, per nomen et clientelas illustrior habebatur. Postquam caedibus saevitum et magnitudo famae exitio erat, ceteri ad sapientiora convertere. Simul novi homines 4 e municipiis et coloniis atque etiam provinciis in senatum crebro assumpti domesticam parsimoniam intulerunt, et quamquam fortuna vel industria plerique pecuniosam ad senectam pervenirent, mansit tamen prior animus. Sed praecipuus astricti moris auctor 5 Vespasianus fuit, antiquo ipse cultu victuque. Obsequium inde in principem et aemulandi amor validior quam poena ex legibus et metus. Nisi forte rebus 6 cunctis inest quidam velut orbis, ut quem ad modum temporum vices, ita morum vertantur; nec omnia apud priores meliora, sed nostra quoque aetas multa laudis et artium imitanda posteris tulit. Verum haec nobis in maiores certamina ex honesto maneat.

Tiberius fama moderationis parta, quod ingruentis 56 accusatores represserat, mittit litteras ad senatum, quis nominally independent, even within the limits of the provinces (Intr. 35/).

clientelas: the rich and noble gathered about themselves as clients all of inferior rank, as well as foreign cities and princes.

caedibus saevitum: the reign of terror, ending with Nero.

sapientiora: simpler tastes and habits of life, which exposed them to less danger.

4. municipiis, etc.: as Rome had ceased to be a mere city and had become a world-empire: first, citizens of the municipal towns of Italy, then citizens of the provinces rose to power and distinction, and even to the first place: the emperor Vespasian was a native of Reate in Italy, Trajan of Italica in Spain.

prior animus: referring to domesticam parsimoniam.

5. astricti, frugal.

Vespasianus: emperor, A.D. 69 to 79. He set an example of simplicity and frugality in high station, and from this time a marked improvement in morals is noticeable, in contrast to the extreme corruption of the early empire. See Boissier, La Religion Romaine, II. 193.

6. temporum, the seasons.

2. summi fastigii vocabulum: Mommsen, in his Römisches Staatsrecht, shows that the tribunician power, even though lacking the imperium, or full power of command, was the highest in the state, being sacrosanct, or protected by an inviolable sanctity, and having the power to control the actions of all other magistrates (cetera imperia praemineret; cf. I. 2. 1 n.). It was from the assumption of the tribunician power that the emperors dated their reigns. The association of Agrippa and Tiberius in this office was equivalent to nominating them as successors, and that was the meaning of the present association of Drusus (ne successor in incerto foret). On the first grant of this power to Tiberius, however (B.C. 7), Gaius and Lucius were still alive and designated as successors; the second grant (A.D. 4) was equivalent to appointing Tiberius as successor.

ne . . . assumeret: see I. 2. 1.
cetera imperia (Intr. 356): properly the tribunician power was not an imperium at all.

4. simul . . . fidebat: by the act in question Tiberius received equal rights in law with Augustus, and was only restrained by modestia and pietas from claiming equality in power and station.

5. integrum . . . iudicium, an impartial judgment, as to which should be his successor.

6. consilia: object of prosperant.

in falsum aucta, exaggerated.

7. tres liberos: two sons (II. 84. 1), and a daughter Julia (29. 4; VI. 27. 1).

eam aetatem: thirty-five. Tiberius was born B.C. 42, and first received the tribunician power, B.C. 7.

umphalem et bis consulem noti laboris participem sumi. Praeceperant animis orationem patres, quo quaesitior <sup>57</sup> adulatio fuit. Nec tamen repertum nisi ut effigies principum, aras deum, templa et arcus aliaque solita censerent, nisi quod M. Silanus ex contumelia consulatus honorem principibus petivit dixitque pro sententia, ut publicis privatisve monumentis ad memoriam temporum non consulum nomina praescriberentur, sed eorum qui tribuniciam potestatem gererent. At Q. Haterius cum <sup>3</sup> eius diei senatus consulta aureis litteris figenda in curia censuisset, deridiculo fuit senex foedissimae adulationis tantum infamia usurus.

Inter quae provincia Africa Iunio Blaeso prorogata, <sup>58</sup> Servius Maluginensis flamen Dialis ut Asiam sorte haberet postulavit, frustra vulgatum dictitans non licere

8. bis consulem: A.D. 15 and 21.

57. praeeperant, anticipated.
quaesitior, more studied.

2. nec repertum: they had already, in their servility, exhausted all forms of adulation.

principum: Tiberius and Drusus.

honorem: i.e. that which follows.

pro sententia, in support of his proposition.

ut publicis, etc.: every year was denoted by the names of the consuls, according to the usage of the republic; the method proposed would mark them by the year of the reign of the prince, as in modern monarchies. Augustus seems to have had some such plan in mind, when he began to reckon the years of his reign by those of his possession of the tribunician power; but, in the "hybrid" character of the early empire, this method of designating the years failed to supersede that by consuls (Momm. Röm. St. II. 752).

3. senex: he was too old to gain anything but discredit by his proposition; adulationis limits infamia, and the participle usurus may be rendered by a relative clause, — who would gain, etc. (I. 13. 2 n.). Haterius was now about eighty years old.

58. Iunio Blaeso: see 35.

ut . . . haberet: see 32.

frustra vulgatum, an unfounded notion; the flamens were priests of special deities, fifteen in number, of which the three here mentioned, — of Jupiter, Mars, and Quirinus, — called flamines maiores, were required to be patricians. They enjoyed peculiar sanctity and privileges, and were at the same time subject to certain strict regulations, which were, however, relaxed, except in the case of the flamen of Jupiter, who continued subject to a multitude of petty restrictions, among them noctem unam extra urbem manere nefas (Liv. V. 52. 13); also that he could not touch or even name a goat, or uncooked meat, or ivy, or beans (Gell. X. 15).

Dialibus egredi Italia, neque aliud ius suum quam Martialium Quirinaliumque flaminum : porro, si hi duxissent provincias, cur Dialibus id vetitum? Nulla de eo populi scita, non in libris caerimoniarum reperiri. Saepe pontifices Dialia sacra fecisse, si flamen valetudine aut munere publico impediretur. Duo et septuaginta annis post Cornelii Merulae caedem neminem suffectum, neque tamen cessavisse religiones. Quod si per tot annos possit non creari nullo sacrorum damno, quanto facilius afuturum ad unius anni proconsulare imperium? Privatis olim simultatibus effectum ut a pontificibus maximis ire in provincias prohiberentur: nunc deum munere summum pontificum etiam summum hominum esse, non aemulationi, non odio aut privatis affectionibus obnoxium. Adversus quae cum augur Lentulus alique varie dissererent, eo decursum est, ut pontificis maximi sententiam opperirentur.

Tiberius dilata notione de iure flaminis, decretas ob tribuniciam Drusi potestatem caerimonias temperavit, neque aliud, etc.: the flamens of Mars and Quirinus might take foreign commands.

reperiri: i.e. any such restrictions.

2. pontifices: the supreme priests, to whom the flamens were subject. The argument of Maluginensis, that the pontiffs might as well perform these duties in his absence, was weak, because it was not so much for their performance as on account of the special sanctity of the person, that the flamen was placed under these disqualifications.

duo et septuaginta annis: see App. I.

3. afuturum: sc. flaminem.

4. a pontificibus maximis: see for this instance, Livy, XXXVII. 51.

summum pontificum, etc.: upon the death of the pontifex maximus Lepidus, B.C. 13, Augustus had assumed this title, which continued to be borne by the emperors, even after the establishment of Christianity, until it was given up by the Emperor Gratian, A.D. 382.

59. augur Lentulus: of this man, who was enormously wealthy and equally miserly, Seneca says (de Ben. II. 27): nummos citius emittebat quam verba, tanta illi inopia erat sermonis.

eo decursum est, they had recourse to this.

2. notione, inquiry; expressing the radical signification of nosco, to find out.

decretas . . . caerimonias: 57. 2.

nominatim arguens insolentiam sententiae aureasque literas contra patrium morem. Recitatae et Drusi epistulae quamquam ad modestiam flexae pro superbissimis accipiuntur. Huc decidisse cuncta, ut ne iuvenis quidem tanto honore accepto adiret urbis deos, ingrederetur senatum, auspicia saltem gentile apud solum inciperet. Bellum scilicet, aut diverso terrarum distineri litora et lacus Campaniae cum maxime peragrantem. Sic imbui rectorem generis humani, id primum e paternis consiliis discere. Sane gravaretur aspectum civium senex imperator, fessamque aetatem et actos labores praetenderet: Druso quod nisi ex arrogantia impedimentum?

Sed Tiberius, vim principatus sibi firmans, imaginem antiquitatis senatui praebebat, postulata provinciarum ad disquisitionem patrum mittendo. Crebrescebat enim Graecas per urbes licentia atque impunitas asyla statuendi; complebantur templa pessimis servitiorum; eodem subsidio obaerati adversum creditores suspectique capitalium criminum receptabantur. Nec ullum satis validum imperium erat coercendis seditionibus populi, flagitia hominum ut caerimonias deum protegentis. Igitur placitum ut mitterent civitates iura atque legatos. Et quaedam quod falso usurpaverant sponte omisere; multae vetustis superstitionibus aut meritis in populum Roma-

3. auspicia . . . inciperet: he should have taken the auspices before entering upon his new dignity.

4. bellum: sc. esse.

cum maxime, just at that time.

5. sic imbui: this is the training he is getting for the imperial office.

60. vim principatus: Pfitzner refers this to the power assumed by Tiberius of receiving the ambassadors himself, and then referring the decision of special points to the senate, while in the times of the republic the entire business would have come before the senate. It appears more natural, however, to refer it back to his influence over Drusus, just complained of—while thus securing the substantial power of royalty.

ad disquisitionem patrum: the management of foreign affairs had always belonged to the senate.

2. asyla: cf. 36. 1.

4. iura: the evidences of their claims to the right of asylum.

- 6 num fidebant. Magnaque eius diei species fuit, quo senatus maiorum beneficia, sociorum pacta, regum etiam qui ante vim Romanam valuerant decreta, ipsorumque numinum religiones introspectit, libero, ut quondam, quid firmaret mutaretve.

Atque ipsum illic Apollinem post interfectos Cyclopos Iovis iram vitavisse. Mox Liberum patrem, bello victorem, supplicibus Amazonum quae aram insiderant ignovisse. Auctam hinc concessu Herculis, cum Lydia poteretur, caerimoniam templo, neque Persarum ditione deminutum ius; post Macedonas, dein nos servasse. Proximi hos Magnetes L. Scipionis et L. Sullae constitutis nitebantur, quorum ille Antiocho, hic Mithridate pulsus fidem atque virtutem Magnetum decoravere vim Romanam: the Roman conquest.

6. species: cf. imaginem antiquitatis, 1.

libero: ablative absolute; the senate exercised its old unlimited control in the matter.

61. Ephesii: their special cult of Diana (Artemis) is well known; and they undertook to make out that she and Apollo were born in their territory.

Delo: a poetic use of the ablative as locative, common with Tacitus.

Cenchreum: called Κένχρεος by Strabo, who also gives this legend (XIV. p. 639).

Ortygiam: 'quail-land,' — an old name for Delos.

oleae: a sacred tree, like the figus ruminalis in Rome.

tum: at the time of the embassy.

2. illic: i.e. as an asylum.

interfectos Cyclopos: because they had slain his son Æsculapius for restoring Hippolytus to life. It was for this offence that Apollo was deprived of his divinity, and set to keep the flocks of Admetus.

3. caerimoniam, sanctity.

62. proximi hos: proximi is used with the accusative after the analogy of prope. See App. I.

Magnetes: the inhabitants of Magnesia in Maeandro; the defeat of Antiochus near this place by Lucius Scipio was B.C. 190; the peace made by Sulla with Mithridates, B.C. 84.

uti Dianae Leucophrynae perfugium inviolabile foret. Aphrodisienses posthac et Stratonicensis dictatoris Caesaris ob vetusta in partis merita et recens divi Augusti decretum attulere, laudati quod Parthorum irruptionem nihil mutata in populum Romanum constantia pertulissent. Sed Aphrodisiensium civitas Veneris, Stratonicensium Iovis et Triviae religionem tuebantur. Altius Hierocaesarienses exposuere, Persicam apud se Dianam, delubrum rege Cyro dicatum; et memorabantur Perpennae, Isaurici multaque alia imperatorum nomina, qui non modo templo, sed duobus milibus passuum eandem sanctitatem tribuerant. Exim Cyprii tribus ~~de~~ delubris, quorum vetustissimum Paphiae Veneri auctor Aerias, Dianae Leucophrynae: the temple of this goddess at Magnesia ranked in splendor and beauty next to those of Artemis at Ephesus and the Didymsean Apollo at Miletus, among the temples of Asia Minor; her cult was similar to that of 'Diana of the Ephesians.'

2. Aphrodisienses, etc.: Aphrodisias and Stratonicea, as well as Magnesia, were in Caria.

in partis: i.e. in the civil war. This proclamation of Caesar, which is recorded in an extant inscription, has reference to Aphrodisias alone; that of Augustus to Stratonicea alone, which by itself resisted the invasion of the Parthians under Labienus, B.C. 40. laudati, therefore, belongs only to Stratonicensis.

3. Veneris: i.e. Aphrodite, from whose name that of the city was derived.

Iovis: the temple of Zeus Chrysaoreos at Stratonicea was the common place of assemblage for the cities of Caria (Strab. XIV. p. 660).

Triviae: Hecate, the goddess of occult mysteries—worshipped where three ways met.

4. Dianam: this Diana appears to have been identical with the Ephesian Artemis. A Persian cult is described by Pausanias (V. 27. 3) at Hierocæsarea as a kind of fire worship, conducted by a magian priest, in which wood laid upon the altar took fire of itself. The city of Hierocæsarea was in Lydia.

Perpennae, Isaurici: limiting nomina. Perpenna (usually spelt Perperna) commanded in Asia, B.C. 129; P. Servilius Isauricus (son of the eminent Isauricus), B.C. 46.

duobus milibus passuum: i.e. in every direction from the temple. This is illustrated by an inscription found at Oropus, in which it is stated that the temple of Amphiaras at that place received from Sulla a grant of immunity from public burdens, to which was added: voti reddendi causa aedi Amphiarai agrum tribuo undequaque pedum M. ut hic quoque ager sacer sit. Mommsen in Hermes, XX. p. 268.

5. Veneri: the island of Cyprus was believed to have been the birth-place of Aphrodite, and the cities of Paphos and Salamis were the prinpost filius eius Amathus Veneri Amathusiae et Iovi Salaminio Teucer, Telamonis patris ira profugus, posuissent.

cial seats of her cult—the latter with Adonis.

post: the second and third objects of posuissent (the temples founded by Amathus and Teucer) are not expressed; they would correspond to vetustissimum.

Salaminio: Salamis was the chief town of Cyprus.

Teucer: see Horace, Od. I. 7. 21.

63. 2. studia, partisan zeal for one or another.

3. Aesculapii: from his statue at Pergamus by Pyromachus (B.C. 250) is derived the familiar representation of the god in art.

ceteros, all other claimants.

4. Stratonici: of this Venus nothing further is known.

Tenios: Tenos was one of the Cyclades. The temple of Poseidon here is called θεός Ἀΐγιον by Strabo (X. p. 487).

5. propiora, more recent.

utrisque: dative of possession.

venerandi: limits cultus numinum (cf. ambitus . . . ornandi, IV. 2. 4). Sardes had the worship of Artemis; Miletus that of the Didymæan Apollo (62. 1 n.).

6. petere, made a petition; ius asyli may be understood.

7. modus: it would appear that those cities mentioned after ceteros (3) were denied the right of asylum; Suetonius (Tib. 37) says, abolevit et ius moremque asylorum quae usquam erant.

aera, bronze tablets inscribed with the decree of the senate.

Sub idem tempus Iuliae Augustae valetudo atrox 64 necessitudinem principi fecit festinati in urbem reditus, sincera adhuc inter matrem filiumque concordia sive occultis odiis. Neque enim multo ante, cum haud procul a theatro Marcelli effigiem divo Augusto Iulia dicaret, Tiberii nomen suo postscripserat, idque ille credebatur ut inferius maiestate principis gravi et dissimulata offensione abdidisse. Sed tum supplicia dis ludique magni 3 ab senatu decernuntur, quos pontifices et augures et quindecimviri septemviris simul et sodalibus Augustalibus ederent. Censuerat L. Apronius ut fetiales quo 4 que iis ludis praesiderent. Contra dixit Caesar, distincto sacerdotiorum iure et repetitis exemplis: neque enim umquam fetialibus hoc maiestatis fuisse. Ideo August 5 tales adiectos, quia proprium eius domus sacerdotium esset, pro qua vota persolverentur.

Exsequi sententias haud institui nisi insignes per 65

64. Iuliae Augustae: Livia, who had been adopted into the Julian gens (see I. 8. 2). occultis odiis: Intr. 26 a.

2. theatro Marcelli: on the Campus Martius, built by Augustus in memory of his nephew, and still partly preserved.

3. supplicia: for supplicationes.

ludi magni: the great games in the Circus (Circenses) consisted chiefly of horse and chariot races. Of this class the annual games on Sept. 15 were known distinctively as Ludi Romani, the term ludi magni or votivi being reserved for occasional celebrations like these.

septemviris: sc. Epulonibus; the board of seven (originally three) having charge of the public banquets; at first only of the Epulum Iovis in Capitolio, Nov. 12. It is governed by simul, which is here a preposition (Intr. 35 i).

sodalibus Augustalibus: I. 54. 1.

4. fetiales: a college of twenty persons of high rank, who had charge of the formalities of declaring war and making treaties. This was not among the magna collegia, — the pontifices, augurs, quindecimviri, and epulones (neque umquam fetialibus hoc maiestatis fuisse).

5. Augustales: neither were these one of the great colleges, but they stood in a peculiarly near relation to the imperial family.

65. exsequi . . . institui: his object is to narrate facts, not repeat opinions.

- honestum aut notabili dedecore, quod praecipuum munus annalium reor, ne virtutes sileantur, utque pravis dictis factisque ex posteritate et infamia metus sit.
- 2 Ceterum tempora illa adeo infecta et adulatione sordida fuere ut non modo primores civitatis, quibus claritudo sua obsequiis protegens erat, sed omnes consulares, magna pars eorum qui praetura functi, multique etiam pedarii senatores certatim exurgerent foedaque et nimia

- 66 Paulatim dehinc ab indecoris ad infesta transgrediebantur. C. Silanum pro consule Asiae, repetundarum a sociis postulatam, Mamercus Scaurus e consularibus, Iunius Otho praetor, Brutteditus Niger aedilis simul corripunt, obiectantque violatum Augusti numen, spre- tam Tiberii maiestatem, Mamercus antiqua exempla iaciens, L. Cottam a Scipione Africano, Servium Gal-ex posteritate et infamia: a hendiadya.

2. primores civitatis: men like Lepidus, Gallus, and Messalinus.

pedarii senatores: the senators of lower rank. The term originally designated those who sat in the senate, not by virtue of patrician birth or tenure of office, but by the appointment of the consuls or (later) the censors; these had not the ius sententiae dicendae, but only the right to vote in a division, pedibus iis; hence were called pedarii. After the legislation of Sulla, by which all who held the quaestorship became members of the senate, the term was applied, as here, to those who had held the inferior magistra-cies, by way of contrast to consulares and praetorii (Momm. Röm. St. III. 982).

4. nollet: a rare use of the concessive subjunctive.

66. 2. C. Silanum: it appears very clearly from the narration, and from the gratitude of the provincials (IV. 15. 4), that Silanus richly deserved his punishment.

Scaurus: see I. 13. 4; for Otho and Brutteditus see 4 and 5.

antiqua exempla: none of these were to the point. Cotta was accused of repetundae by the younger Africanus, and acquitted because the jury did not wish to seem influenced by the authority of the prosecutor; Galba, although guilty of gross mis-bam a Catone censorio, P. Rutilium a M. Scauro accusatos. Videlicet Scipio et Cato talia ulciscabantur, aut 3 ille Scaurus, quem proavum suum opprobrium maiorum Mamercus infami opera dehonestabat. Iunio Othoni 4 litterarium ludum exercere vetus ars fuit; mox Seiani potentia senator obscura initia impudentibus ausis propolluebat. Bruttedium artibus honestis copiosum et, si 5 rectum iter pergeret, ad clarissima quaeque iturum festinatio exstimulabat, dum aequalis, dein superiores, postremo suasset ipse spes anteire parat; quod multos 6 etiam bonos pessum dedit, qui spretis quae tarda cum securitate, praematura vel cum exitio properant. Auxere 67 numerum accusatorum Gellius Publicola et M. Paconius, ille quaestor Silani, hic legatus. Nec dubium habebatur saevitiae captarumque pecuniarum teneri reum; sed multa aggerebantur etiam insontibus periculosa, cum super tot senatores adversos facundissimis totius Asiae eoque ad accusandum delectis responderet solus et orandi nescius, proprio in metu, qui exercitum quoque eloquentiam debilitat, non temperante Tiberio quin premeret voce vultu, eo quod ipse creberrime interrogabat, neque refellere aut eludere dabatur, ac saepe etiam con-government in Spain, was acquitted by his eloquence and the spectacle of his weeping children; Rutilius, though innocent, was condemned. Not one of them was prosecuted for maiestas.

3. talia ulciscabantur: ironical, proposed to punish a similar offence, —referring to the emptiness of the charge of maiestas. There was no such personal spite in their case.

ille Scaurus: M. Æmilius Scaurus, the leader of the senatorial party in the period of reaction after the Gracchi. He discredited himself by tricky transactions in the war with Jugurtha. He was ancestor of Mamercus.

4. litterarium ludum: a grammar school,—he disgraced even his low origin.

5. ad clarissima quaeque, to any height of distinction.

festinatio: i.e. to rise.

67. quaestor: see I. 74. 1 n.

2. teneri reum: that he was guilty.

delectis: i.e. by the assembly of the province.

temperante: Intr. 35 p.

- 4 Igitur petito paucorum dierum interiectu defensionem sui deseruit, ausis ad Caesarem codicillis, quibus 68 invidiam et preces miscuerat. Tiberius quae in Silanum parabat quo excusatius sub exemplo acciperentur, libellos divi Augusti de Voleso Messalla eiusdem Asiae pro consule factumque in eum senatus consultum recitari 2 iubet. Tum L. Pisonem sententiam rogat. Ille multum de clementia principis praefatus aqua atque igni Silano interdicendum censuit ipsumque in insulam 3 Gyarum relegandum. Eadem ceteri, nisi quod Cn. Lentulus separanda Silani materna bona, quippe alia 4 parente geniti, reddendaque filio dixit, adnuente Tiberio.

quaesivisset: sc. Tiberius. He would be satisfied with nothing short of confession.

3. actor publicus: see II. 30. 3.

necessitas: i.e. to his kinsmen.

4. invidiam, reproaches.

68. quae: relates to ea understood, subject of acciperentur.

Voleso Messalla: Seneca (de Ira, II. 5) relates that in one day he had three hundred men beheaded, and incedens inter cadavera vultu superbo . . . graece proclamavit: 'o rem regiam.'

2. L. Pisonem: brother of Gnaeus Piso; see II. 34.

Gyarum: one of the Cyclades.

relegandum: see 17. 8 n.

3. alia parente: probably a step-mother, whose property should not be confiscated; see App. I.

69. Dolabella: for another instance of his subserviency see 47.

4. longius: further than the others.

2. delicta: i.e. after their occurrence, — how much better to prevent them.

Adversum quae disseruit Caesar : non quidem sibi 3 ignara quae de Silano vulgabantur, sed non ex rumore statuendum. Multos in provinciis contra quam spes aut metus de illis fuerit, egisse ; excitari quosdam ad meliora magnitudine rerum, hebescere alios. Neque 4 posse principem sua scientia cuncta complecti, neque expedire ut ambitione aliena trahatur. Ideo leges in 5 facta constitui, quia futura in incerto sint. Sic a maioribus institutum ut, si antissent delicta, poenae sequerentur. Ne verterent sapienter reperta et semper 6 placita ; satis onerum principibus, satis etiam potentiae.
Minui iura, quotiens gliscat potestas, nec utendum imperio, ubi legibus agi possit. Quanto rarior apud Tibe- 7 rium popularitas, tanto laetioribus animis accepta.
Atque ille prudens moderandi, si propria ira non impel- 8 leretur, addidit insulam Gyarum immitem et sine cultu hominum esse : darent Iunia familiae et viro quondam ordinis eiusdem, ut Cythnum potius concederet. Id 9 sororem quoque Silani Torquatam, priscae sanctimoniae virginem, expetere. In hanc sententiam facta discessio.

Post auditi Cyrenenses, et accusante Anchario Prisco 70 Caesius Cordus repetundarum damnatur. L. Ennium 2

3. non ex rumore : he was to be punished for specific offences, not on the ground of vague report.

4. ambitione, intrigues.

7. popularitas : not popularity, but a disposition favorable to the people, — democratic leanings.

8. prudens moderandi : Intr. 35 e.

quondam ordinis eiusdem : sc. senatorii ; which rank he had lost.

Cythnum : a larger island, nearer Greece.

9. priscae . . . virginem : two pedestals have been discovered in the newly excavated Atrium Vestae, with inscriptions showing that they supported statues of this vestal ; she is there called Iunia C. Silani f., and her title reads vir. vest. maximae, the adjective showing that she was the eldest of the virgins, and therefore presided over the collegium ; one of the inscriptions, sacerdoti vestali annis lxxiii, shows her to have been at least seventy years old. Jordan, Der Tempel der Vesta und das Haus der Vestalinnen, p. 45.

70. Cyrenenses : the inhabitants of the modern Barca.

equitem Romanum, maiestatis postulatum, quod effigiem principis promiscum ad usum argenti vertisset, recipi Caesar inter reos vetuit, palam aspernante Ateio Capitone quasi per libertatem. Non enim debere eripi patribus vim statuendi neque tantum maleficium impune habendum. Sane lentus in suo dolore esset; rei publicae iniurias ne largiretur. Intellexit haec Tiberius ut erant magis quam ut dicebantur, perstititque intercedere. Capito insignitior infamia fuit, quod humani divinique iuris sciens egregium publice locum et bonas domi artes dehonestavisset.

71 Incessit dein religio, quonam in templo locandum foret donum quod pro valetudine Augustae equites Romani voverant equestri Fortunae; nam etsi delubra eius deae multa in urbe, nullum tamen tali cognomento erat. Repertum est aedem esse apud Antium quae sic nuncuparetur, cunctasque caerimonias Italicis in oppidis vetuit: by his tribunician power; see below, intercedere. For Tiberius' good sense in such cases cf. I. 73. 3.

2. promiscum . . . argenti: as silver plate, etc.

Ateio Capitone: on his servile spirit, see 75. 3. Suetonius (de ill. gram. 22) tells a story in illustration of this. Pomponius having corrected Tiberius upon the use of a word, Capito declared that the word was Latin, or if not, that it would now be made such, to which Pomponius answered: Mentitur Capito; tu enim, Caesar, civitatem dare potes hominibus, verbo non potes.

4. ut erant: as expression of a servile spirit.

egregium, etc.: referring to his professional reputation; see App. I. bonas domi artes: his private character.

71. religio, a religious question. nullum . . . erat: there had been such a temple, dedicated B.C. 173; probably it had been destroyed by fire.

2. Antium: this was a principal seat of the worship of Fortuna; see Hor. Od. I. 35.

cunctasque, etc.: the conquering city, in annexing the cities of Italy, and incorporating them in its civitas, had adopted also their religions, and incorporated them in its pantheon, even although the cult continued to be celebrated in the old locality. The formal adoption of foreign religions was under the direction of the pontifices. The present decision is regarded by Boissier (La Religion Romaine, II. 412), as the first formal enunciation of the principle, that all the religions of the empire belonged to Rome.

templaque et numinum effigies iuris atque imperii Romani esse. Ita donum apud Antium statuitur. Et quoniam de religionibus tractabatur, dilatum nuper responsum adversus Servium Maluginensem flaminem Dialem prompsit Caesar, recitavitque decretum pontificum, quotiens valetudo adversa flaminem Dialem incesisset, ut pontificis maximi arbitrio plus quam binotium abesset, dum ne diebus publici sacrificii neu saepius quam bis eundem in annum : quae principe Augusto constituta satis ostendebant annuam absentiam et provinciarum administrationem Dialibus non concedi. Memorabaturque L. Metelli pontificis maximi exemplum, qui Aulum Postumium flaminem attinuisset. Ita sors Asiae in eum, qui consularium Maluginensi proximus erat, collata.

3. dilatum, etc. : see 59. 2. decretum pontificum : a decision made under Augustus, as is shown below, quae principe, etc.
plus . . . abesset : when he was in ordinary condition of health, he could not be away longer than two nights ; originally not more than one night.

4. L. Metelli . . . exemplum : this was during the First Punic War, B.C. 242 (Val. Max. I. 1. 2). attinuisset : i.e. at Rome. Postumius was flamen Martialis, to the example of which office Maluginensis had appealed (58. 1).

72. Lepidus : Marcus Lepidus (32. 2).

basilicam : an oblong building, divided lengthwise by two parallel rows of columns ; the form adopted for the earliest Christian churches, and now to be seen in the basilicas of Santa Maria Maggiore and St. John Lateran. The earliest building of this class was the Basilica Porcia, built B.C. 184, upon the Comitium west of the Curia, and named from Marcus Porcius Cato ; it was used for courts of justice, the Forum having become too crowded. The Basilica Aemilia, or Pauli, here mentioned, was east of the Curia.

2. etiam tum : i.e. it has now gone out of fashion.

nec Augustus, etc. : he might have forbidden it from a fear that the popularity gained would be menacing to his own power. Taurus built an amphitheatre, and Balbus dus, quamquam pecuniae modicus, avitum decus recoluit.

 4 At Pompei theatrum igne fortuito haustum Caesar ex-structurum pollicitus est, eo quod nemo e familia restau-rando sufficeret, manente tamen nomine Pompei. Simul laudibus Seianum extulit, tamquam labore vigilantiaque 5 eius tanta vis unum intra damnum stetisset. Et cen-

 Blaesum pro consule Africae triumphî insignibus attolleret, dare id se dixit honori Seiani, cuius ille avunculus erat. Ac tamen res Blaesi dignae decore tali fuere.

 ratis per intima Africae auxiliis huc arrogantiae vene-rat ut legatos ad Tiberium mitteret sedemque ultro sibi atque exercitui suo postularet, aut bellum inexplicabile contumelia indoluisse Caesarem ferunt quam quod de-3 sertor et praedo hostium more ageret. Ne Spartaco posterum: genitive plural.

3. pecuniae modicus: cf. inopem and paternas angustias, 32. 2.

avitum decus: cf. Aemilia monumenta above; the basilica was built by his grandfather, Lucius Aemilius Lepidus, brother of the triumvir.

4. Pompei theatrum: see 23. 1. sufficeret, had sufficient means.

unum . . . stetisset, confined to this damage. In fact, only the stage (scaena) appears to have been destroyed (VI. 45. 2), so that the word exustum used by Seneca (5 n.), seems too strong.

5. effigiem Seiano: the remark of Cremutius Cordus at this: tunc vere theatrum perire! (Sen. Cons. ad Marc. 22. 4) was no doubt one cause of his prosecution three years later (IV. 34. 1).

78. sedem: he would retire to some territory set apart for him.

aut: as an alternative.

inexplicabile, interminable.

2. hostium more ageret: should assume the character and rights of a belligerent.

Dat negotium Blaeso, ceteros quidem ad 4 spem proliceret arma sine noxa ponendi, ipsius autem ducis quoquo modo poteretur. Et recepti ea venia 5 plerique. Mox adversum artes Tacfarinatis haud dissimili modo belligeratum. Nam quia ille robore exercitus impar, furandi melior, pluris per globos incursaret eluderetque et insidias simul temptaret, tres incessus, totidem agmina parantur. Ex quis Cornelius Scipio 2 legatus praefuit qua praedatio in Leptitanos et suffugia Garamantum; alio latere, ne Cirtensium pagi impune traherentur, propriam manum Blaesus filius duxit. Medio cum delectis, castella et munitiones idoneis locis imponens, dux ipse arta et infensa hostibus cuncta fecerat, quia, quoquo inclinarent, pars aliqua militis Romani in ore in latere et saepe a tergo erat; multique eo modo caesi aut circumventi. Tunc tripertitum exercitum 4 pluris in manus dispergit, praeponitque centuriones virtutis expertae. Nec, ut mos fuerat, acta aestate 5 was B.C. 73, suppressed by Crassus two years later; the wars with Sertorius (in Spain) and Mithridates (in Asia Minor) were going on at the same time.

pulcherrimo . . . fastigio: the empire was now at its height of power.

4. sine noxa: under a promise of safety.

5. haud dissimili: i.e. to his own.

74. furandi, guerilla warfare; the genitive with melior is found only here and in Silius. (Intr. 35 c.)

tres incessus, etc.: an advance by the Romans in three columns.

2. praedatio . . . Garamantum: this was the movement furthest east, near the Syrtis, where Tacfarinas had plundered Leptis (Minor, on the coast, south of Carthage), and then taken refuge among the Garamantes, who occupied Fessan, south of Tripoli, but whose wanderings, no doubt, extended further west. The movement against Cirta (Constantine), the capital of Numidia, was furthest west.

traherentur, be ravaged.

retrahit copias aut in hibernaculis veteris provinciae componit, sed ut in limine belli dispositis castellis per expeditos et solitudinum gnaros mutantem mapalia Tacfarinatem proturbabat, donec fratre eius capto regressus est, properantius tamen quam ex utilitate sociorum, 6 relictis per quos resurgeret bellum. Sed Tiberius pro confecto interpretatus id quoque Blaeso tribuit, ut imperator a legionibus salutaretur, prisco erga duces honore, qui bene gesta re publica gaudio et impetu victoris exercitus conclamabantur; erantque plures simul imperatores nec super ceterorum aequalitatem. Concessit quibusdam et Augustus id vocabulum, ac tunc Tiberius Blaeso postremum.

Agrippa et Pollione Asinio avis, fratre Druso insignis Caesarique progener destinatus, et Capito Ateius, de quo memoravi, principem in civitate locum studiis civilibus assecutus, sed avo centurione Sullano, patre 2 praetorio. Consulatum ei acceleraverat Augustus, ut mutantem, whenever he changed. mapalia: thatched huts instead of tents, used by the Numidians. See Sallust, Inq. 18.

properantius, etc.: the provincials were left unprotected.

6. ut imperator, etc.: the title of imperator, given to victorious generals in the time of the republic, and continued until this time (I. 58. 9 n.), was now discontinued, and after this occasion there was no imperator except the princeps himself.

plures imperatores: imperator being a title of honor, not, as now, an office.

75. Asinius Saloninus: son of Asinius Gallus (I. 12, 13) and Vipsania, daughter of Agrippa; she had been married to Tiberius (I. 12. 6), and Drusus was thus his half-brother; Saloninus had been betrothed to a daughter of Germanicus, hence Caesar's progener. The agnomen Saloninus was derived from the city of Salona in Dalmatia, captured by Pollio.

Capito Ateius: see 70. 2.

studiis civilibus: this term is used especially to designate legal studies.

2. consulatum: A.D. 5, as consul suffectus.

Labeonem Antistium isdem artibus praeccellentem dignatione eius magistratus anteiret. Namque illa aetas duo pacis decora simul tulit: sed Labeo incorrupta libertate, et ob id fama celebratior, Capitonis obsequium dominantibus magis probabatur. Illi, quod praeturam intra stetit, commendatio ex iniuria, huic, quod consulatium adeptus est, odium ex invidia oriebatur. Et Iunia sexagesimo quarto post Philippensem aciem anno supremum diem explevit, Catone avunculo genita, C. Cassii uxor, M. Bruti soror. Testamentum eius multo apud vulgum rumore fuit, quia in magnis opibus, cum ferme cunctos proceres cum honore nominavisset, Caesarem omisit. Quod civiliter acceptum, neque prohibuit quo minus laudatione pro rostris ceterisque sollemnibus funus cohonestaretur. Viginti clarissimarum familiarum imagines antelatae sunt, Manlii Quinctii aliaque eiusdem nobilitatis nomina. Sed praefulgebant Cassius atque Brutus eo ipso, quod effigies eorum non visebantur.

duo pacis decora: Capito and Labeo were the founders of rival schools of jurisprudence, called respectively Sabinians and Proculians, which divided Roman jurists for about two centuries. The Digest says of them (1. 2, 2, 47): Aleius Capito in eis quas ei tradita fuerunt, perseverabat; Labeo . . . plurima innovare instituit, — that is, in the words of Hadley (Intr. to Roman Law, p. 64), the ground of difference was in "the recognition of reason or of authority as supreme guide." Suetonius (Oct. 54) relates an instance of Labeo's independent spirit: that, in the filling up of the senate, depleted by the Civil Wars, he nominated Marcus Lepidus, the triumvir, an enemy of Augustus, then in exile; interrogatusque ab eo an essent alij digniores, 'suum quemque iudicium habere' respondit.

He appears, also, from an allusion in Horace (Sat. 1. 3. 82), to have been of a passionate temper.

4. praeturam intra stetit: he held no higher office.

commendatio ex iniuria, popularity from the wrong done to him.

76. Catone avunculo: her mother, Servilia, was sister of Cato and (by a second marriage) mother of Brutus.

2. Caesarem omisit: as was worthy of the sister of Brutus; and the spirit of Tiberius seems to have been equally honorable (civiliter acceptum).

4. Manlii, Quinctii: these were among the oldest patrician gentes.

5. non visebantur: cf. IV. 35. 3; also Pliny, Ep. 1. 17: mirum est qua religione, quo studio imagines Brutorum, Cassiorum, Catonum domi, ubi potest, habeat.

1. C. Asinio: son of Asinius Gallus, — his cognomen was Pollio; see I. 12. 6. Antistius belonged to a family of considerable influence.

cum repente: in this Tacitus differs from Suetonius and Dio, who date the deterioration in Tiberius' character from the death of Germanicus (see III. 22. 1 n.); but the facts as related by Tacitus bear out his view; from the time of Drusus' death we note a steady change for the worse.

turbare: absolute; cf. III. 47. 2.

2. supra memoravi: see I. 24. 3, 69. 7; III. 29. 6, 35. 2, 72. 4. He was colleague of his father, Seius Strabo, in this office, until the appointment of his father to the praefecture of Egypt, A.D. 18.

ierit: see App. I.

3. Vulsiniis: Bolsena, a town in the southeastern part of Etruria, the metropolis of the old Etruscan confederacy.

Seio: the name Seianus was a derivative from this, the son having been adopted into the Aelian gens.

Apicio: Apicius was a man in the time of the republic notorious for luxury and debauchery; the person here alluded to was one Marcus Cavius, who was called Apicius, from his resemblance to the other.

veno: dative; only here used after dare; cf. done dare.

parando regno: Intr. 35 f.

2. praefecturae: the praefectus praetorio was at first inferior in dignity to the praefectus urbi, but, as is well known, he came in later time into possession of a power hardly less than that of the emperor himself; the beginning of this advance was made by Sejanus.

una in castra: this camp lay outside of the city (procul) to the northeast, but when the larger circuit of walls was built by Aurelian, they were made to embrace the camp. The ruins of it still remain. The construction of this fortress, like that of the Tower of London by William the Conqueror, was the commencement of an authority founded upon military power.

3. recens perdomitae: B.C. 19, after a war of seven years against the Cantabrians and Asturians.

Iuba rex: Juba, king of Numidia, fought against Caesar, and killed himself after the battle of Thapsus. Numidia was annexed by Augustus to the province of Africa, and Juba, son of the former king, received Mauretania in recompense, B.C. 25. At his death, A.D. 23, his son Ptolemæus succeeded (23. 1). His kingdom was made into two provinces by Caligula, A.D. 40.

4. duas legiones: see III. 9. 1 n. initio ab Suriae: such anastrophe, not found in earlier prose writers, is rare in Tacitus, except in the case of dissyllabic prepositions, where it is frequent even without an adjective or genitive following.

ingenti . . . sinu: stretching up to the Albanian and Iberian frontier. accolis, etc.: an ablative absolute of cause.

Hiberno Albanoque: for these nations; see VI. 32 and 33.

5. Rhoemetalces: see III. 38. 4. Thrace, like Mauretania, was still independent.

duae in Pannonia: regularly three (I. 16. 2), but one had been despatched to Africa.

Moesia: this province, on the lower course of the Danube, was organized by Augustus, B.C. 29.

apud Delmatiam: the province formerly known as Illyricum, which term now embraced a group of provinces; see I. 5. 5 n.

8. Lygdum: a favorite slave of Drusus (10. 2), and probably praegustator, like the eunuch Halotus, who administered poison to Claudius (XII. 66. 5; cf. Suet. Clau. 44).

octo post annos: A.D. 31, after the fall of Sejanus, when the crime was divulged by Apicata, the divorced wife of Sejanus. Pistner (L. Aelius Sejanus, p. 49) raises some plausible doubts as to the probability that Apicata could have known of the crime, but the testimony of the ancients appears quite unanimous on the subject.

ignarum = ignotum; cf. gnarum, I. 5. 4 n.

4. e complexu rei publicae: figurative, as if the republic were a near friend.

5. nepotum: there were three sons of Germanicus (Nero, Drusus, and Gaius), and two of Drusus (Tiberius and Germanicus).

vergentem aetatem, declining years.

6. quibus apprensus, taking their hands.

patruo: i.e. Drusus.

8. Nero et Druse: the younger son Gaius (afterwards the emperor Caligula) was now only eleven years of age.

9. gloria: i.e. resting upon his personal dignity, and proceeding from sympathy (misericordia).

de reddenda, etc.: that it was a matter of serious concern, what would become of the state after his death, is shown by the history of his successor Caligula. It is not impossible that he considered the possibility of devising some plan which should avoid the rule of a boy.

2. eadem, etc.: II. 83.

posterior adulatio: trying to outdo those who have gone before.

tantummodo velamento, quod pontifex oculos a funere arceret,—the emperor being pontifex maximus.

2. favoris: i.e. with the people, — popularity.

mater . . . tegens: Intr. 35 9; the present and future participles are very rare in this idiom; cf. I. 36. 2; IV. 34. 2; connected by et to principium.

perniciem: for the young men, Nero and Drusus.

3. non dubia successio: as the children of Drusus were still very young, those of Germanicus would be preferred in the succession.

5. exagitare, excite; used with both persons and feelings—excite the hatred of Augusta and Livia by the consciousness of crime; cf. Sall. Cat. 38; Cic. Att. III. 7. 2.

inhiare . . . arguerent: it is hard to believe that Agrippina actually engaged in plots against the emperor,—for this there could be no inducement, considering his great age, the maturity of her sons, and the infancy of those of Drusus; the succession would seem to have been secured to Nero, and this was confirmed by the acts of the emperor himself. Nevertheless, with her restless and ambitious temper, and his suspicious disposition, it would be easy for misunderstanding and hard feeling to arise between them.

6. atque haec, etc.: this passage is variously interpreted, and is probably corrupt. Furneaux makes haec relate to Livia (the younger), which is hardly possible, seeing that the last person mentioned is Agrippina; it is clear, too, that Livia was a mere tool, and that it was Sejanus, not she, who made use of the callidi criminatores. Madvig corrects to alitque; Orelli, more probably, construes haec as a neuter plural, governed by some such word as est. Both take Prisca as subject of efficiebat; but it is the agency of Postumus, not of Prisca, that is in question, and quia . . . valida is a good explanation of peridoneum, while quia . . . efficiebat is not. It seems best to insert a comma after valida (with which erat is to be understood), and to regard the sentence as an anacoluthon,—the subject of efficiebat being the same as that of egit understood (i.e. Sejanus), but the two verbs having no grammatical connection with one another. Nipperdey brackets the words inter . . . et, on the ground that Livia could not properly be called the grandmother of Agrippina, and that Postumus, as inter intimos of the empress, would not need to make Prisca his tool. This is a very probable hypothesis,—indeed, it is quite impossible, to explain the phrase satisfactorily, while without it the sentence is reasonably clear,—but it is hard to conceive of any way in which these words could have crept into the text.

Iulium Postumum, per adulterium Mutiliae Priscæ inter intimos aviaæ et consiliis suis peridoneum, quia Prisca in animo Augustæ valida, anum suapte natura potentiaæ anxiam insociabilem nurui efficiebat. Agrippinae quo- 7 que proximi illiciebantur pravis sermonibus tumidos spiritus perstimulare.

inter intimos, intimate with, referring to Postumus. anxiam, solicitous for.

7. Agrippinae: best taken as dative.

tumidos spiritus: i.e. of Agrippina.

5. Aelius Lamia: vir antiquissimi moris et priscam gravitatem semper humanitate temperans (Vell. Pat. II. 116). Horace (Ep. I. 14. 6) speaks of Lamiae pietas; he also addresses to him Odes I. 26 and III. 17. For his death, see VI. 27. 2. For Apronius, see III. 21. 1.

per domos, in private homes.

Oscum ludicrum: a kind of low farce, in the Oscan dialect, the speech of Campania and central Italy, sufficiently like the Latin to be understood by the Romans,—just as the Scotch dialect is understood upon our stage. By levissimae oblectationis is meant the frivolous amusement of the populace; once (quondam) this was the worst that could be said of it.

pulsi, etc.: they were allowed to return by Caligula (Dio, LIX. 2).

15. alterum: his name was Germanicus, and his age four.

2. Rhodii secessus: see I. 4. 4 n.

3. novo homini: i.e. none of his ancestors had held curule office.

censorium funus: a magnificent public funeral. The term is explained by some as being such a funeral as was given to censors, whose office was the first in dignity and honor; by others, as being under the direction of the censors, — the magistrates who had the charge of public contracts. The first explanation seems the most reasonable.

forum Augusti: a public square opened by Augustus to the northeast of the Forum Romanum, and adorned with the statues of distinguished generals; portions of its heavy walls, and the portico of the Temple of Mars Ultor, situated in it, are still to be seen; other fora were made by other emperors to the north and south of it.

procurator: the procurator was the special agent of the emperor, especially in matters which related to the fiscus, or privy purse (I. 80. 2). There was one in every province; and in the smallest provinces, like Judaea and Alpes Maritimae, he was the sole governor. Standing in a specially close relation to the emperor, it might have been expected that he would be, like the slaves of the emperor, subject to his private jurisdiction.

nova lege: i.e. in regard to filling this priesthood. The flamen dialis must be a patrician whose parents had been married by the peculiarly patrician rite of confarreatio; he must himself have been married by the same rite to a woman of the same qualifications, and his wife, the flaminica, had also certain official duties. As the patrician body had now become much reduced in numbers, and the antique ceremony of confarreatio had almost gone out of use, it was very difficult to find qualified candidates. The selection was made by the pontifex maximus, who had authority to take (capere) a qualified person even against his will.

3. eius rei: i.e. the omission of confarreatio.

penes: used with things only here, Hist. I. 57, and Hor. A. P. 71; Intr. 35 i.

difficultates: not only in the cumbersome ceremonial, but in the process of divorce (diffareatio), equally cumbersome and difficult; and the Romans of this age did not fancy having any obstacles in the way of divorce.

e iure patrio: every paterfamilias had through life his sons and unmarried daughters under his absolute authority (patria potestas), which included the power of life and death (ius vitae necisque). The son might be freed from this authority by being emancipated, or by being adopted into another family; also the flamen dialis and the vestal virgins were sub iuris. The authority of the paterfamilias extended also to his wife, who was in loco filiae, but in her case it was called manus instead of potestas; therefore quae in manum flaminis conveniret was his wife, the flaminica. The disqualifications attending the office would be a second reason (besides the disuse of confarreatio) for the want of candidates for the office; on this view it connects this clause with the causal ablative absolute ommissa, etc. A still more influential cause must have been the numerous and vexatious petty requirements which attended the office (III. 58. 1 n.); and Nipperdey thinks that some words describing these must have dropped out (Gell. X. 15).

flamonium: this is attested by inscriptions to be the correct form, instead of flaminium.

4. lege: leges, passed by the people in comitia, were still adopted, although this form of legislation was being rapidly superseded by senatus consulta and edicts of the emperor.

Augustus: e.g. with regard to absence from the city (III. 71. 3).

5. tractatis religionibus, after taking into consideration all religious aspects.

flaminica Dialis, etc.: a woman married by confarreatio or coemptio came as a matter of course into the manus of her husband; but by the third form of marriage (usus) it was possible to avoid this, and the marriage without manus had now become the usual form. At the same time, while the woman escaped the manus of her husband, the potestas of her father was so far relaxed that she was practically her own mistress. Maine describes the relation at this period "as amounting in law to little more than a temporary deposit of the woman by her family" (Anr.

 been no indication thus far of any unfriendly feeling towards the sons of Germanicus, and on the present occasion the remarks of Tiberius to the senate were wise and sagacious.
 We see here, however, the beginnings of that jealous suspicion of Agrippina which may have been well founded, and which, at any rate, poisoned the aged emperor's mind during the last years of her life. As to the immediate occasion, subverterent, abolish.

custodes eorum: see Intr. 16. To disappoint the accusers of their share of the confiscated property, and thus put an end to their trade, would be to abolish the machinery for the punishment of crimes.

5. publico exitio: dative.

§1. 2. quae fama, etc.: this judgment as to the emperor's disposition is significant; he always acted with deliberation (neque socordia peccabat), and it was easy to note his gratification when he could temper justice with mercy (quotiens subveniret: sc. reo); but he was not deterred from severe measures by their unpopularity, to which the applause of his flatterers did not blind him (nec occultum est, etc.).

4. eluctantium, struggling forth; i.e. uttered slowly and with difficulty.

5. cum Italia arceretur: the penalty of relegatio (III. 17. 8 n.)

was on the point of being voted, when he substituted deportatio in insulam, a punishment which took the place (with enhanced severity) of aquae et ignis interdictio. It required residence in a specified place, generally an island, and entailed loss of citizenship (Momm- sen, Röm. Staatsrecht, III. 140).

Romanorum ultimum : Suetonius (Tib. 61) says, quod Brutum Cassiumque ultimos Romanorum dixisset. This term was, however, applied to Cassius by Brutus himself, and was probably taken up by Cordus. This sole example of the condemnation of a literary work by Tiberius is defended by Stahr on the ground that to eulogize Brutus and Cassius because of their assassination of Caesar was an open declaration that the act might rightfully be repeated.

2. Satrius Secundus : the one who afterwards betrayed the plot of Sejanus to Antonia (VI. 47. 2).

Seiani clientes : according to Seneca (Cons. ad Marc. 22. 4), Sejanus was enraged, quod [Cordus] tacitus ferre non potuerat Seianum in cervices nostras ne imponi quidem, sed escendere (see also III. 72. 5 n.).

7. Marci Ciceronis, etc.: this book was called Laus Catonis (A. Gell. XIII. 19), or simply Cato (Cic. ad Att. XIII. 46); Caesar replied in a work called Anticato (A. Gell. IV. 16), of which Cicero says (ad Att. XII. 40), colligit vitia Catonis, sed cum maximis laudibus meis.

8. Antonii epistulae, etc.: some extracts from these letters are given by Suetonius (Oct. 7, 16, 63, 69). Of these speeches of Brutus nothing is known. Bibaculus was a poet, described by Horace (Sat. II. 5. 40) as of an inflated style. The vulgar abuse of Caesar in the poems of Catullus (11 and 29) is still extant.

sprete, if you despise them.

agnita, recognised = confessed.

85. 2. solutum, free.

3. num: when used, as here, to introduce the first member of a double question, num has the same force as in single questions; i.e. the question introduced by num is negated, that introduced by an is asserted, — is it not rather? etc.

5. vitam abstinentia finivit: this is described by Seneca, Consolatio ad Marciam, 22. 6 (Marcia was his daughter, whom he kept in ignorance of his design): in cubiculum se quasi gustaturus contulit et dimissis pueris quaedam per fenestram, ut videretur edisse, proiecit. A cena deinde, quasi iam satis in cubiculo edisset, abstinuit. Altero quoque die et tertio idem fecit. Quartus ipsa infirmitate corporis faciebat indicium. Complexus itaque te: "Carissima," inquit, "filia, et hoc unum tota celata vita, iter mortis ingressus sum, et iam medium fere teneo. Revocare me nec debes nec potes." Atque ita iussit lumen omne praecludi et se in tenebras condidit. His daughter afterwards published his writings.

6. auctoritas, influence.

36. continuus, uninterrupted; i.e. even by this solemn festival. feriarum Latinarum: a movable festival (feriae conceptivae), appointed directly after the new consuls entered upon their office, and generally celebrated in the spring. It was held upon the Alban Mount, at this period for four days.

praefectum urbis: under the kings and in the early republic the chief magistrate appointed a praefectus urbis to administer in his absence, whenever he was absent from the city for more than one day. After the establishment of the office of praetor, that of praefect was no longer necessary, except on the occasion of the Latin Festival, which all magistrates were required to attend. The office became, therefore, a mere form, being filled by young men below the senatorial age, and with the understanding that no business of importance should be brought before them; hence the irregularity of this prosecution. This officer was distinguished from the regular city praefect by the title praefectus urbi feriarum Latinarum causa.

auspicandi: the duty of every magistrate on assuming office. The auspices were regularly taken upon the Arx, or northern summit of the Capitoline; the tribunal employed on this occasion was that which he was entitled to use by virtue of his office.

increpitum: perhaps on the ground of this irregularity; but Tiadversum cives Romanos. Et amisere libertatem quam tur, comperto ficta in eum crimina per Vibium Serenum.

 Neque tamen id Sereno noxae fuit, quem odium publi-5 cum tutiorem faciebat. Nam ut quis destrictior accusa-tor, velut sacrosanctus erat: leves, ignobiles poenis adficiabantur.

Per idem tempus Hispania ulterior missis ad senatum 87 legatis oravit ut exemplo Asiae delubrum Tiberio matrique eius exstrueret. Qua occasione Caesar, validus 2 alioqui spernendis honoribus et respondendum ratus iis quorum rumore arguebatur in ambitionem flexisse, huiusce modi orationem coepit: 'Scio, patres conscripti, 3 constantiam meam a plerisque desideratam, quod Asiae civitatibus nuper idem istud petentibus non sim adver-satus. Ergo et prioris silentii defensionem et quid in futurum statuerim, simul aperiā. Cum divus Augus- 4 berius had not yet wholly lost his disposition to check the excesses of the delators.

2. Cyzicenis: they had failed to complete a chapel (ἱερόν), which they had commenced to Augustus, and had imprisoned some Romans (Dio, LVII. 24).

3. bello Mithridatis: this is the siege of Cyzicus mentioned by Cicero in his oration for the Manilian law (8. 20); they had forfeited their privileges once before, in the reign of Augustus, but they had been afterwards restored.

4. Vibium Serenum: of course, the son (28. 1).

5. destrictior: the figure is taken from a drawn sword, — more active or vindictive; cf. Plin. Epp. IX. 21. 4, destruere minatus.

87. exemplo Asiae: see 15. 4; on this occasion the name of the senate was added to those of Tiberius and his mother. Furneaux suggests that the occasion was gratitude for the punishment of Serenus (30).

2. ambitionem, vain-glory.

3. desideratam, missed, on the earlier occasion.

placitum, approved.

5. effigie numinum, a statue with divine attributes; the genitive defines the class of statues meant; cf. I. 10. 5.

88. officia: Tacitus uses fungor with the accusative only here and III. 2. 1, — in each case quoting from Tiberius, who appears to have affected an archaic style; cf. App. I. (note on III. 2. 1).

ut = dammodo: in this sense generally with a correlative ita. All the merits here claimed must certainly be conceded to him up to this time; later his natural severity of disposition degenerated into unreasoning cruelty.

melius: see I. 43. 1 n.

speraverit: contrasted with diffideret above.

6. statim: i.e., without effort. contemptu famae: but in the words, cum laude, etc., there is a noble expression of desire for a more genuine and worthy fame than the popular view of deification.

89. muliebri: relating to Livia; cf. I. 33. 6.

codicillos, a memorial.

moris . . . adire: Caesar introduced this practice (Plut. Caes. 17), and Augustus even conversed with his wife Livia on important subjects in writing, ne plus minusve loqueretur ex tempore (Suet. Oct. 84).

6 Non enim exuere imposita munia: satis aestimare firmari domum adversum iniquas Agrippinae offensiones, idque liberorum causa; nam sibi multum superque vitae fore, quod tali cum principe explevisset.

40 Ad ea Tiberius laudata pietate Seiani suisque in eum beneficiis modice percursis, cum tempus tamquam ad integram consultationem petivisset, adiunxit: ceteris mortalibus in eo stare consilia, quid sibi conducere putent; principum diversam esse sortem, quibus praecipua rerum ad famam derigenda. Ideo se non illuc decurrere, quod promptum rescriptu, posse ipsam Liviam statuere nubendum post Drusum an in penatibus isdem tolerandum haberet; esse illi matrem et aviam, propiora consilia. Simplicius acturum, de inimicitiis primum Agrippinae, quas longe acrius arsuras si matrimonium Liviae velut in partes domum Caesarum distraxisset. matrem, aviam: see Intr. p. xxix., no. 19.

3. Agrippinae: see 39. 6; it will be noticed that fear of Agrippina's ambition is given as a leading motive of Tiberius at this period. The rivalry of her family (that of Germanicus) with that of Drusus is represented as already strong; the marriage of Livia would give birth to a third faction.

4. sic quoque, even as things were.

nepotes suos: the children of Germanicus and of Drusus.

surum in eodem ordine putas, et Liviam, quae Gaio Caesari, mox Druso nupta fuerit, ea mente acturam ut cum equite Romano senescat. At enim Augustus filiam suam equiti Romano tradere meditatus est: mirum hercule, si cum in omnis curas distraheretur, immensumque attolli provideret quem coniunctione tali super alios extulisset, C. Proculeium et quosdam in sermonibus habuit insigni tranquillitate vitae, nullis rei publicae negotiis permixtos. Sed si dubitatione Augusti movemur, quanto validius est quod Marco Agrippae, mox mihi collocavit? Atque ego haec pro amicitia non occultavi: ceterum neque tuis neque Liviae destinatis adversabor. 5. in eodem ordine: i.e. the equestrian order, to which Sejanus belonged. Membership of this order was inconsistent with a political career; but Sejanus must have entered the senatorial order when he held the consulship, A.D. 31.

7. istum locum: the equestrian order.

patris mei amicitias: such as Agrippa, Maecenas, and Proculeius, mentioned below.

lic life, and would be elevated by their marriage.

immensum: adverbial, qualifying attolli.

C. Proculeium: of whom Horace speaks (Od. II. 2. 5): — Vivet extento Proculeius aevo, | Notus in fratres animi paterni.

insigni . . . permixtos: these men lived modestly and humbly, in contrast to Sejanus.

9. quanto validius, etc.: his final decision, after deliberation, should weigh more than his hesitation. Agrippa was, to be sure, of low birth, but he had attained senatorial rank.

10. pro amicitia, as our friendship demands.

41. rursum, in reply, in a second letter.

altius: i.e. the intimation that he was looked upon as already too powerful.

suspicionum: Intr. 35 d.

2. assiduos coetus: relates to qui . . . consulunt in the last chapter: by excluding the nobles from his house he would be guilty of an affront, by receiving them he would incur more and more suspicion.

3. aditus: sc. ad principem.

per milites: soldiers called speculatores (see Suet. Calig. 44) were employed as couriers in the army, although the regular letter-carriers (labellarii) of the imperial post were ordinarily slaves or freedmen. Hirschfeld, Untersuchungen, p. 105. tramissurum, let slip through his hands.

adempta . . . turba: the crowd of dependents and parasites who every morning attended the hall of the great man.

4. praecipua . . . agitari: i.e. there would be leisure to attend to really important concerns.

42. Votieno Montano: an orator of some distinction, — rarissimi, celebris ingenii viro, cognitio cunctantem iam Tiberium perpulit ut vitandos crederet patrum coetus vocesque, quae plerumque verae et graves coram ingerebantur. Nam postulato Votieno ob contumelias in Caesarem dictas, testis Aemilius e militaribus viris dum studio probandi cuncta refert et quamquam inter obstrepentes magna asseveratione nititur, audivit Tiberius probra quis per occultum lacerabatur, adeoque percussus est ut se vel statim vel in cognitione purgaturum clamitaret precibusque proximorum, adulatione omnium aegre componeret animum. Et Votienus quidem maiestatis poenis adfectus est. Caesar obiectam sibi adversus reos inclementiam eo pervicacius amplexus Aquiliam adulterii delatam cum Vario Ligure, quamquam Lentulus Gaetulicus consul designatus lege Iulia damnasset, exsilio punivit Apidiumque Merulam, quod in acta divi Augusti non iuraverat, albo senatorio erasit.

etiam si non emendatissimi ingenii (Sen. Contr. IX. 5. 15).

cunctantem iam: he had already brought the emperor to consider the project, but he still hesitated.

voce, abusive language.

coram, in his presence, contrasted with per occultum below.

2. obstrepentes: i.e. the senators, in the effort to drown his voice, which he raised above the din (magna asseveratione); cf. obturabant, VI. 24. 4.

lacerabatur: the imperfect shows that it is not the specific assaults of Votienus that excited him, but the knowledge that he was popularly the object of attacks of this nature. See Intr. 14.

cognitione, the trial; at present it was only a preliminary examination.

3. eo pervicacius amplexus: driven by these indignities to accept with insistence the character of severity which had been attributed to him.

damnasset: i.e. had given his sententia to this effect, having been called upon first, as consul designatus; so with punivit.

exsilio: this punishment entailed the loss of citizenship and property; while the Lex Iulia inflicted temporary exile, with loss of only a part of the property (II. 50. 5 n.).

in . . . iuraverat: see I. 72. 2.

48. de iure templi: i.e. the jurisdiction over it. The temple was at Limnae, on the confines of gestani aedem Veneris montem apud Erycum, vetustate

Messenia and Laconia. It will be remembered that Messenia was for several hundred years subject to the Lacedaemonians, so that questions of boundary and jurisdiction might easily arise.

Macedonis Philippi: the father of Alexander the Great.

2. divisionem Peloponnesi: at the Dorian conquest of the Peloponnesus, the so-called Return of the Heraclidae, at the traditional date of B.C. 1104. At this time the three great Dorian states of Argos, Sparta, and Messene were founded.

Denthaliatem agrum: probably the name of the district in which the temple was situated. A late writer, Stephanus Byzantius, speaks of certain Δενθάλιαι, who are perhaps the same.

3. locupletiores, more reliable. potentia, by an arbitrary act of power.

4. regis Antigoni: Antigonus Doson; he invaded the Peloponnesus, B.C. 223, and died two years later.

imperatoris Mummii: the Roman commander who captured Corinth, B.C. 146.

5. permissio . . . arbitrio: i.e. they had been taken as umpires. An inscription containing their judgment has been discovered, from which it appears that the vote in favor of the Messenian claim was 584 to 16. From this Furneaux infers "that the case was clear, and that the subsequent counter-decision was probably an instance in which Antonius had traded on the memoranda of Caesar." The date was probably B.C. 135.

Atidium Geminum: perhaps B.C. 29 (Nipperdey).

6. Segestani: the people of Segesta, in Sicily, near Mount Eryx. The worship of Venus on this mountain was believed to have been founded by Æneas (Verg. Aen. V. 759) in honor of his brother Eryx, son of Venus and Butes. The form Erycum is found in Cicero (Terr. Act. II., II. 8. 22; 47. 115).

dilapsam, restaurari postulavere, nota memorantes de origine eius et laeta Tiberio. Suscepit curam libens ut consanguineus. Tunc tractatae Massiliensium preces 7 probatumque P. Rutilii exemplum; namque eum legibus pulsum civem sibi Zmyrnaei addiderant. Quo iure 8 Vulcatius Moschus exsul in Massilienses receptus bona sua rei publicae eorum ut patriae reliquerat.

Obiere eo anno viri nobiles Cn. Lentulus et L. Domitius. Lentulo super consulatum et triumphalia de Getis gloriae fuerat bene tolerata paupertas, dein magnae opes innocenter partae et modeste habitae. Domitium decoravit pater civili bello maris potens, donec Antonii partibus, mox Caesaris misceretur. Avus Pharsalica acie pro optimatibus ceciderat. Ipse delectus, 3 cui minor Antonia, Octavia genita, in matrimonium laeta Tiberio: because the Julian race, to which he belonged by adoption, professed to be descended from Iulus, son of Æneas; this made him consanguineus.

7. preces: explained by what follows. The will of Moschus had been contested on the ground that he could not thus expatriate himself; but it was sustained by the precedent of Rutilius (III. 66. 2), who, under similar circumstances, had become a citizen of Smyrna.

8. Massilienses: this rich and populous commercial city, although deprived of most of its territory by Julius Caesar, B.C. 49, still, like Rhodes (I. 4. 4 n.), retained its independence, as a civitas foederata (Plin. N. H. III. 4. 35), and possessed therefore the ius exsili, or right of receiving exiled Roman citizens.

44. Cn. Lentulus: see I. 27. 1. The Getæ, whom he subdued, were a Thracian people residing upon both banks of the Danube, probably identical with the Dacians.

L. Domitius: grandfather of the emperor Nero. His grandfather, Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus, fell at Pharsalus on the side of Pompey (pro optimatibus); he was, says Suetonius (Nero, 2), vir neque satis constans et ingenio truci, and adds that he favored treating neutrals as enemies.

gloriae: dative of service.

2. misceretur, joined.

pater civili bello maris potens: this son Gneus, whom Suetonius (Nero, 3) pronounces omnibus gentis suae procul dubio praeferendum, commanded the republican fleet, under Brutus and Cassius, and after the downfall of his party, delivered it up to Antony, receiving therefor pardon, and retaining his property; he afterwards went over to Octavius. He is the Enobarbus of Shakespeare.

3. minor Antonia: Suetonius post . . . adeptus est: he commanded in Germany for six years, ending B.C. 1 (see I. 63. 6).

5. Iulo Antonio: see I. 10. 3. sororis nepotem: his mother was Marcella, daughter of Octavia, the sister of Augustus.

specie studiorum: so Agricola sedem ac magistram studiorum Massiliam habuit, locum Graeca comitate et provinciali parsimonia mistum ac bene compositum (Tac. Agg. 4).

45. Terrestinae: of Termes, west of Numantia.

praetorem, etc.: this being an imperial province, was governed by a legatus pro praetore of the emperor (see Intr. 17 and 18, B. 17).

L. Pisonem: believed to have been the elder of the two brothers to whom Horace addressed the epistle known as Ars Poetica: O maior iuvenum, etc.

ripuit, with the construction of erripere.

5. pecunias e publico: i.e. due from the town of Termes.

interceptas, withheld; he, as governor, exacted the tribute with excessive rigor.

46. Lentulo Gaetulico: he afterwards conspired against Caligula, and was put to death by him.

Poppaeo Sabino: see I. 80. 1.

montium editis: cf. subiecta vallium, I. 65. 1; these were in the Hemus range, north of the cultivated parts of Thrace.

incultu: a modal ablative, — in barbarism. Nipperdey. See App. I.

2. pati dilectus, etc.: the change from their native license to the strictness of the Roman administration was too great.

ne regibus quidem, etc.: cf.
Tac. Germ. 7; nec regibus infinita aut libera potestas, et duces exemplo potius quam imperio . . . praesunt.

suos duces: so as not to form a part of the Roman army, like the auxiliaries, who served under Roman praefecti, but, like the later foederati, as an independent, national force.

3. disiecti, etc.: this was the Roman policy, to prevent local or national sympathies in the several armies; but it had not been enforced in this turbulent region.

diversas, distant: cf. the complaints of the Pannonian legions
(I. 17. 5), trahi diversas in terras.

4. memoraturos: this form, since Livy, often expresses purpose.

haec: their present condition of order and obedience.

8. nisi quod: cf. Tac. Agr. 6. silentii impatientiam: Quintilian (XII. 11. 3) adds that it was said of him, malle eum deficere quam desinere.

58. invidiam et preces: mingled entreaties and reproaches.
habilem, marriageable.

Germanici: there is before this word a gap of about fourteen letters, probably to be filled by something in the sense of qui in memoriam.

2. quantum ex republica: i.e.

her sons being the only surviving heirs to the throne, her husband would occupy a public position.

3. Agrippinae filiae: the younger Agrippina, infamous for her debaucheries.

54. 2. non . . . flecti: her countenance and voice showed unfriendliness, and this she did not change during the interview.

ut erant apposita, just as they were placed upon the table, not tasting them first himself.

ex eo suspicio Agrippinae, et intacta ore servis transmisit. Nec tamen Tiberii vox coram secuta, sed, obversus ad matrem, non mirum ait si quid severius in eam statuisset, a qua veneficii insimularetur. Inde rumor parari exitium, neque id imperatorem palam audere, secretum ad perpetrandum quaeri.

55 Sed Caesar quo famam averteret, adesse frequens senatui legatosque Asiae, ambigentes quam in civitate templum statueretur, pluris per dies audivit. Undecim urbes certabant, pari ambitione, viribus diversae. Neque multum distantia inter se memorabant de vetustate generis, studio in populum Romanum per bella Persi et Aristonici aliorumque regum. Verum Hypaepeni Trallianique Laodicens ac Magnetibus simul transmissi ut parum validi; ne Ilienses quidem, cum parentem urbis Romae Troiam referrent, nisi antiquitatis gloria pollebant. Paulum addubitatum, quod Halicarnasii mille et ducentos per annos nullo motu terrae nutavisse sedes

3. coram, addressed to her.
statuisset, should determine, representing the future perfect of direct address.

4. secretum, a secret opportunity.
55. famam: of his designs against Agrippina.

templum: see 15. 4.
audivit: joined by a peculiar combination with the historical infinitive adesse.

2. Persi: this form of this genitive (as if from Perseus) is found also in Sallust. Perseus, king of Macedonia, was subdued by the Romans in the battle of Pydna, B.C. 168.

Aristonici: Aristonicus, natural son of Eumenes II., king of Pergamus, revolted after the death of Attalus III., and attempted to set aside the provisions of his will, which bequeathed his dominions to the Roman people. He was captured and sent to Rome, where he was beheaded, B.C. 129.

3. Hypaepeni, etc.: Hypaepa was a town on the southern slope of Mt. Tmolus; Tralles, Laodicea, and Magnesia had all been considerable towns, but had suffered from earthquakes (Strabo, XII. 579); the Magnesia mentioned by Strabo is the one τὰς Χαλύκας, from which it is probable that that is the one here referred to.

simul: used here as a preposition, governing the ablative (Intr. 35 1); cf. III. 64. 3.

transmissi, passed over.

4. Ilienses: see II. 54. 3 n.

5. Halicarnasii: Halicarnassus, in Caria, was the most important of the Dorian cities of Asia Minor.

eo ipso, etc.: what they gave as the ground of their claim was in reality decisive against it.

Ephesii Milesiique: see III. 61. 1, and 63. 5.

civitates: sic suas; i.e. these cults had occupation of the cities, so that they would obscure any new one.

7. Sardonios: they too had suffered from an earthquake (II. 47. 3), but had probably been restored.

Zmyrnaeos: see III. 63. 4.

Etruriae: in the old days of its power.

Atye rege: Atya, a traditional king of Lydia, son of Hercules and Omphale.

novas . . . sedes: Herodotus also tells this story (I. 94): ἀναΐσθαι δὲ Ὀμβρικοῦς, ἐνθα σφίτας ἐνδρῶσθαι πόλιν καὶ οἰκίειν τὴν μέχρι τοῦδε. The story, however, has little historical value; the Etruscans probably entered Italy from the north.

auctam adhuc, further increased, cui: properly only a part of Greece.

Pelope: Pelops, from whom the Peloponnesus was named, was believed to have been son of Tantalus, a king of Lydia.

8. litteras imperatorum: i.e. Roman generals of the republic.

bello Macedonum: the war with Perseus (see 55. 2 n.).

ubertatem fluminum: the gold sands of the River Pactolus are proverbial, although it yielded no gold at this time.

circum: an adverb, but with adjectival force; cf. superne, II. 20. 3 n.

56. et ipse: i.e. as well as Tantalus.

Theseus: he was asserted to zonum condidisset, transcendere ad ea, quis maxime fidebant, in populum Romanum officiis, missa navali copia non modo externa ad bella, sed quae in Italia tolerabantur; seque primos templum urbis Romae stauisse, M.  3 bus misisse. Ita rogati sententiam patres Zmyrnaeos praetulere. Censuitque Vibius Marsus, ut M'. Lepido, cui ea provincia obvenerat, super numerum legaretur qui templi curam susciperet. Et quia Lepidus ipse deligere per modestiam abnuebat, Valerius Naso e praetoriis sorte missus est.

57 Inter quae diu meditato prolatoque saepius consilio tandem Caesar in Campaniam abscessit, specie dedicandi templa apud Capuam Iovi, apud Nolam Augusto, sed have been son, not of Ægeus, but of Poseidon.

officiis: attracted to the case of quis.

quae in Italia tolerabantur: i.e. the Social War, B.C. 90.

M. Porcio: Marcus Porcius Cato was consul, B.C. 195, five years before Antiochus the Great, who ruled over all Western Asia (validis per Asiam regibus), was defeated at Magnesia. Carthage was not destroyed until 146. The designation of a year by the name of one consul alone is unusual; probably it is done because of Cato's fame. This mode of recognizing the growing greatness of Rome is an interesting illustration of the religious thought of the ancients.

2. gravissimo in discrimine: B.C. 84, during the war against Mithridates.

3. ea provincia: Lepidus is shown also by an inscription to have been proconsul of Asia.

super numerum, etc.: i.e. an additional legatus, to take charge of the temple; the regular number of legati for the proconsul of a senatorial province of the highest grade, was three, selected by himself, usually from men of consular dignity.

57. Nolam: the place of Augustus' death; see I. 9. 1.

 pillo vertex, ulcerosa facies ac plerumque medicaminibus interstincta; et Rhodi secreto vitare coetus, recondere voluptates insuerat. Traditur etiam matris impotentia extrusum, quam dominationis sociam aspernabatur neque depellere poterat, cum dominationem ipsam donum eius accepisset. Nam dubitaverat Augustus Germanicum, sororis nepotem et cunctis laudatum, rei Romanae im-ponere, sed precibus uxoris evictus Tiberio Germanicum, sibi Tiberium ascivit. Idque Augusta exprobrabat, reposcebat. Profectio arto comitatu fuit: unus senator 58

2. causam abscessus: Pistner (L. Aelius Sejanus, Landshut 1880) points out the great advantage which the ruler of the empire would have in being removed from the necessity of attending in person to wearisome details, long-continued sessions of the senate, etc.

eius: Sejanus was overthrown A.D. 31; Tiberius died 37. The reasoning is not valid, as a life of seclusion begun by the influence of Sejanus might have been kept up by inertia or an acquired liking.

permoveor num: in the sense of nescio an, I am inclined to think.

saevitiam . . . occultantem, concealing by seclusion [locis] the cruelty and debauchery of which he was guilty in act; the unusual order emphasizes the bad qualities.

3. corporis habitum, etc.: this description of the old man is in painful contrast with the manly beauty displayed in the statues of Tiberius.

Rhodi: genitive, not locative. There is very little ground for accepting the stories of a debauched life at Rhodes, when he was in the prime of an honorable manhood, however it may have been at Capri, in his debased old age.

4. impotentia, arrogance. Suetonius (Vib. 50 and 51) also gives this as a cause of his retirement.

5. dubitaverat, had considered with hesitation, inclined; a rare use of dubito, but found also in the classical age (cf. Cic. Att. XII. 49. 1).

ascivit: i.e. caused his adoption (see I. 3. 5).

reposcebat: i.e. recognition, as of a debt or obligation.

58. arto, scanty.

Cocceius Nerva: a distinguished jurist, belonging to the school of Labeo (see III. 75. 2 n.), grandfather of the emperor Nerva; his death is related VI. 26. 1. The selection by Tiberius of a man of his unblemished character and free principles as his chief companion, goes a great way to show that his object in secluding himself was not to indulge in private debauchery. The company of those liberalibus studiis praediti indicates that it was his intention to spend the rest of his life in the cultivation of literature.
ex illustribus: see II. 59. 4; this class included also the younger members of senatorial families, who had not yet been admitted to the senate.

2. periti caelestium, astrologers.
3. artis, genuine science, — the prediction that he would never return was true (artis); that he was soon to die was guess-work (falsi).
quam: interrogative.
4. forte, at hap-hazard.
ceterorum: neuter.
egere, they were.
assidens, close to.

59. 2. Speluncae: the name is preserved in the modern village of Sperlonga.

mare Amunclanum, etc.: the town of Fundi lay at the foot of the mountains, at some distance from the coast; Amunclae or Amyclae was on the sea at the nearest point to Fundi. This whole region abounds in natural caverns.

potentiae: the genitive after properis, found in a few other passages, is best taken as objective; although Furneaux considers it a genitive of relation, as with prae-cipuus and primus (VI. 4. 1).

erectum . . . ostenderet: cf.
promptus assensuere, I. 35. 3. The passage shows a degree of indiscretion on the part of Nero which, by itself, would probably have created no suspicion, but which, taken in connection with his mother's behavior (cf. 54. 3), served to alienate the emperor and hasten the catastrophe.

ausurum: the absolute use of audeo is frequent in Tacitus; cf.
I. 13. 2.

anxiety.

He was adopted into the Licinian gens, and was father of the Piso Licinianus who was adopted by Galba, and lost his life directly after. Calpurnius was son of that Piso who was accused of having poisoned Germanicus; he bore at first his father's name, Gnaeus (see III. 17. 8).

2. Fidenam : the name is usually plural, Fidenae. It is an ancient Etruscan city upon the Tiber, about five miles northeast of Rome.

per solidum, on solid ground.

municipali ambitione : with the object of recommending himself to office. It was purely a money-making affair.

3. imperitante . . . habiti : see I. 54. 4. Such shows were rare in Rome during this economical and unostentatious reign.

secus, sex ; usually construed as an adverbial accusative.

effunditur, falls apart.

4. ut tali sorte : considering the sadness of their fate.

5. noscebant, made efforts to recognise ; cf. Plin. Ep. VI. 20. 14.

7. nequedum, for not yet.

quadringentorum milium: an extension to adjectives of the familiar rule of plus, minus, and amplius; cf. Plin. Ep. X. 79. 3, minor triginta annorum. This sum (-$20,000) was the equestrian census.

3. ut mons Caelius, etc.: according to Suetonius (Tib. 48) it was Tiberius himself who ordered the change of name. But the change does not appear to have been made.

4. Claudia Quintae: a lady (according to some, a vestal virgin) who with her own hand drew the ship containing the sacred stone of Cybele, the mother of the gods, when this cult was introduced into Rome, B.C. 204; the story was that this marvel was a testimony to her chastity, which had been suspected. Tiberius, too, belonged to this distinguished Claudian gens.

5. augendam caerimoniam: by changing the name; cf. III. 61. 3.

65. talis silvae: of oak.

Caele Vibenna: this half-mythical personage is placed at various epochs and in various connections. The only certainty we can extract from the story is the fact of an Etruscan immigration at some time, which settled in the vicus Tuscus, west of the Forum, and possibly on the Caelian mount; also the rule of an Etruscan dynasty of kings.

praemio: for the condemnation of Claudia and her paramour.

2. P. Dolabellam: see 23. 2 and following.

custode: the guards stationed on the island.

3. caeli temperies, etc.: a mountain in the north to protect from the winter gales; a slope in the west, open to the summer breezes. Probably Tacitus had never visited the island, as the mountain is at its western extremity, and the mountains back of Baiæ and Cumæ, which are to the north, are too distant to be very efficient protection. The climate is, however, mild and equable.

Vesuvius, etc.: the great eruption of 79, which buried Pompeii and Herculaneum, converting all the surrounding country into a desert.
From this time it has continued to be an active volcano.

4. Telebois: a people of Ætolia.

5. nominibus ac molibus: these words appear to refer to the splendid structures and special titles which distinguished these country seats.
One of them is known to have been called Villa Iovis, and it has been thought that the twelve were named for the twelve Olympian deities.

tanto: the words compared are intentus and resolutus, while oc-cultior merely adds a subsidiary thought. Pfitzner. Most editors read either occultiores or occultos.

temeritas, readiness.

quam: object of augere; tur-bat governs eum understood.

6. additus: i.e. a guard, acting as a spy.

ultro, more than this; he passed from espionage to attempts to commit them to disloyal acts.

celeberrimo fori: at the time of day when the forum was most crowded.

ea: this treacherous advice.

obiciebantur: i.e. to the emperor.

68. Titio Sabino: see 18.1. Pliny
(N. H. VIII. 145) and Dio Cassius (LVIII. 1) relate a touching story enim omiserat coniugem liberosque eius percolere, sec-2 tator domi, comes in publico, post tot clientes unus Latinius Latiaris, Porcius Cato, Petilius Rufus, M. Opsius praetura functi aggrediuntur, cupidine consulatus, ad quem non nisi per Seianum aditus; neque Seiani 3 voluntas nisi scelere quaerebatur. Compositum inter ipsos ut Latiaris, qui modico usu Sabinum contingebat, strueret dolum, ceteri testes adessent, deinde accusa-4 tionem inciperent. Igitur Latiaris iacere fortuitos primum sermones, mox laudare constantiam, quod non, ut ceteri, florentis domus amicus adflictam deseruisset; simul honora de Germanico, Agrippinam miserans, dis-5 serebat; et postquam Sabinus, ut sunt molles in ca-lamine mortalium animi, effudit lacrimas, iunxit questus, audentius iam onerat Seianum, saevitiam superbiam 6 spes eius. Ne in Tiberium quidem convicio abstinet; iique sermones, tamquam vetita miscuissent, speciem 7 artae amicitiae fecere. Ac iam ultro Sabinus quaerere Latiare, ventitare domum, dolores suos quasi ad fidis-69 simum deferre. Consultant quos memoravi quonam 2 modo ea plurium auditu acciperentur. Nam loco, in quem coibatur, servanda solitudinis facies; et si pone fores assisterent, metus visus, sonitus, aut forte ortae 3 suspicionis erant. Tectum inter et laquearia tres sena-of the attachment of his dog to him, refusing to leave his dead body, even after it had been cast into the Tiber.

clientes: the application of this term, which properly implied dependence and inferior rank to an 'illustrious' knight, is a significant indication of the growth of the monarchical principle; he was follower of a member of the imperial family.

unus: the only one remaining.

3. modico usu contingebat, had a slight acquaintance with.

5. onerat: i.e. with reproaches; the word is nowhere else used absolutely in this sense.

6. tamquam vetita miscuissent: as if they had been partners in prohibited acts.

69. 3. laquearia: the perforated panels of the ceiling, there tores, haud minus turpi latebra quam detestanda fraude, scse abstrudunt, foraminibus et rimis aurem admovent. Interea Latiaris repertum in publico Sabinum, velut 4 recens cognita narraturus, domum et in cubiculum trahit; praeteritaque et instantia, quorum adfatim copia, ac novos terrores cumulat. Eadem ille et diutius, quanto maesta, ubi semel prorupere, difficilius reticentur. Properata inde accusatio, missisque ad Caesarem 5 litteris ordinem fraudis suumque ipsi dedecus narravere. Non alias magis anxia et pavens civitas, tegens adversum proximos; congressus, colloquia, notae ignotaeque aures vitari; etiam muta atque inanima, tectum et parietes circumspectabantur.

Sed Caesar sollemnia incipientis anni kalendis Ianua- 70 rii epistula precatus, vertit in Sabinum, corruptos quosdam libertorum et petitum se arguens, ultionemque haud obscure poscebat. Nec mora quin decerneretur; 3 et trahebatur damnatus, quantum obducta veste et tres senatores: Cato, Rufus, and Opsius; as, having held magistracies, they were members of the senate.

4. instantia, the present.

ille: Sabinus.

diutius: qualifies disserit understood.

quanto, in proportion as—seeing that.

6. tegens: sc. se; see App. I.

70. sollemnia . . . precatus: the New Year solemnities. As it was a matter of religion that no evil omen should taint the commencement of the year (verbis etiam profanis abstinere mos erat), the arrest of Sabinus (inter sacra et vota) was a peculiarly heinous act.

libertorum: i. e. of Tiberius. There was, therefore, some more specific and serious charge than the mere talk described in the previous chapters.

2. obducta veste, etc.: his toga being thrown over his head, and the rope drawn around his neck with which he was to be strangled in prison. The account here given, as well as that in Dio Cassius, would imply a condemnation by the senate without trial (like a bill of attainder); but the words of Pliny, cum animadverteretur ex causa Neronis Germanici filii in Titum Sabinum et servitia eius, imply more formal deliberation and definite proof. It appears that the emperor, panic-stricken on account of some real or fancied danger (trepidam sibi vitam) allowed himself to depart from his habitual slow and cautious methods. Sabinus was perhaps astrectis faucibus niti poterat clamitans sic incohari anoculos, quo verba acciderent, fuga vastitas, deseri itinera 4 fora. Et quidam regrediebantur ostentabantque se rur-5 sum, id ipsum paventes quod timuissent. Quem enim diem vacuum poena, ubi inter sacra et vota, quo tempore verbis etiam profanis abstinere mos esset, vincla et 6 laqueus inducantur? Non imprudentem Tiberium tan-tam invidiam adisse, sed quaesitum meditatumque, ne quid impedire credatur quo minus novi magistratus, quo modo delubra et altaria, sic carcerem recludant.

 7 Secutae insuper litterae grates agentis, quod hominem infensum rei publicae punivissent, adiecto trepidam sibi vitam, suspectas inimicorum insidias, nullo nominatim compellato; neque tamen dubitabatur in Neronem et Agrippinam intendi.

71 Ni mihi destinatum foret suum quaeque in annum re-ferre, avebat animus antire statimque memorare exitus, quos Latinius atque Opsius ceterique flagitii eius repertores habuere, non modo postquam Gaius Caesar rerum potitus est, sed incolumi Tiberio, qui scelerum ministros ut perverti ab aliis nolebat, ita plerumque satiatus et oblati in candem operam recentibus veteres et prae-guilty, but the manner of his conviction shows how far Tiberius had fallen from his earlier standard of justice.

Seiano, etc.: as if he were a god.

4. quod timuissent: that they had exhibited terror might itself excite suspicion.

5. quem diem, etc.: cf. Suet. Tib.
61, nullus a poena hominum cessavit dies, ne religiosus quidem ac sacer.

6. recludant: as the temples were opened for worship, so the prison was opened to receive victims.

 ticiples is here only used in this way.
 in Neronem: see the words of Pliny in the note above.

71. perverti ab aliis: for Tiberius' defence of the delators as a class necessary for the security of justice, see 30. 4, and Intr. 16.

recentibus: sc. ministris; when he had found new instruments, he threw away the old.

prae-graves: on account of the sense of obligation.

graves adflixit : verum has atque alias sontium poenas <sup>2</sup>

2. trademus : for the overthrow of Latianis see VI. 4; that of the others must belong to the lost portions of the Annals.

3. matertera : Asinius Gallus married Vipsania after her divorce from Tiberius (see I. 12. 6); Agrippina was her half-sister, and therefore aunt to her children.

6. Iulia : daughter of Julia, daughter of Augustus, and therefore sister of Agrippina (see table, Intr. p. xxix).

7. quae, etc. : a general statement, only partly applicable to Julia, who, as has just been said, was banished for crime.

72. Frisii : they occupied the coast of the North Sea, in the modern Friesland, and further south.

2. Drusus : the elder Drusus, who conquered this part of Germany (I. 33. 3 n.).

terga urorum: the hides of these wild buffaloes were taken as a standard (ad formam) instead of the small domestic cattle of the Germans (see 3, and Germ. 5).

3. id: this standard, which would have been a difficult one anywhere.

5. patibulo: see I. 61. 6 n.

6. Flevum (see I. 44. 1 n.): a fort at the mouth of the Jossa Drusiana (II. 8. 1), where it flows into the Lacus Flevo (Zuyder Zee).

73. pro praetore: sc. legatus; not a propraetor, but a legatus of the emperor, with praetorian powers.

utrumque exercitum: i.e. his own army, and the detachments (vexilla) from the upper army.

2. igitur, etc.: he constructs a road with bridges and causeways along this coast, which is here interrupted by numerous estuaries.

graviori: the large and heavily armed force, with its baggage-trains, would require a more solid roadway.

Canninefatem: the Canninefates inhabited the eastern portion of the insula Batavorum, and were, like the Batavians, subject to Rome.

quod peditum: the peditum . . . delectos above.

turmas: the subdivisions of the ala of auxiliary cavalry (sociales); this refers to the Canninefates.

equites legionum: the cavalry, 120 in number, attached to each legion. They were auxiliaries, differently armed from the alarius eques, or regular auxiliary cavalry.

3. leves cohortes: these were auxiliary infantry.

satis validi: refers to the whole force sent, which would have been enough had it been sent in a body (si simul incubuissent); coming a few at a time, — first the ala Canninefas, then the equites legionum, then tres leves cohortes, then duae, and, finally, the whole alarius eques, — they did not succeed in rallying those who had been routed, but were themselves carried away by the panic.

4. quintae legionis: this was a legion of Lower Germany (I. 31. 3). vim legionum: so far only auxiliary troops had been sent.

6. dux Romanus: Apronius. insignes, of the higher ranks (see I. 61. 5).

7. Baduhennae: a genitive — probably the name of some goddess to whom the grove was sacred, like Tamfana (I. 51. 2).

in posterum: sc. diem.

stipendiarii: as a mercenary in the Roman army.

villa: Cruptorig was probably one of those chiefs described in the Ger-

- 74 Clarum inde inter Germanos Frisium nomen, dissimulante Tiberio damna, ne cui bellum permetteret. Neque senatus in eo cura an imperii extrema dehonestarentur; pavor internus occupaverat animos, cui remedium adulatione quaerebatur. Ita quamquam diversis super rebus consulerentur, aram clementiae, aram amicitiae, effigiesque circum Caesaris ac Seiani censuere, crebrisque precibus efflagitabant visendi sui copiam facerent. Non illi tamen in urbem aut propinqua urbi degressi sunt: satis visum omittere insulam et in proximo Campaniae aspici. Eo venire patres eques magna pars plebis, anxii erga Seianum, cuius durior congressus, atque eo per ambitum et societate consiliorum parabatur. Satis constabat auctam ei arrogantiam foedum illud in propatulo servitium spectanti; quippe Romae sueti discursus, et magnitudine urbis incertum quod quisque ad negotium pergat: ibi campo aut litore iacentes nullo discrimine noctem ac diem iuxta gratiam aut fastus ianitorum perpetiebantur, donec id quoque vetitum; et revenere in urbem trepidi quos non sermone, non visu dignatus erat, quidam male alacres quibus infaustae amicitiae gravis exitus imminebat.

many (13 and 14), who lived in a kind of baronial style, surrounded by their armed retainers (comites).

74. ne cui, etc.: it is implied that he was unwilling to entrust the war to any commander who might by its means build up a military reputation which would be dangerous.

3. quamquam, etc.: i.e. they went beyond the business laid before them, to vote these honours. circum, on either side.

5. durior: i.e. than before.

congressus: sc. erat.

societate consiliorum: admitting him to their counsels.

parabatur, it was secured; these were the only means to obtain an audience.

7. alacres, in good spirits.

infaustae: referring to the fall of Sejanus, two years later.

75. Cn. Domitio: described by Suetonius (Nero, 5) as omni parte brari nuptias iussit. In Domitio super vetustatem a generis propinquum Caesaribus sanguinem delegerat; nam is aviam Octaviam et per eam Augustum avunculum praeferibat.

vitae detestabilem. The fruit of this marriage was the emperor Nero.

2. aviam Octaviam: his mother was the elder Antonia (see 44. 3).

LIBRI V. FRAGMENTUM.

Rubellio et Fufio consulibus, quorum utrique Gemi-nus cognomentum erat, Iulia Augusta mortem obiit, aetate extrema, nobilitatis per Claudiam familiam et adoptione Liviorum Iuliorumque clarissimae. Primum ei matrimonium et liberi fuere cum Tiberio Nerone, qui, bello Perusino profugus, pace inter Sex. Pompeium ac triumviros pacta in urbem rediit. Exin Caesar cupidine formae aufert marito, incertum an invitam, adeo properus ut ne spatio quidem ad enitendum dato penatibus suis gravidam induxerit. Nullam posthac subolem edidit, sed sanguini Augusti per coniunctionem Agrippinae et Germanici adnexa communes pronepotes habuit.
 Sanctitate domus priscum ad morem, comis ultra quam

1. Geminus cognomentum: it was a tradition in the early church that the death of Christ was in the consulship of 'the two Gemini'; cf. Lact. Inst. IV. 10, Aug. Civ. Dei, XVIII. 54.

aetate extrema: she was eighty-six years old.

per Claudiam familiam, etc.: her father was a Claudius by birth, adopted into the Livian gens, probably by the distinguished tribune of B.C. 91, Marcus Livius Drusus, whence he bore the name Marcus Livius Drusus Claudianus. The empress, therefore, while of the blood of the patrician Claudii, was a Livia by the adoption of her father; and was afterwards, by the will of her husband (I. 8. 2), adopted into the Julian gens, receiving the name Julia Augusta.

2. bello Perusino: this was a brief episode in the civil wars of the second triumvirate, set on foot by Fulvia, the wife of Mark Antony, and his brother Lucius, against Octavian, B.C. 41. It was ended by the capture of Perusia (the modern Perugia), after which, according to tradition, the soldiers of Octavian exhibited great cruelty. The peace (of short duration) made by the triumvirs with Sextus Pompeius, was two years afterwards, B.C. 39.

3. gravidam: her younger son Drusus, father of Germanicus, was born after her marriage to Caesar; cf. I. 10. 4.

4. pronepotes: see genealogical table, Intr. p. xxix.

5. sanctitate, strict morality. comis, of easy manners.

- antiquis feminis probatum, mater impotens, uxor facilis et cum artibus mariti simulatione filii bene composita.
- 6 Funus eius modicum, testamentum diu irritum fuit. Laudata est pro rostris a Gaio Caesare pronepote, qui
- 2 mox rerum potitus est. At Tiberius, quod supremis in matrem officiis defuisset, nihil mutata amoenitate vitae, magnitudinem negotiorum per litteras excusavit, honoresque memoriae eius ab senatu large decretos quasi per modestiam imminuit, paucis admodum receptis et addito ne caelestis religio decerneretur: sic ipsam
- 2 maluisse. Quin et parte eiusdem epistulae increpuit amicitias muliebres, Fufium consulem oblique perstrin-
- 3 gens. Is gratia Augustae floruerat, aptus alliciendis feminarum animis, dicax idem et Tiberium acerbis facetiis irridere solitus, quarum apud praepotentes in longum memoria est.
- 3 Ceterum ex eo praerupta iam et urgens dominatio;

impotens, imperious.

uxor facilis: she is said to have winked at and assisted her husband's irregularities of life.

cum artibus, etc.: her great-grandson, Gaius (Caligula), used to call her "Ulysses in petticoats" (Ulyxem stolatum, Suet. Cal. 23).

6. irritum: so Suetonius, Tib. 51; her legacies were paid in full by Caligula (Suet. Cal. 16).

rerum potitus est: A.D. 37, at the death of Tiberius.

2. defuisset: toto quidem triennio, quo vivente matre afuit, semel omnino eam, nec amplius quam uno die, paucissimis videt horis: ac mox neque aegrae adesse curavit, defunctamque, et, dum adventus sui spem fuit, complurium dierum mora, corrupto demum et tabido corpore funeralam prohibuit consecrari, quasi id ipsa mandasset (Suet. Tib. 51). Stahl excuses this neglect on the ground of illness, advanced age, and heavy cares: hardly an adequate excuse.

caelestis religio, deification; so Suetonius, prohibuit consecrari. This honor was paid her by her grandson, the emperor Claudius.

2. amicitias: omnes amicitias et familiaritates, etiam quibus ea funeris sui curam moriens demandaverat, intra breve tempus adfluxit (Suet. Tib. 51). Livia was, no doubt, arrogant and exacting, and often interfered injuriously in the administration of affairs.

muliebres, among women (cf. I. 33. 6).

Fufium consulem: Dio (LVIII. 4; see page 345) tells us that in A.D. 31 Tiberius put to death Γάιος Φούφος Γεφυλιος, — probably a corrupted form of this name.

3. acerbis facetiis: cf. IV. 42. 2.

3. ex eo, from this time.

nam incolumi Augusta erat adhuc perfugium, quia Tiberio inveteratum erga matrem obsequium, neque Seianus audebat auctoritati parentis antire: tunc velut frenis exsoluti proruperunt, missaeque in Agrippinam ac Neronem litterae, quas pridem allatas et cohibitas ab Augusta credidit vulgus; haud enim multo post mortem eius recitatae sunt. Verba inerant quaesita asperitate; sed non arma, non rerum novarum studium, amores iuvenum et impudicitiam nepoti obiectabat. In nurum ne id quidem confingere ausus, arrogantiam oris et contumacem animum incusavit, magno senatus pavore ac silentio, donec pauci, quis nulla ex honesto spes (et publica mala singulis in occasionem gratiae trahuntur), ut referretur postulavere, promptissimo Cotta Messalino cum atroci sententia. Sed aliis a primoribus maximeque a magistratibus trepidabatur: quippe Tiberius etsi infense invectus cetera ambigua reliquerat.

Fuit in senatu Iunius Rusticus, componendis patrum actis delectus a Caesare, eoque meditationes eius introspicere creditus. Is fatali quodam motu (neque enim ante specimen constantiae dederat) seu prava sollertia, perfugium: see VI. 51. 6.

2. missae... litterae: that these proceedings had been suppressed by the influence of Livia is hardly consistent with her alleged complicity in the murder of Germanicus (II. 43. 5).

allatas: from Capreae to Rome.

3. non arma, etc.: as Stahr remarks, it is significant that the charge made was not of treason (cf. IV. 59. 5; 70. 7). Velleius (II. 130) says, quam diu pectus eius flagravil incendio, quod ex nuru, quod ex nepote dolere indignari erubescere coactus est!

4. ut referretur: see I. 13. 4 n.

Cotta Messalino: called (VI. 5. 1) sacvissimae cuiusque sententiae auctor; for an illustration, see II. 32. 2.

promptissimo... sententia, readiest to support the motion, and that with severe propositions.

5. cetera: i.e. the next step to take; he had brought charges, but made no proposition.

4. componendis patrum actis: to edit the journal of the senate, which was published as a sort of official bulletin (see III. 3. 2 n.).

2. fatali... motu: his efforts for mercy must have been by divine instigation, for they were not in keeping with his former character.

prava, perverse: his shrewdness deceived him; for, in guarding

There is at this point no gap in the manuscript, but, as the history of more than two years is omitted, it is evident that the copyist by some blunder passed over several pages. All recent editors agree that the six chapters which follow, formerly regarded as a part of Book V., really belong to Book VI. The history of the intervening period can be partly reconstructed from the account of Dio Cassius, a translation of which, together with passages of Juvenal and Suetonius bearing on the same events, is here inserted.

DIO CASSIUS, BOOK LVIII.

2. Now Sejanus was exalted more and more, and it was voted that his birthday should be celebrated as a public holiday; and it would not be possible to count the statues erected to him by the senate, the equestrian order, the tribes, and the chief men of the state; special embassies, moreover, were sent both to him and to Tiberius by the senate on its own account, and the knights on their own account, and the people, as represented both by the tribunes and the sediles; and prayers and sacrifices were offered for both alike, and oaths were sworn by the fortune of each.

A.D. 30.

3. Now Tiberius seized a favorable opportunity to attack Gallus, who had married his divorced wife,<sup>1</sup> and had used too great freedom of speech about the government. He had, it is true, paid court to Sejanus, either in good faith, believing him destined to be emperor, or through fear of Tiberius, or through artifice, in order that Sejanus might by insolence lose credit with the emperor; and he had proposed numerous and great honors to him, and had taken an active part in the embassies sent to him. But now the emperor sent a missive to the senate, accusing Gallus, among other things, of envy towards Sejanus on the ground of his friendship with him

[Tiberius], although he himself was intimate with Syriacus.<sup>1</sup> And he did not disclose this to Gallus, but treated him with great honor, so that there befell him the strangest fate, such as never happened to any other person. For on the very same day that he banqueted with Tiberius and drank his health, he was condemned to death by the senate, and a prætor was sent to put him in chains and conduct him to punishment. And yet Tiberius, after he had done this, would not allow him to die, much as he wished it when he learned what had been voted; but, in order that he might suffer to the utmost, bade him be of good courage, and ordered him to be kept guarded, but without fetters, until he himself should come to the city; in order, as I have said, that he might be tormented as much as possible by shame and dread. And this is what happened: he was constantly watched by whoever were consuls for the time being (that is, except when Tiberius held the consulship, for then he was guarded by the prætors), not for fear he would escape, — no, by Zeus, but to prevent his death. He had neither friend nor slave with him, nor did he speak to any one or see any one except when he was forced to take food. And this was such, in amount and quality, as neither to give him pleasure nor strength, but just to keep him alive; for this was the most dreadful thing of all.<sup>2</sup>

Tiberius did the same to many others. Having thrown one of his friends in prison, then, when the question came up of putting him to death, he said that he was not yet reconciled with him. In the case of another, whose innocence he had ascertained after having tortured him very severely, he put him to death immediately, saying that after having suffered such indignities he could not honorably continue in life. Syriacus too, although he had neither committed any crime nor been accused of any, and was distinguished for culture, was executed, merely because Tiberius said that he was a friend of Gallus.

Sejanus also slandered Drusus<sup>3</sup> by means of his wife. For, having intrigues with nearly all the wives of the principal men, he learned everything that was done and said by them, making the women his tools by promising to marry them. But when Tiberius only sent Drusus to Rome, Sejanus, fearing that he might change his mind, persuaded Cassius to bring charges against him.

4. Now Sejanus constantly became more powerful and formidable, so that the senate and the citizens paid court to him as if he were emperor, and even treated Tiberius with contempt. Therefore Tiberius, becoming aware of this, did not regard it with indifference, nor yet did he neglect it; for he feared that they would declare him emperor outright. He did nothing, however, openly: for Sejanus had completely gained over the body-guard,<sup>1</sup> and had brought the senators over to his support, partly by favors, partly by hopes, partly by fears, and secured the friendship of all the attendants of Tiberius, so that everything which the emperor said and did was immediately reported to him, while nothing that he did was made known to Tiberius. Therefore Tiberius undertook to hunt him down in a different way, nominating him to the consulship, calling him the partner of his cares, repeatedly saying "my Sejanus," and making a display A.D. 31 of all this in letters to the senate and the people. Therefore, deceived by these expressions, and fully believing in them, men erected brazen statues of both alike everywhere, and coupled their names in documents, and placed gilded chairs for them in the theatres. And finally it was voted that they should be declared joint consuls for five years, and that a joint public reception should be offered to them whenever they should enter Rome. And at last they sacrificed to his statues just as to those of Tiberius.

<sup>1</sup>Thus it went with Sejanus. And many other distinguished men perished, among them Gaius Rufus Geminus.<sup>2</sup> He, being accused of impiety against Tiberius, brought his will into the senate, and read it aloud, showing that he had bequeathed his property in equal shares to the emperor and his own children. And being taunted with his weakness, he went home before the vote was taken; and when he was informed that the quæstor was at his door to execute the judgment, he stabbed himself, and, showing him the wound, said: "Carry word to the senate that this is the way a man dies." *And his wife, Publia Prisca, being accused upon some charge, went into the senate and there stabbed herself with a dagger which she secretly carried with her.

5. Sejanus became so intolerably insolent in spirit and in sense of power, that, to speak briefly, he seemed in good sooth to be emperor, and Tiberius a petty island king, by reason of his continually living at Capri. There was a constant press and throng at his doors, since every one feared, not merely that he would miss being seen by him, but even that he would not be among the first to be seen by him: for he watched everything very closely, both words and demeanor, especially in the case of prominent men. . . . But once on the Kalends, when a great throng was pressing into the house of Sejanus, a bench in the hall in which he was holding a reception broke down under the multitude of those who were sitting upon it; and when he went out of the house a weasel ran through the crowd. And when, after sacrificing on the Capitol, he went down to the Forum, his servants and guards, not being able to follow him on account of the crowd, turned aside through the street which led to the prison, and, as they descended the steps<sup>1</sup> down which condemned criminals are wont to be hurled, stumbled and fell. And as he was taking the auspices after this, no bird of good omen made its appearance, but ravens in great numbers hovering and crawling about him flew to the prison and perched upon it.

6. These signs, however, neither Sejanus nor any one else took to heart; for even if some god had foretold clearly the change of fortune that was shortly to take place, no one would have believed it. Therefore they continued without stint to swear by his fortune, and to call him the colleague of Tiberius, having in mind not merely the consulship, but the imperial dignity. But nothing which happened to him escaped the knowledge of Tiberius; and he, consulting in his own mind how he might destroy him, and finding no way to do this openly without peril, hit upon a remarkable plan for learning accurately not only his sentiments, but also those of others. He wrote continually and at great length a variety of things about himself both to Sejanus and the senate, at one time saying that he was very ill, and could not last much longer, and at another time that he was in excellent health, and was intending shortly to come to Rome. And Sejanus himself he now praised to the skies, and again depreciated very much, and honored some of his companions and disgraced others on his account, so that Sejanus, being by turns filled with vanity and with dread, was always in a state of suspense. For it did not occur to him (being still treated with distinction) to apprehend any danger,—which might have set him to excite a rebellion,—nor on the other hand to be emboldened to take some decisive step, for he was constantly losing in consideration. And at the same time all others, hearing at short intervals first one story and then just the opposite, and feeling secure neither in admiring Sejanus nor in despising him, constantly expecting too to hear that Tiberius was dead or that he was on his way to the city, were kept in equal uncertainty.

7. Now Sejanus was disturbed by these things, and all the more because first a great cloud of smoke arose from one of his statues, and when the head was removed in order to see what was the cause, a great snake crawled out of it; and when another head had been placed upon it, and he was about to offer sacrifice to himself (for he sacrificed to himself as well as to the gods), a rope was found twisted about the neck. And a statue of Fortune, which had, as men believed, belonged to Servius Tullius, who had once been king in Rome, and which now Sejanus had in his house, and honored greatly, turned its back upon him as he was sacrificing to it. [There is here a short gap in the manuscript.] . . . And now others began to be suspicious; but, not knowing the purpose of Tiberius, and taking into consideration the fiery temper of Sejanus, and the uncertainty of affairs, they were in a dilemma, secretly consulting for their own safety, but in public paying court to him, especially because Tiberius conferred priestly offices upon both him and his son along with Gaius<sup>1</sup>; therefore they gave him the proconsular power, and voted in addition that all who should be consuls should take him as their model in governing. Therefore Tiberius, although he honored him with the priesthood, did not summon him to him, but even when he asked leave to go to Campania on the ground that his betrothed was sick, he bade him remain where he was, as he himself was intending soon to repair to Rome.

8. This depressed Sejanus still more, and especially because Tiberius, in appointing Gaius to a priesthood, commended him in high terms, and showed that he regarded him as his successor. And he would have excited a revolution, especially as the soldiers were ready to obey him in everything, if he had not seen that the people were greatly pleased at what had been said about Gaius, in consideration of his father Germanicus. He had before thought that they too were on his side, but now he was discouraged, perceiving that they were enthusiastically devoted to Gaius. And now he regretted not having seized the power during his consulship.<sup>2</sup> Others were influenced moreover by the fact that Tiberius acquitted an enemy of his, who had been appointed to the government of Spain ten years before, and then accused by him upon some charges; and that he gave orders that in future those who were to govern provinces or perform any other public service, should not be prosecuted on such grounds during their office.<sup>3</sup> And when he wrote to the senate concerning the death of Nero, he mentioned Sejanus merely by his name, without any of the terms of honor which he was accustomed to use, and moreover forbade sacrifices to be offered to any mortal (as had been done to Sejanus), even to himself, for many such honors had been voted to him. He had, to be sure, prohibited this before, but now he renewed it on account of Sejanus; for what he had refused for himself he could not permit to another.

9. For these reasons people began to slight him still more, and openly disregard him, avoid him and neglect him. Tiberius therefore learning this, and being confident that he should have the senate and the people on his side, made a direct attack upon him. Giving out that he was about to bestow the tribunician power upon him, — in order that he might take him unawares, — he brought accusations against him before the senate through Nævius Sertorius Macro, whom he had secretly commissioned to command the body-guard, and to whom he had given authority to do whatever should be necessary. And Macro coming by night to Rome, as if on some other business, laid his commands before the consul Memmius Regulus<sup>1</sup> (for his colleague was of the party of Sejanus), and Græcinus Laco, commander of the night-guards; and going in the morning to the palace<sup>2</sup> (for the session of the senate was to be held in the temple of Apollo), he met Sejanus, who had not yet entered the hall; and seeing that he was greatly disturbed because Tiberius had sent no message to him, he reassured him, by telling him in private that he brought him the tribunician power. And he, recovering his spirits at this news, tripped into the senate-house; but Macro sent the guardsmen who were about Sejanus and the senate back to the camp, announcing to them that he was to be their commander, and saying that he brought letters from Tiberius giving donatives to them. Then, after placing the night-guards around the temple in their stead, he entered it, and, giving the letter to the consuls, went away before any part of it was read; then, directing Laco to command the guard there, he hastened to the camp, for fear there might be some outbreak.

10. And now the letter was read aloud. It was long, and did not contain any connected accusation against Sejanus, but first some other matter, and then a slight censure of him, and after this something else, and then again something against him; and at last it declared that two senators who were intimate with him should be punished and he himself put in prison. For Tiberius did not at once order him to be put to death — not that he did not wish it, but because he feared that some disturbance would arise from it; and, on the ground that he could not make the journey safely, he sent for one of the consuls to accompany him. This was the purport of the letter, and thereupon many strange things were to be seen and heard. For in the first place, before it was read, all spoke in high praise of him [Sejanus], expecting that he was about to receive the tribunician power, and shouted in applause — anticipating what they expected, and wishing to show him that they themselves were ready to give it to him; but when nothing of this sort followed, but everything that they heard was just the opposite of what they expected, they fell into great embarrassment and dejection. Some who were sitting on the bench with him rose up; having before been most eager to make him their friend, now they would not even sit on the same seat with him. And at this the prætors and tribunes gathered about him, in order that he might not rush out and make a disturbance, which he would certainly have done if the full weight of the accusation had fallen upon him at first. But as it was read, looking upon each separate point as trivial and isolated, and especially hoping that there would be nothing further, or if there should be that at any rate nothing fatal would be brought against him, he hesitated and remained in his place. And then Regulus summoned him, but he did not obey, not out of insolence, for he was already completely broken down, but because he was not accustomed to have orders given to him. Then after he had called him a second and a third time, the consul stretched out his hand towards him and said, "Sejanus, come hither." At this he answered in these very words, "Is it I that you are calling?" [ἐμὲ καλεῖς;]; and when he stood up, Laco came up and stood by him. And at last, when the letter had been read through, all with one voice cried out against him, and reviled him—some because they had suffered wrongs from him, and others out of fear, some trying to conceal their former friendship for him, and others rejoicing at his downfall. But Regulus did not call upon them all to speak, and indeed he did not call upon any one to speak in regard to putting him to death, for he feared that some opposition would be made, and some disturbance excited (for Sejanus had many relatives and friends): but he took the opinion of a certain senator, and, finding that he agreed with him that he should be imprisoned, he led him out of the senate, and with Laco and the other magistrates conducted him to the prison.

11. And now might one witness human weakness, and learn to abjure arrogance. He who that very morning had been attended to the senate-house by great numbers, as being raised above all, was now haled into prison, having fallen far below all; he who before had been deemed worthy of garlands was now put in chains; he who, as a ruler, had been surrounded with guards, was now watched like a runaway slave; he who had been clad in purple was now buffeted in the face; he who had been revered, and had received sacrifice like a god, was now led to death. . . . The people also assaulted him and upbraided him with the fate of those whom he had ruined, and taunted him with the failure of his hopes. All his statues they cast down, and broke in pieces, and dragged about as if they were tormenting him in person; and thus he became witness of what he was about to suffer in person. For then he was cast into prison; but not long after, indeed the very same day, the senate, assembling in the temple of Concord, close by the prison, when they saw these actions of the people, and saw none of the body-guard, voted his death. After the judgment was executed, the body was thrown down the Scalae Gemoniae, and the rabble abused it for three entire days, and then cast it into the river.<sup>1</sup> Also his children were put to death by vote of the senate, the girl—who had been betrothed to the son of Claudius—being first deflowered by the executioner, because it was impious to execute a virgin in prison. His wife Apicata<sup>2</sup> was not condemned to death, but when she had been informed that her children were dead, and had seen their bodies on the Gemonian Stairs, she shut herself up in private, wrote out an accusation against Livilla in regard to the death of Drusus (which had been the cause of Apicata's estrangement from her husband, so that they no longer lived together), sent this to Tiberius, and then put herself to death. And when Tiberius had received the document and read what was written in it, he put to death Livilla and all the rest. I have heard indeed that he spared her in consideration of her mother Antonia, and that Antonia on her own account put her to death by starvation.

12. This however took place at a later time: at present there was great excitement in the city. For if the people caught sight of any one who had had influence with Sejanus, and had been made insolent by this, they slaughtered him. And the soldiers, enraged because they were suspected of devotion to Sejanus (the night-guards being regarded as more loyal to Tiberius), plundered and burned through the city, although the chief magistrates undertook to guard the city at the command of Tiberius. The senate too was disturbed, the partisans of Sejanus being greatly terrified through fear of punishment, and those who had brought accusations or given evidence against any persons, beginning to suspect that they had sacrificed them to Sejanus and not to Tiberius. Very few were there who ventured to take courage, as not having been mixed up in these things, and to hope that Tiberius would treat them with mildness. For, as usually happens, all that had occurred they laid to the account of the man who had been put to death, and the emperor they blamed very little or not at all: saying that of most things he had been kept in ignorance, and some things he had been compelled to do unwillingly. This was the way they felt in private: in public they voted, as if they were now freed from tyranny, that no one should put on mourning for Sejanus, and that a statue of Freedom should be set up in the Forum, and that a feast should be celebrated by all the magistrates and priests,—a thing that never happened before,—and that the day on which he was executed should be celebrated every year with horse-races, and wild-beast fights, by all the four colleges of priests,<sup>1</sup> and also the Augustales (see I. 54. 1). They had pushed him on to destruction by the excess and the novelty of their adulation, and now they voted strange acts of gratitude to the gods. Indeed, it was so well understood that it was by them chiefly that his head had been turned, that they at once voted that it should be expressly forbidden to bestow excessive honors upon any one, or to take oaths by any other than the emperor. And yet they had no sooner voted this, as if by divine inspiration, than they began to flatter Macro and Laco, giving them much wealth and great honors, bestowing upon Laco quæstorian rank, and upon Macro prætorian, authorizing Macro to sit in the theatre with the senators, and to wear the prætexta at the votive games. They did not accept the honors, however, for the recent example made them cautious. Neither did Tiberius accept any of the many honors that were offered to him, as for instance that he should now begin to be called 'Father of his Country,'<sup>2</sup> and that his birthday should be celebrated with ten cavalry fights and a banquet of the senate: but he forbade, as he had before, all of these things.

18. This is what happened in the city. But Tiberius was for a while in great apprehension lest Sejanus should get possession of the city and sail to attack him, and he had vessels ready in order to escape if anything of this sort should happen. And, as some say, he had ordered Macro, if there should be any disturbance, to lead Drusus before the senate and people, and proclaim him emperor. But when he learned of the death of Sejanus, he rejoiced, as is natural, but yet he refused to receive the embassy sent to him on this account, although many from the senate and many from the knights and the people had been sent, as on a former occasion; and he did not even admit the consul Regulus to his presence, who had always been his adherent, and had now come, in accordance with his written request, to accompany him to Rome.

14. Such a downfall had Sejanus, the most powerful of all who have held this office before or after him, except Plautianus;<sup>3</sup> and his kinsmen and friends, and all others who had paid court to him, and conferred honors upon him, were put upon their trial. Most of these were convicted on the ground of the very things for which they had before been especially envied, the others condemning them for things which they themselves had formerly voted. And many who had before been tried on certain charges and acquitted, were arrested again and condemned, as if their acquittal had been for his sake. <sup>1</sup>Thus, if there was no other charge against a man, this was enough for his punishment, that he had been a friend of Sejanus, just as if it had not been on account of the friendship of Tiberius that others had paid court to him. <sup>2</sup>Such accusations were brought especially by those who had been most devoted to Sejanus; for since they knew accurately who were like-minded with themselves, they had no trouble in bringing accusations and proofs. . . .

15. \ Of those who were accused, many appeared in person and spoke in their own defence with great freedom of spirit; but most took their own lives before being condemned. \ They did this especially in order to escape the disgrace and outrage (for all who were arrested on any such charge, not only knights but also senators, not only men but also women, were crowded into the prison, and after being condemned some were put to death there, and others were hurled from the Tarpeian Rock by the tribuns or consuls, and their bodies tossed into the Forum, and after this thrown into the river), and also in order that their children might inherit their property. \ For they confiscated only a very small proportion of the property of those who committed suicide before judgment, it being the policy of Tiberius to lead them to self-destruction by this inducement, so that it might not appear that it was he who worked their destruction — as if it were not a much more terrible thing to compel a man to slay himself than to give him over directly to the executioner.

Suetonius gives the following account in his life of Tiberius : —

55. Super veteres amicos ac familiares, viginti sibi e numero principum civitatis depoposcerat, velut consiliarios in negotiis publicis. Horum omnium vix duos aut tres incolumes praestitit; ceteros, alium alia de causa, perculit, inter quos cum plurimorum clade Aelium Seianum, quem ad summam potentiam non tam benevolentia provexerat quam ut esset cuius ministerio ac fraudibus liberos Germanici circumveniret, nepotemque suum ex Druso filio naturalem ad successionem imperii confirmaret. . . .

56. Seianum, res novas molientem,<sup>1</sup> quamvis iam et natalem eius publice celebrari et imagines aureas coli passim videret, vix tandem, et astu magis ac dolo quam principali auctoritate, subvertit. Nam primo, ut a se per speciem honoris dimitteret, collegam sibi assumpsit in quinto consulatu, quem longo intervallo absens ob id ipsum susceperat. Deinde spe adfinitatis ac tribuniciae potestatis deceptum, inopinantem criminatus est pudenda miserandaque oratione: cum inter alia patres conscriptos precaretur, mitterent alium e consulibus, qui se senem et solum in conspectum eorum cum aliquo militari praesidio perduceret. Sic quoque diffidens tumultumque metuens, Drusum nepotem, quem vinculis adhuc Romae continebat, solvi, si res posceret, ducemque constitui praeceperat. Aptatis etiam navibus ad quascumque legiones meditabatur fugam, speculabundus ex altissima rupe identidem signa, quae, ne nuntii morarentur, tolli procul, ut quidque factum foret, mandaverat. Verum et oppressa coniuratione Seiani, nihilo securior aut constantior, per novem proximos menses non egressus est villa, quae vocatur Iovia.

<sup>1</sup> Neither Dio nor Juvenal hints at any conspiracy on the part of Sejanus, but they represent his overthrow as caused by jealousy at his excessive greatness and insolence. The conspiracy is, however, mentioned by Josephus (Ant. Ind. XVIII. 6, 6), who says that it was revealed to Tiberius by Antonia, the mother of Germanicus. "She had been also the greatest benefactress to Tiberius, when there was a very dangerous plot laid against him by Sejanus, a man who had been her husband's friend, and who had the greatest authority, because he was general of the army, and many members of the senate and many of the freedmen joined with him, and the soldiery were corrupted, and the plot was come to a great height. Now Sejanus had certainly gained his point, had not Antonia's boldness been more wisely conducted than Sejanus' malice; for, when she had discovered his designs against Tiberius, she wrote him an exact account of the whole, and gave the letter to Pallas, the most faithful of her servants, and sent him to Capri to Tiberius, who, when he understood it, slew Sejanus and his confederates."

A confirmation of the conspiracy is afforded by an inscription, fragmentary in character, and which suggests more problems than it solves, given by Mommsen (Röm. Tribus, p. 307): Seiani sc[elerati inc]itatio et improbas comitiae [ill]as fuerunt in Aventino, ubi [Sei]anus cos. factus est. An inscription of Interamna reads, Providentiae Ti. Caesaris Augusti nati ad aeternitatem Romani nominis sublato hoste perniciosissimo P. R., etc. This may be nothing but the usual adulation: the other inscription points to something formal and official in the development of the conspiracy.

The first six chapters were formerly reckoned with Book V., and still retain their former numbering, for convenience of reference.

V. 6. This chapter contains a portion of an address made to his friends by one of the adherents of Sejanus, after the overthrow and death of the latter. It appears to have been spoken in his house, when he was on the point of committing suicide.

super ea re: probably the trial of Livia (Livilla).

allaturum: the subject of this infinitive was in the lost passage.

2. ille: Tiberius.

collegam: i.e. either as consul, or, as Mommsen holds (Röm. St. II. 1051), in the proconsular power.

generum: Zonaras states that Sejanus was betrothed to Julia, daughter of Drusus, and widow of Nero (III. 29. 4; IV. 60. 4).

sibi ignoscit: cf. Hor. Sat. I. 3. 23, egomet mi ignosco.

5. quam laeti: Intr. 35 m. adiciendo, etc.: this would be to cherish his memory laeti.

7. superesse tempus: i.e. that the time had not yet come.
 novissimis, the last act.

abdiderat, incubuit. Neque Caesar ullis criminibus aut probis defunctum insectatus est, cum in Blaesum multa foedaque incusavisset.

- V. 8. Relatum inde de P. Vitellio et Pomponio Secundo. Illum indices arguebant claustra aerarii, cui praefectus erat, et militarem pecuniam rebus novis obtulisse; huic a Considio praetura functo obiectabatur Aelii Galli amicitia, qui punito Seiano in hortos Pomponii quasi 2 fidissimum ad subsidium perfugisset. Neque aliud periclitantibus auxilii quam in fratrum constantia fuit, qui

 V. 5. aequus tolerat, Tiberio superstes fuit.
 9. Placitum posthac ut in reliquos Seiani liberos adverteretur, vanescente quamquam plebis ira ac plerisque

8. P. Vitellio: see I. 70. 1 n.
 Pomponio Secundo: a tragedian of whom Quintilian says (X. 1. 98): eorum quos viderim longe princeps Pomponius Secundus, quem senes quidem parum tragiū putabant, eruditione ac nitore praestare confitebantur.

aerarii: sc. militaris: I. 78. 2 n. rebus novis: the conspiracy of Sejanus.

Aelii Galli: this is supposed to have been the eldest son of Sejanus, who had been adopted into the Aelian gens (IV. I. 3 n.), probably by the knight Aelius Gallus (Dio, LIII. 29. 3).

2. fratrum: Vitellius had three brothers, Lucius (28. 1), Quintus (II. 48. 3), and Aulus, who was consul the following year as colleague of Cn. Domitius, but appears to have died immediately after taking office (inierat), as his name does not stand in the Fasti: Aulus in consulatu obiit quem cum Domitio Neronis Caesaris patre inierat (Suet. Vit. 2). The brother of Pomponius was named Quintus (18. 2).

vades: their brothers gave surety and kept them in custody.

9. placitum: we are not told whether this was the act of Tiberius or the senate.

reliquos: besides Aelius Gallus. adverteretur: in this sense (cf. III. 52. 2 n.) followed by in with the accusative only here and II. 32. 5.

quamquam: following vanescente by anastrophe.

3. triumphali supplicio: death by strangling. The triumviri capitales were officers who had charge of the prison and inflicted the death punishment. The incident here given is related also by Suetonius (Tib. 61) and other writers (see p. 350), but is reasonably doubted by Merivale and others, as being a mere rumor.

iuxta, close to; anastrophe; Intr. 35 i.

id aetatis: an expression of horror.

10. Drusum: he was at this time in prison, where he died of hunger the next year (23. 4).

2. velut, as was claimed.

comitantibus: i.e. the freedmen; ablative absolute.

ad paternos exercitus: those formerly commanded by his alleged father.

3. laetus praesentibus, rejoicing in his present success.

inanium spe: a hope resting upon vain expectations.

Achaia quoque curabat: see I. 80. 1 n.

4. antiret, get the start of the story, whether true or false.

Toronaem Thermacumque sinum: on the coast of Macedonia.

Corinthiense litus angustiasque Isthmi evadit; marique Ionio Nicopolim Romanam coloniam ingressus, ibi demum cognoscit sollertius interrogatum quisnam foret, dixisse M. Silano genitum, et multis sectatorum dilapsis Nam Trio, facilis capessendis inimiciis et foro exercitus, ut segnem Regulum ad opprimendos Seiani ministros oblique perstrinxerat: ille, nisi lacesseretur, modestiae retinens, non modo rettudit collegam, sed ut noxium coniurationis ad disquisitionem trahebat.

 3 Multisque patrum orantibus ponerent odia in perniciem itura, mansere infensi ac minitantes, donec magistratu abirent.

VI. Cn. Domitius et Camillus Scribonianus consulatum

Nicopolim: see II. 53. 1.

interrogatum: i.e. the pretender; subject of dixisse and ascendisse.

M. Silano: perhaps the one mentioned III. 24. 5.

multis . . . dilapsis: as the result of his confession.

11. consulum: Fulcinus Trio (II. 28. 3) and Memmius Regulus, consules suffecti.

Trio: he had been a friend and accomplice of Sejanus, whose confederates he was therefore, in self-defence, all the more zealous to punish.

foro exercitus, skilled as an advocate.

Regulum: a "man of determined loyalty."

2. modestiae, self-control, coniurationis: of Sejanus.

1. Cn. Domitius: father of the emperor Nero, by Agrippina, daughter of Germanicus; see IV. 75. 1.

Camillus Scribonianus: son of the proconsul of Africa (II. 52. 5). praelegebat: cf. II. 79. 1.

maiorum incitamentum cupidinis habebat. Tuncque 4 primum ignota antea vocabula reperta sunt sellariorum et spintriarum ex foeditate loci ac multiplici patientia; praepositique servi qui conquirerent pertraherent, dona 5 in promptos, minas adversum abnuentes, et si retinerent propinquus aut parens, vim raptus suaeque ipsi libita velut in captos exercebant.

At Romae principio anni, quasi recens cognitis Liviae 2 flagitiis ac non pridem etiam punitis, atroces sententiae dicebantur in effigies quoque ac memoriam eius, et bona Seiani ablata aerario ut in fiscum cogerentur, tamquam referret. Scipiones haec et Silani et Cassii isdem 2 ferme aut paulum immutatis verbis asseveratione multa censebant, cum repente Togonius Gallus, dum ignobili-tatem suam magnis nominibus inserit, per deridiculum auditur. Nam principem orabat deligere senatores, ex 3 quis viginti sorte ducti et ferro accincti, quotiens curiam inisset, salutem eius defenderent. Crediderat nimirum 4

2. hortis: those bequeathed by Julius Caesar to the Roman people (II. 41. 1). In this neighborhood Augustus had constructed a naval amphitheatre (in quo loco nunc nemus est Caesarum. Mon. Anc. IV. 43). Of this visit Suetonius says (Tib. 72): triremi usque ad proximos naumachiae hortos subvectus, disposita statione per ripas Tiberis, quae obviam prodeuntis submoveret . . . sed prospectis nec aditis urbis moenibus rediit.
saxa, etc.: i.e. of Capri.

2. Liviae flagitiis: see IV. 3. 3. These had been divulged, and Livia punished, after the death of Sejanus; see p. 350.

fiscum: the emperor's privy purse; the aerarium, or public treasury, was quite as much under his control, so that it made no difference (tamquam referret) in which the funds were placed.

2. Scipiones, etc.: members of these noble families, with which the insignificance of Togonius Gallus is contrasted.

5. honoribus perfunctos: those who had held magistracies, while those e magistratibus were the actual incumbents.

sumentium . . . gladios: to be armed in the senate was a serious offence; cf. IV. 21. 3.

8. Iunium Gallionem: a celebrated rhetorician and an intimate friend of M. Seneca, who calls him one of the four best declaimers of the time, adding: hi quotiens confluxissent, penes Latronem gloria fuisset, penes Gallionem palma (Contr. X. 13). Quintilian says: remissius et pro suo ingenio pater Gallio (IX. 2. 91).

actis stipendiis: see I. 17. 3 n.

quattuordecim ordinibus: the fourteen rows of benches assigned to the equites at the theatre. The proposition would have the effect of placing the past members of the praetorian guard on an equality with the equestrian order, as was the rule with centuriones primipilares (II. 11. 2 n).

quos neque, etc.: it will be remembered that the emperor had, by virtue of his proconsular power, sole authority over the army (Intr. 19); moreover, these were his special body-guard.

Quod postquam patefactum, prorupere concepta pridem odia, et summum supplicium decernebatur, ni professus indicium foret. Ut vero Latinium Latiarem ingressus est, accusator ac reus iuxta invisi gratissimum spectaculum praebebantur. Latiaris, ut rettuli, praecipuus olim circumveniendi Titii Sabini et tunc luendae poenae primus fuit. Inter quae Haterius Agrippa consules anni prioris invasit, cur mutua accusatione intenta nunc silerent: metum prorsus et noxae conscientiam pro foedere haberi; at non patribus reticenda quae audivissent. Regulus manere tempus ultionis, seque coram principe exsecuturum; Trio aemulationem inter collegas et si qua discordes iecissent melius obliterari respondit. Urgente Agrippa Sanquinius Maximus e consularibus oravit senatum ne curas imperatoris conquisitis insuper acerbitatibus augerent: sufficere ipsum statuendis remediis. Sic Regulo salus et Trioni dilatio exitii quaesita. Haterius invisior fuit, quia somno aut libidinis vigiliis

3. domibus magistratuum: a not uncommon form of imprisonment; see Cic. in Cat. I. 8. 19.

5. quod, etc.: it would seem that the emperor's letter first brought this act of treachery to the knowledge of the senators.

- 5 Exim Cotta Messalinus, saevissimae cuiusque sententiae auctor eoque inveterata invidia, ubi primum facultas data, arguitur pleraque in C. Caesarem quasi incertae virilitatis, et cum die natali Augustae inter sacerdotes epularetur, novendialem eam cenam dixisse; querensque de potentia M'. Lepidi ac L. Arruntii, cum quibus ob rem pecuniariam disceptabat, addidisse: 'Illos quidem senatus, me autem tuebitur Tiberiolus meus.' Quae cuncta a primoribus civitatis revincebatur, iisque instantibus ad imperatorem provocavit. Nec multo post litterae adferuntur, quibus in modum defensionis, repetito inter se atque Cottam amicitiae principio crebrisque eius officiis commemoratis, ne verba prave detorta neu convivalium fabularum simplicitas in crimen duceretur postulavit.
- 6 Insigne visum est earum Caesaris litterarum initium; nam his verbis exorsus est: 'Quid scribam vobis, patres conscripti, aut quo modo scribam aut quid omnino non scribam hoc tempore, di me deaeque peius perdant quam perire me cotidie sentio, si scio.' Adeo facinora die natali Augustae: Jan. 30. novendialem, funeral feast, celebrated on the ninth day after death. The allusion has been variously interpreted; the simplest explanation is to refer it to the gloom which prevailed in this reign of terror. Nipperdey's explanation is that a banquet on the birthday of a deceased person who had not been deified was nothing but a funeral feast.

2. frustra = sine causa, a common meaning in Tacitus; see I. 30. 3; III. 33. 2; III. 58. 1, etc.

3. praestantissimus sapientiae: Socrates; the allusion is to a passage in Plato's Gorgias (80).

7. accusatores L. Arruntii: this event was probably related in the lost portion of the fifth book. This Sanquinus is not the consular mentioned 4. 4.

5. quemquam: i.e. by name. novissimi consilii: his plot against the emperor.

6. tuum, etc.: see V. 6. 2.

tua officia capessentem: the affairs of state had been left practically in his hands.

8. coram, in public, as opposed to abditos sensus.

9. ideo: i.e. by searching (*exqui-assequare: indefinite subject, one would attain his object.

10. sedecim annos: from the accession of Tiberius, A.D. 14, to the fall of Sejanus, A.D. 31; somewhat more than sixteen years.

Satrium: the accuser of Cre-mutius Cordus (IV. 34. 2): of this Pomponius nothing is known.

11. dabitur: i.e. to all friends of Sejanus.

finis: i.e. in time, — justifying those who broke off friendship with Sejanus when he fell from favor.

9. efferret: see III. 41. 3 n.

2. Vistilium: perhaps father of Vistilia (II. 85. 2).

cohortem suam: i.e. of friends — those that he had taken with him to Capri.

ficto: i.e. the story; dative.

3. fuit seu, etc.: for the construction, cf. I. 79. 5.

habita fides: cf. II. 12. 2.

4. convictu prohibitus: cf. II. 70. 3; III. 12. 4.

5. Annius Pollio: consul suffectus, A.D. 20.

App. Silanus: consul, A.D. 28 (IV. 68. 1).

Scauro: see I. 13. 4.

simul: see IV. 55. 3 n.

Sabino Calvisio: consul, A.D. 26 (IV. 46. 1).

Vinicianus: son of Annius

Pollio, afterwards proposed as a successor to Caligula; he revolted against Claudius, and put himself to death, A.D. 42.

genus: Intr. 35 s.

quidam summis honoribus: all of these, with the possible exception of Vinicianus, were consulars. Pfitzner suggests that et is equivalent to and in addition to these. Nipperdey suggests atque idem for et quidam, which seems preferable. It is probably a carelessness of expression.

have been in the fifth book.

Numam Marcium: son-in-law of Numa Pompilius, and father of Ancus Marcius.

Spurium Lucretium: father of the ill-fated Lucretia, and consul in the first year of the republic. The three here given are probably only the most noted of the praefecti urbi under the monarchy.

2. mandabant: i.e. the same functions on the same occasions.

simulacrum: see note, IV. 36. 1. ferias Latinas: see IV. 36. 1.

3. Augustus . . . praeposuit:
 this was B.C. 36; but Maecenas did not bear the title of praefectus urbis: its powers he shared with Agrippa.

equestris ordinis: see III. 30.

 now embraced politically the whole of Italy.

 of Actium, B.C. 31.

tarda legum auxilia: the slowness of procedure in the courts.

nisi metuat: a general condition, qualifying turbidum.

4. Messalla Corvinus: a distinguished orator and soldier, as well as patron of literature; see III.
 34. 2.

quasi nescius exercendi: according to St. Jerome's version of Eusebius' Chronicle (B.C. 25), Mes-sala abdicated on the sixth day, declaring his office incivilem potes-tatem.

5. tum, afterwards; it was nine years later (B.C. 16), on occasion of the absence of Augustus from Rome.
 It was originally the essence of the office that it was only exercised on special occasions, and Mommsen (Röm. St. II. 982) assigns this as the reason why this officer is not mentioned among those taking the oath to the new emperor (I. 7. 3).

12. de libro Sibyllae: a new and probably spurious document.

Caninius Gallus: he is known by inscriptions to have been president of the Fratres Arvales, A.D. 36.

quindecimvirum: partitive genitive; see I. 76. 2 n.

postulaverat: i.e. the tribune, who had the ius referendi, or power of convening the senate, had done this at the request of Gallus, in order to obtain validity for his act.

per discessionem: i.e. by going apart into the lobbies. This was the regular way of voting; its mention appears to show that the vote was taken without discussion; cf. III. 69. 9.

2. scientiae, caerimoniarum: cf. vetus operis (I. 20. 2).

per magistros: the college of Quindecimviri had five magistri as presiding officers. Marquardt, Röm. Staatsverwaltung, III. 366.

infrequentem: there seems at this time to have been no fixed quorum of the senate: before the time of Augustus it was necessary that four hundred senators should be present (that is, about two-thirds of the whole number), in order to transact business. Augustus relaxed this rule. Dio, LIV. 35.

3. deferrentur: Suetonius (Oct. 31) says of this: supra duo milia [fatidicorum librorum] contracta undique cremavit, ac solos retinuit Sibyllinos, hos quoque dilectu habito; condiditque duobus forulis auratis sub Palatini Apollinis basi.

4. sociali bello: an error; it was during the first civil war, B.C. 83.

Samo, etc.: (ablatives of place whence): each of these towns claimed the glory of a Sibyl. It was from Erythrae, a town of Asia Minor, that the Sibyl came who sold the books to King Tarquin.

5. is liber: the book in question.

13. in theatro: the theatre instead of the public assembly was now the usual place for the expression of popular desires; cf. Hist. I. 72.

2. addidit: for Tiberius' care of the corn supply, see III. 54. 8.

bought every year from Egypt 20,000,000 modii of corn = about five million bushels (Aur. Vict. Ep.

3. neque segnius: senate and consuls exercised their respective powers of ordinance (senatus con-

4. silentium ipsius: i.e. that he reproved the people through the mouths of the senate and magistrates; this was ascribed to arrogance, rather than the observance of constitutional forms.

14. nihil ad serius: no dan-such a trifle.

2. Iulius Celsus: see 9. 6; not the Celsus mentioned above.

circumdatam: sc. cervici.

could he escape from the empire.

tus to leave Italy without permission of the emperor.

15. Ser. Galba: the same who was emperor, A.D. 68. His name was originally Servius, the common praenomen of the Sulpician gens; he had at this time exchanged it for Lucius, but took again his original name as emperor. (Suet. Galba, 4.)

L. Sulla: his cognomen was Felix, which shows that he was probably descended from the dictator.

neptibus suis: the daughters of Germanicus; Drusilla, sixteen, and Julia, fifteen years of age.

L. Cassium: his surname, Longinus, was that of the distinguished Cassii of the last two centuries of the republic; he was put to death by Caligula.

2. oppidanum: as we say, pro- vincial; he was from the oppidum Cales in Campania. It was to Vinicius that Velleius Paterculus addressed his history. He was afterwards poisoned by order of the empress Messalina.

cetera equestri familia: the aristocracy of the municipal towns enjoyed equestrian rank in the capital.

3. antiqui honoratique: i.e. he belonged to the plebeian nobility, like Metellus, Lucullus, and Catulus.

4. iuvenum: both were already of consular rank, but a man was a iuvēnis until forty-five.

5. flexit: intransitive; cf. I. 34. 5. offensiones: see III. 54. 11; IV. 38. 1.

Macro: he had succeeded Sejanus as praetorian praefect (p. 348).

 3 Nam primo duodecim tabulis sanctum ne quis unciario faenore amplius exerceret, cum antea ex libidine locu-adeo numquam = nedum unquam.

publicum consilium: an old name for the senate, derived from its original functions as a counselling body. Cf. Cic. de Rep. II. 8. 14; [Romulus] in regium consilium delegerat principes, qui appellati sunt propter caritatem patres.

16. magna vis accusatorum: it appears from a passage in Dio Cassius (I.VIII. 21) that this was done at the instigation of the emperor, whose habit it was to insist upon a rigid enforcement of the laws; as he had shown himself (III. 53, 54) to have a keen appreciation of the social and economical evils of the time, we may suppose that his enforcement of this law was grounded in considerations of public policy. The result, however, was very unfortunate.

adversum legem dictatoris Caesaris: we have no knowledge of any usury laws, or laws regulating the rate of interest, of Julius Caesar. Dio, however (XLI. 38), mentions a law of his forbidding any person to possess (κεκτῆσθαι), more than 15,000 drachmas [= denarii] in gold or silver, and we may infer with some probability that that is the law referred to. The description is too vague to warrant us in any positive conclusions; but we may infer that if it prohibited keeping on hand more than a certain amount of cash, it may have regulated the investment of the balance. It is referred to in the other passage of Dio (LVIII. 21) as a law περὶ τῶν συμβολαίων, which may very well apply to such loans (de modo credendi possidendique). omissam olim, which had long ago become obsolete.

2. vetus urbi: i.e. common in old times. Livy's history mentions many instances of distress and disturbance arising from the exaction of usury, and the harsh enforcement of the laws of debt.

3. unciario faenore: the view of Niebuhr is now generally adopted, that this was an uncia for an as; i.e. one-twelfth of the principal, or eight and one-third per cent, for the year. Niebuhr further assumes, which is not so certain, that this pletium agitaretur; dein rogatione tribunicia ad semuncias redactum, postremo vetita versura. Multisque 4 plebis scitis obviam itum fraudibus, quae totiens repressae miras per artes rursum oriebantur. Sed tum 5 Gracchus praetor, cui ea quaestio evenerat, multitudine periclitantium subactus rettulit ad senatum, trepidique patres (neque enim quisquam tali culpa vacuus) veniam a principe petivere; et concedente annus in posterum sexque menses dati, quis secundum iussa legis rationes familiares quisque componerent. Hinc inopia rei num- 17 mariae, commoto simul omnium aere alieno, et quia tot damnatis bonisque eorum divenditis signatum argentum fisco vel aerario attinebatur. Ad hoc senatus praescrip- 2 rate was for the old year of ten months, which would be ten per cent for the year of twelve months. By the law presently referred to, it was reduced to half this rate.

rogatione tribunicia: this was B.C. 347.

vetita versura: probably by the Genucian Law, B.C. 342, ne faenerare liceret (Liv. VII. 42. 1). Versura is not equivalent to usura (interest), but means rather the making of a loan—borrowing from one person to pay a debt to another. What was prohibited therefore was not the taking interest at all, but the trade of money-lending (faenerare). In the present case, at any rate, it is evident that the law did not forbid interest, for in the next chapter it is said that the hundred million sesterces advanced by the emperor were as a favor loaned without interest (sine usuris), from which it follows that it would have been lawful to exact interest.

4. fraudibus: e.g. just after the Second Punic War, loans were made in the name of socii, or citizens of allied towns (Liv. XXXV. 7).

5. tum, on the present occasion.

ea quaestio: the court which had cognizance of this offence.

trepidi patres: in violating this law the senators likewise offended against the public sentiment which forbade them to engage in trade.

concedente: Intr. 35 o.

secundum, etc.: i.e. arrange their business so as to conform to the law.

17. rei nummariae, cash—there being no money but coin, nummus; cf. rei frumentariae, 13. 2.

commoto: i.e. being called in; this made an enormous demand for ready money, while the extensive confiscations had locked up large sums in the treasury.

2. ad hoc, to meet this emergency, —an unusual meaning of this phrase, but supported by the expression of Suetonius who (Tib. 48), in describing the measures now taken, adds: nec res expediretur; from which we understand that the measure aimed to relieve from embarrassments, but failed, as we see further on to have been the case.

serat duas quisque faenoris partes in agris per Italiam collocaret. Sed creditores in solidum appellabant, nec 3 decorum appellatis minuere fidem. Ita primo concursatio et preces, dein strepere praetoris tribunal, eaque quae remedio quaesita, venditio et emptio, in contrarium mutari, quia faeneratores omnem pecuniam mercandis
 4 agris condiderant; copiam vendendi secuta vilitate, quanto quis obaeratio, aegrius distrahebant, multique fortunis provolvebantur. Eversio rei familiaris dignitatem ac famam praeceps dabat, donec tulit opem Caesar disposito per mensas milies sestertio factaque mutuandi

Suetonius further tells us that this measure also was initiated by the emperor; see next note. It would seem that in granting the eighteen months' respite he at the same time recommended this measure for immediate relief.

duas quisque, etc.: this measure, hard to understand as here described, is made clear by Suetonius, whose description of the transaction is as follows: cum per senatus consultum sancisset ut faeneratores duas patrimonii partes in solo collocarent, debitores totidem aeris alieni statim solverent, nec res expediretur. He uses the word patrimonium (estate) inaccurately, where Tacitus uses faenus (principal). His statement—that the debtors were to pay two-thirds, and the creditors to invest it in land—must be understood to mean that the creditors were to take land in payment. Trajan likewise (Plin. Epp. VI. 19. 4) ordered candidates patrimonii tertiam partem conferre in ea quae solo continerentur.

in solidum, in full.

decorum: it was no legal obligation, but to refuse to pay would impair their credit. Or possibly the adjustment described above was recommended rather than prescribed.

3. concursatio: i.e. to the creditors.

strepere, to resound with lawsuits.

venditio et emptio: reciprocal terms expressing the two sides of the same act—purchase and sale of property.

faeneratores . . . condiderant: the capitalists did not purchase land at once, but kept the money on hand (condiderant) for the purpose of buying, as favorable opportunities should offer. By this the distress of the debtors was enhanced, because the large capitalists held off in order to buy cheap.

condiderant: most editions place a full stop after this word, and a semicolon after provolvebantur; but it is evident that the passage copiam . . . provolvebantur is a part of the explanation of in contrarium mutari, as following quia.

4. distrahebant, sell in small lots; because the market was glutted.

per mensas: the amount of about $5,000,000 was deposited for the purpose of loans for three years without interest, but on the security copia sine usuris per triennium, si debitor populo in duplum praediis cavisset. Sic refecta fides, et paulatim privati quoque creditores reperti. Neque emptio agrorum exercita ad formam senatus consulti, acribus, ut ferme talia, initiis, incurioso fine.

Dein redeunt priores metus postulato maiestatis Considio Proculo, qui nullo pavore diem natalem celebrans raptus in curiam pariterque damnatus interfectusque est. Sorori eius Sanciae aqua atque igni interdictum accusante Q. Pomponio. Is moribus iniquis haec et huiusce modi a se factitari praetendebat, ut parta apud principem gratia periculis Pomponii Secundi fratris mederetur. Etiam in Pompeiam Macrinam exsilium statuitur, cuius maritum Argolicum, socerum Laconem e primoribus Achaeorum Caesar adflixerat. Pater quoque illustris eques Romanus ac frater praetorius, cum damnatio instaret, se ipsi interfecere. Datum erat crito the state of double the value in real estate. Dio says that this loan was made ἐν τοῖς ἀνδρῶν βουλευτήσιν, and Furneaux suggests that the reference is to "special public banks."

5. privati creditores: as soon as the panic was over, money was as usual plentiful enough.

incurioso fine: the slack execution of the law that often follows a vigorous beginning.

For a fuller discussion of this affair, see paper by the editor in the Transactions of the American Philological Association, Vol. XVIII. (1887), p. 5.

18. Considio Proculo: see V. 8. 1.

pariter, immediately. This summary execution was contrary to the senatus consultum given in III. 51. 3.

3. Argolicum . . . Laconem: these are considered to be personal cognomina.

4. pater quoque: the name of Pompeia Macrina shows that in all probability her father was son of Pompeius Macer, who was appointed chief librarian by Augustus (cui ordinandas bibliothecas delegaverat, Suet. Iul. 56), and who was himself son of Theophanes.

illustris eques: the term illustris, applied to the knights, had no technical meaning, but is used by Tacitus to designate those who by official position (cf. equester nobilitas, Agr. 4), or birth (in a senatorial family), or perhaps senatorial fortune, enjoyed a rank intermediate between the senators and the common equites (Momm. Röm. St. III. 56. 3); cf. II. 59. 4 n.; IV. 58. 1 n.

Theophanen: see Cicero, pro Archia, 10, 24: noster hic Magnus, qui cum virtute fortunam adaequavit, nonne Theophanem Mytilenaeum, scriptorem rerum suarum, in contione militum civitate donavit? Magnus, it will be remembered, was the name given to Pompey by Sulla. A person who thus received citizenship took the gentile name of the one who bestowed it upon him (cf. III. 40. 1 n); hence the name Pompeius Maer.

proavum: this term applies of course only to Pompeia and her brother, — the father was grandson of Theophanes.

19. saxo Tarpeio: see II. 32. 5 n. vertisse: see II. 36. 2 n.

aurarias, etc.: the mines of Spain were famed for productiveness. See Plin. N. H. xxxiii. 4 (21).

quamquam, etc.: although made public property, they were transferred to the privy purse (fiscus).

2. irritatus, his appetite whetted.
cunctos: Stahr shows that this is incorrect, by referring to the case of Paconianus (3. 4), — thrown in prison on this charge, but (39. 1) not executed until three years later, — a very meagre extenuation of the horrors of the scene.

3. immensa strages: the number is given by Suetonius (Tib. 61) as twenty in one day. The expression of Tacitus may be exaggerated, but the reality was bad enough.

avo comes, Claudiam, M. Silani filiam, coniugio accepit, immanem animum subdola modestia tegens, non damnatione matris, non exitio fratrum rupta voce; qualem diem Tiberius induisset, pari habitu, haud multum distantibus verbis. Unde mox scitum Passieni oratoris dictum percrebruit, neque meliorem umquam servum neque deteriore dominum fuisse.

Non omiserim praesagium Tiberii de Servio Galba tum consule; quem accitum et diversis sermonibus peremptatum postremo Graecis verbis in hanc sententiam allocutus est: 'Et tu, Galba, quandoque degustabis imperium,' seram ac brevem potentiam significans, scientia Chaldaeorum artis, cuius apiscendae otium apud Rhodum, magistrum Thrasullum habuit, peritiam eius hoc modo expertus. Quotiens super tali negotio consultaret, edita domus parte ac liberti unius conscientia utebatur. Is litterarum ignarus, corpore valido, per avia ac derupta (nam saxis domus imminet) praecipit eum cuius artem experiri Tiberius statuisset, et regredientem, si vanitatis aut fraudum suspicio inceserat, in subiectum mare praecipitabat, ne index arcani existeret. Igitur Thrasullus isdem rupibus inductus postquam percontantem commoverat, imperium ipsi et futura sollerter patefaciens, interrogatur an suam quoque Pliny (N. H. X. 2. 5) and Dio Cassius (LVIII. 27), it was two years later. Pliny says that it was brought to Rome, A. U. C. 800 (A.D. 47), and placed in the comitium, but adds, quem falsum esse nemo dubitaret. In the same chapter he describes the phoenix as follows: aquilae narratur magnitudine, auri fulgore circa colla, cetero purpureus, caeruleam roseis caudam pinnis distinguuntibus, cristis fauces, caputque plumae apice honestante.

4. mille quadringentos sexaginta unum: the Phoenix period is here confused with the Sothis period, or Great Egyptian year, in which the sidereal year is brought into correspondence with the calendar year; the numbers, as given below, do not at all correspond with this.

29 At Romae caede continua Pomponius Labeo, quem praefuisse Moesiae rettuli, per abruptas venas sanguinem effudit; aemulataque est coniunx Paxaea. Nam promptas eius modi mortes metus carnificis faciebat, et quia damnati publicatis bonis sepultura prohibebantur, eorum qui de se statuebant humabantur corpora, manebant testamenta, pretium festinandi. Sed Caesar missis ad senatum litteris disseruit morem fuisse maioribus, quotiens dirimerent amicitias, interdicere domo eumque finem gratiae ponere: id se repetivisse in Labeone, atque illum, quia male administratae provinciae aliorumque criminum urgebatur, culpam invidia velavisse, frustra conterrita uxore, quam etsi nocentem periculi tamen expertem fuisse. Ac tamen accusatores, si facultas incideret, poenis 80 adficiebantur, ut Servilius Corneliusque perduto Scauro famosi, quia pecuniam a Vario Ligure omittendae delationis ceperant, in insulas interdicto igni atque aqua demoti sunt. Et Abudius Ruso functus aedilitate, dum 2 Lentulo Gaetulico, sub quo legioni praefuerat, periculum facessit, quod is Seiani filium generum destinasset, ultro damnatur atque urbe exigitur. Gaetulicus ea 3 tempestate superioris Germaniae legiones curabat, mirumque amorem assecutus erat, effusae clementiae, modicus severitate et proximo quoque exercitui per L. nomine: as being an Arsacid.

auctore: the authority of Rome.

ut . . . ut: this repetition emphasizes the authority of Caesar and that of Arsaces. App. I.

82. destinata, his policy; see II. 65. 1.

2. modo: answering to modo understood before tardari.

3. utilitas: the advantage of caution (cunctatio).

illigaret: i.e. the drug dulled his faculties, and rendered him inactive, probably killing him by slow degrees.

4. dum: causal; see III. 19. 3 n.

instituta Parthorum: see the reproaches against Vonones (II. 2. 5); these Phraates tried to avoid.

impar: physically incapable.

5. sanguinis eiusdem: i.e. a descendant of Phraates IV.; Artabanus was apparently a nephew of the deceased Phraates V. (Phraatis avi, 37. 6). See Rawlinson, Sixth Oriental Monarchy, p. 231.

cesserunt: i.e. were obscured by.

88. ad scelus: i.e. the murder of their master.

2. Artaxata: II. 56. 3.

Parthorum: see App. I.

facerent: in the sense of levy.

3. Albanos: see II. 68. 1; they were east of the Iberians, upon the Caspian Sea. In the military operations which follow, the Iberians commanded the passes of the Caucasus, which gave free passage to their Sarmatian allies, while those Sarmatians who came as auxiliaries to the Parthians were obliged to try the dangerous passage along the Caspian, between the sea and the Albanian Mountains.

Sarmatae: this Slavonic people was composed of numerous petty tribes, governed by patriarchal chiefs (sceptuchi), who took different sides in the contest (diversa induere).

4. Caspia via: properly portae Caucasiae, the modern pass of Armenios raptim effundunt. At qui Parthis adven-

Dariel. The Caspia via was properly along the shores of the Caspian Sea (5); the confusion of the two passes is mentioned by Pliny (N. H. VI. 11. 30) as a common error.

5. hostis: the Iberians.

flatibus etesiarum: these were periodical north winds, which blew in July and August, driving the sea with such force upon the shore, as to prevent the passage, or make it very difficult; in the winter, on the other hand, the road is practicable (hibernus, etc.); cf. Q. Curtius, VI. 4. 19, a septentrione ingens in litus mare incumbit longaeque agit fluctus.

84. auxilio: the Sarmatians.

infensare pabula, lays waste the foraging ground.

insolentes, unaccustomed; cf. Cic. Att. II. 21. 3, insolens infamiae.

2. sola in equite vis: the special military force of these Eastern nations.

et pedite: his army being partly recruited from the mountain regions of the north, which were unsuited to cavalry.

3. Thessalis ortos: a good illustration of the wild popular ethnologies of ancient times; these nations, between the Aryan Armenians on the south, and the Turanian Scythians on the north, were of uncertain race. Kiepert, Lehrbuch der allen Geographie, p. 73.

vacuos, without a master; cf. II.

3. 2.

4. de nomine eius, after his name; i.e. named after him; cf. I. 15. 3; the legend of Jason had many associations in this region.

- 5 Ceterum directa utrimque acie Parthus imperium Orientis, claritudinem Arsacidarum, contraque ignobilem Hiberum mercenario milite disserebat; Pharasmanes integros semet a Parthico dominatu, quanto maiora peterent, plus decoris victores aut, si terga darent, flagitii atque periculi laturus; simul horridam suorum aciem, 6 picta auro Medorum agmina, hinc viros, inde praedam 85 ostendere. Enimvero apud Sarmatas non una vox ducis: se quisque stimulant ne pugnam per sagittas 1 sinerent: impetu et comminus praeveniendum. Variac hinc bellantium species, cum Parthus sequi vel fugere pari arte suetus distraheret turmas, spatium ictibus quaereret, Sarmatae omisso arcu, quo brevius valent, 2 contis gladiisque ruerent; modo equestris proelii more frontis et tergi vices, aliquando ut conserta acie corpori- 3 bus et pulsu armorum pellerent pellerentur. Iamque et Albani Hiberique prensare detrudere ancipitem pugnam hostibus facere, quos super eques et propioribus 4 vulneribus pedites adflictabant. Inter quae Pharastions a temple, ἑρῶν ἱερὸν, καὶ παρθίων ἐκείνων, ὅπου κρύβει οὐ θόρακα.

5. mercenario milite: the Scythians; explains ignobilem.

6. horridam, rugged.

Medorum: there is some contempt expressed in this word, the effeminate Medes having been brought into subjection by the rude Parthian mountaineers. The Romans often used the terms Medi and Parthae for the Parthians; cf. Hor. Od. I. 2. 51, and elsewhere.

85. ne . . . sinerent: since the Parthians excelled as archers, while the Sarmatians fought better comminus: see below.

2. fugere: the skill of the Parthian bowmen in retreat is well known; cf. Hor. Od. II. 13. 17, (perhorrescit) miles sagittas et celerrim fugam | Parthi; Verg. Georg. III. 31, fidemque fuga Parthum versisque sagittis.

brevius: i.e. their bows carry less far.

Mox Artabanus tota mole regni ultum iit. Peritia locorum ab Hiberis melius pugnatum; nec ideo abscedebat, ni contractis legionibus Vitellius et subdito rumore, tamquam Mesopotamiam invasurus, metum Romani belli fecisset. Tum omissa Armenia versaeque Artabani res, illiciente Vitellio desererent regem saevum in pace et adversis proeliorum exitiosum. Igitur Sinnaces, quem antea infensum memoravi, patrem Abdagaesen aliosque occultos consilii et tunc continuis cladibus promptiores ad defectionem trahit, adfluentibus paulatim qui, metu magis quam benevolentia subiecti, repertis auctoribus sustulerant animum. Nec iam aliud Artabano reliquum quam si qui externorum corpori custodes aderant, suis quisque sedibus extorres, quis neque boni intellectus neque mali cura, sed mercede aluntur ministri sceleribus. 4. gnari, recognising one another.
5. praelatus = praeterlatus; cf. praevehitur, II. 6. 5.

saucium: i.e. Orodes.

36. mox: here probably begin the events of the year 36; see 38. 1. tamquam invasurus: equivalent to an accusative with infinitive (Intr. 35 f).

Mesopotamiam: south of Armenia, between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates (37. 4); its invasion was a menace to the Parthian power.

3. antea: see 31. 3.
occultos consilii: i.e. secretly conspiring; cf. IV. 7. 2 n. Intr. 35 e. subiecti, retaining their allegiance.

Hyrcanis Carmaniisque: the Hyrcanians were southeast of the Caspian Sea, west of the original home of the Parthians; the Carmanians south, upon the Persian Gulf.

per adfinitatem: he had been called to the throne from this region (II. 3. 1).

aequos, favorably disposed.—The genitive after aequos and the dative after mobiles are alike irregular.

87. parata: the power which was ready for him.

legionum sociorumque: cf. I. 49. 6 n.

2. hic, ille: Vitellius, Tiridates.

suovetaurilia: the sacrifice of a swine, a sheep, and a bull; of old time the special offering to Mars, used especially in lustrations.

placando amni: an adorned horse was a favorite sacrifice of the Persians.

sinuare orbes, forming circles in the shape of a diadema, which was a white ribbon passed about the head, as a symbol of sovereignty.

auspicium: cf. causam, I. 27. 1 n.

3. raperet, snatch away—render void.

4. Delmaticum bellum: A.D. 6 to 9 (I. 25. 3 n.).

regis: Artabanus.

2. Fulcinius Trio: cf. 4. 4.

supremis tabulis: it was a custom of the time to say in the will what one had not dared to say while living. That this custom existed in the time of Augustus, is shown by Suetonius (Oct. 56): ne de inhibenda testamentorum licentia quicquam constitueretur intercessit. Tiberius, it would seem from this passage, also declined to interfere with the freedom of testamentary opinion.

2. Tigranes (fourth of the name): see II. 4. 2 n.; of him Josephus says (XVIII. 5. 4): Τιγράνης μὲν βασιλεὺς τῆς Ἀρμενίας κατὰ τοὺς αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ Ῥώμης γενομένων ἔπαις ἐτελεύτα. His father Alexander was son of Herod, king of Judea, and his mother was daughter of Archelaus, king of Cappadocia (II. 42. 2).

3. C. Galba: consul A.D. 22 (III. 52. 1), brother of the emperor Galba.

duo Blaesii: cousins of Sejanus, sons of Iunius Blaesius (I. 16. 2; III. 35. 1).

provinciam sortiri: as the oldest consular; see III. 32. 1 n.; Suetonius (Galba, 3) says: prohibitus a Tiberio sortiri anno suo proconsulatum.

convulsa: sc. domo; i.e. by the fall of Sejanus.

4. quam . . . rettuli: probably in the lost passage of the fifth book. This Drusus was the son of Germanicus (23. 4); Lepida is probably daughter of Marcus Lepidus (III. 32. 2), whose death must have occurred in this year (dum superfuit, etc.). An interesting inscription refers to her: Pudens M. Lepidi [libertus] grammaticus. Procurator eram Lepidae moresque regibam: dum vixi, mansit Caesaris illa nurus. (C. I. L., V. 2. 592.)

41. Clitarum: agrestium Cilicum nationes, quibus Clitarum cognomentum (XII. 55); they inhabited the mountainous regions of Western Cilicia — Cilicia Trachea.

Archelao: a successor (son or grandson) of the elder Archelaus (II. 42. 2). He continued to rule this petty tribe after his ancestral kingdom of Cappadocia had been made a Roman province.

praeside: this title, used here as equivalent to legatus, was applied in the fourth century to the greater part of the provincial governors; cf. praesidente, I. 16. 2.

2. Tiridates: the new king of Parthia (32. 5).

Nicephorium, etc.: these Greek towns on the left bank of the Euphrates, near Edessa, would come first in his route; Artemita and probably Halus were beyond the Tigris.

sitae, founded; cf. III. 38. 6.

Scythas inter: see 36. 5; II. 3. 1. artes, training.

42. Seleucenses: Seleucia, on the right bank of the Tigris, was built by Seleucus Nicator as his capital; the Parthians had substituted for it Ctesiphon, opposite it, on the left bank of the river. The inhabitants of the Greek city especially welcomed a ruler educated under civilizing influences.

Seleuci: i.e. of his institutions. For the genitive, cf. II. 38. 9; V. 11. 2.

trecenti . . . vis: a Greek city by its constitution, with senate and popular assembly. The oriental cities were merely places of collective residence and trade, with no corporate or political character.

2. ubi dissensere, etc.: it seems

2. publice, in behalf of the state, — as public works.

duo opera: the temple of Augustus was in a certain sense a personal obligation, due to his adoptive father; for the theatre of Pompey, see III. 72. 4.

perfecta: Suetonius (Tib. 47, Cal. 21) says these works were completed by Caligula; but the statement of Tacitus, as to one of them at least, appears to be confirmed by a coin of A.D. 34, on which the temple of Augustus is represented.

haud dedicavit: the honor of dedicating a public building was highly valued; cf. Liv. II. 8. 6.

alterius: Caligula; he was offended at the affection shown to his rival.

occides hunc tu, etc.: perhaps a prophecy after the event. Caligula did in fact put Tiberius Gemellus to death this very year, and was himself murdered four years later. Josephus (Ant. Jud.

XVIII. 6, 9) tells a story how Tiberius undertook to foretell which of the two boys should be his successor, by noting which of them should attend upon him first on a certain morning, and how his attempt to trick the fates, by contriving that it should be his favorite Tiberius, failed. He then puts in the mouth of the old man an earnest and pathetic appeal to Caligula to treat his cousin with kindness; for he would be a support to his house and authority, rather than a rival.

APPENDIX.

I. TEXTUAL NOTES.

BOOK I.

4. 4. aliquid: this is the manuscript reading, changed by most editors to aliud. There are two objections to it: from its connection we should expect quidquam, and it is also somewhat irregular (but quite in the style of Tacitus) to have it followed by quam (some such word as potius being understood). But the distinction between aliquis and quisquam was somewhat obscured in the later writers, just as the corresponding words some and any are constantly confused by foreigners. A good example is Tac. Dial. 34; ubi nemo impune stulte aliquid aut contrarie dicit, where no one without detection says anything foolish or inconsistent. Dräger (Hist. Syntax, I<sup>2</sup>. 91) cites two examples from Lactantius, where the two words are used as identical: IV. 3. 8, nec tamen moveat quemquam; II. 8. 37, nec tamen commoveat aliquem. There are even instances of this confusion in the classical period (Cæsar. B. C. III. 71, sine ullo vulnere; III. 73, sine aliquo vulnere). See Madvig on Cic. de Fin. II. 27. 87.

8. 3. urbanis quingenos: supplied from Suet. Oct. 101 and Dio, LVI. 32. It is more probable that the omission was due to a scribe's oversight than that Tacitus was ignorant of the fact or, knowing it, failed to state it.

4. insignes: in the manuscript this word is followed by visi [sc. sunt], and some editors insert qui as its subject, before insignes. The reading here given is supported by 77. 5, multis decernuntur, ex quis maxime insignia ne, etc.

10. 4. Vedil Pollionis: this is Mommsen's reading. The manuscript reads nuberetque tedii et vedii pollionis: but nothing is known of any Tediis to whom this would apply, and the similarity of the names makes it easy to suspect an error.

28. 2. quae pergerent: most editors change to qua, on the ground that pergo cannot govern the accusative, except one of cognate meaning, as pergere iter. Bötticher (Lex. Tac. p. 10) suggests that pergo, like porrigo, arrigo, etc., from rego, may properly retain the regimen of the simple verb; or quae may depend on an implied agere; cf. Plaut. Mæn. 752, pariter hoc atque alias res soles. At any rate the objection does not seem to justify altering the manuscript reading.

81. 1. tracturis: the manuscript reading is tracturus; but if this were retained, as it must agree with Germanicus, vi sua would be inappropriate, as it would be by the force of the legions, not his own, that he would act.

84. 1. seque et proximos: the manuscript reading is seque proximos, for which this is the simplest emendation. Some editions read Sequanos; but the Sequani belonged to Belgica, and it is not likely that one Belgian state would have been specified without some special reason.

85. 3. promptos: the manuscript reads promptas, and some editions insert res; the emendation here given is simpler and more probable. Cf. IV. 59. 5 n.

86. 3. concedentur: many editors change to concederentur, understanding erat with in ancipiti. But although the indirect form is dropped with suscepi, the thought in periculosa . . . res publica is still that of Germanicus and his friends; from their point of view concedentur is correct, and the verb to be supplied with the three subjects is est.

89. 6. sacerdotium hominum: some editors, following F. A. Wolf, correct hominum to Romanum.

70. 7. Visurgin: this, the manuscript reading, is impossible, and some editors have made up the word Unisingin, as a probable Latin form for Hanne, a river in Groningen. Very likely Tacitus did not give the name of the river at all.

77. 5. spectarentur: Halm, after Wölfflin, reads sectarentur, which reading has the advantage of not requiring a change of subject; the prohibition of private performances is a very probable one.

BOOK II.

8. 2. subvexit aut transposuit: the manuscript reading is defective, and various emendations have been proposed. Of these the insertion of aut appears the least violent; but it is not improbable that subvexit is a gloss.

4. Angrivavorum: many editions change to Ampsivavorum (a nation upon the Ems, — the Ems-farers), and make the same change in 22. 3 and 24. 5, on the assumption that the camp mentioned was the first after crossing that river. The interpretation here given (that of Knoke), that the camp is upon the Weser, makes a change of the text unnecessary. Knoke, however, as in many other instances, undertakes to describe the line of march with more particularity of detail than our information warrants.

9. 3. permissum: the manuscript reading is permisum, and Nipperdey supplies the words imperatoris deducitur a Sertinio. But it is easier to suppose the dropping out of a single letter m; moreover, the reading here given appears more in keeping with the style of Tacitus than the other.

28. 3. tumidis: some editors change to umidis; but the strength of the winds is not so likely to be ascribed to the moisture of the country, as to its mountainous character.

57. 4. apertis: the manuscript reading is opertis; but it is plain from what follows that the hostility was not concealed.

BOOK III.

2. 1. munera fungerentur: Tacitus regularly uses munia for functions or duties, and munera for gifts; also fungor with the ablative. Most editors, therefore, change to munia; but Pfitzner regards these words as quoted from the edict of Tiberius (addito ut), who appears to have affected an archaic style (cf. IV. 38. 1 n.).

8. 3. Augusta: some editors change to Augustae; if the ablative is retained, it must be explained as a peculiar use of the instrumental ablative, as, by the example of, etc.

5. 6. praepositam: most editors change to propositam, on the ground that praepone would describe a waxen effigy in presence of the real body, placed upon the couch to be burned: while here the body had been burned already. But we have seen that Tacitus does not keep very close to the facts in this passage; and, as this term applies to the funeral of Augustus (Dio, LVI. 34), we may suppose that the people grumbled because the same honor was not bestowed upon Germanicus, not considering that it was impossible.

48. 1. et nobilissimam: the manuscript reading is nobilissimorum, omitting et. The reading here given, that of Lipsius, is much nearest the ms. of all the emendations proposed, and satisfies the meaning sufficiently. Sacrovir got the young men into his power, in order to have a hold upon their parents. The interchange of et and ut (below) is plausible; but this would imply that his only object in seizing the town was to get possession of these hostages. By the reading here given, subolem is coupled with caput, implying that his object was twofold, — to hold the capital and to obtain the hostages.

46. 4. evincite: many editors, taking this with the meaning prove (cf. Hor. Sat. II. 3. 250), insert esse. But it is more natural to take it as used by Livy (X. 17. 10), in the sense of subdue.

51. 3. decimum: this word, wanting in the manuscript, is supplied from Suetonius, Tib. 75: cum senatus consulto cautum esset ut poena damnatorum in decimum semper diem differretur.

58. 2. duo et septuaginta annis: this is the manuscript reading. The real interval was seventy-five full years, and most editors change to quinque, etc. Merula was made consul on the forced abdication of Cinna, B.C. 87, and when Cinna returned in triumph the same year, put himself to death. From this time the office remained vacant until it was revived by Augustus, B.C. 11, its duties being meanwhile performed by the pontiffs. It is possible that Tacitus carelessly confounded the death of Cinna (B.C. 84) with his abdication (B.C. 87). At any rate the mistake is as likely, as Putner argues, to have been made by Tacitus himself as by his transcribers.

62. 1. proximi hos Magnetes: the manuscript reading is proximo magnetes.

68. 3. alia: most editors change to Atia, on the guess that the mother of Silanus may have been of the same family as that of Augustus.

70. 4. egregium publice locum: this reading is suggested by Prof. C. L. Smith (Harvard Studies, Vol. I. p. 107) for egregium publicum of the manuscript. Professor Smith argues that bonas domi artes must refer to private character, and the other phrase of course to professional eminence; that egregium cannot be regarded as a substantive like bonus in the phrase bonus publicum; nor, if it could be taken as a substantive, could it be applied to Capito's distinction as a jurist, but must signify something belonging to the state (publicum). The word publice forms a suitable antithesis to domi, and the reading publicum would be an easy blunder of some copyist.

BOOK IV.

1. 2. ierit: the manuscript reading is perit.

20. 6. proinde: most editions read perinde; but Nipperdey shows that there is ample authority for proinde with a comparative particle.

27. 2. calles evenerat: this is the manuscript reading, changed by Lipsius to Cales, etc., on the hypothesis that this ancient Campanian town may have been the headquarters of one of the four quaestores classici instituted by Augustus, as Ostia certainly was one; but nothing is known of any province of Cales, while it is a familiar fact that silvae callesque were the provinces assigned by the senate to Cæsar and his colleague (Suet. Jul. 19).

33. 4. Romanasne: in the manuscript the enclitic is ve, which cannot properly stand in a double question.

46. 1. incultu: this word is found in Sallust and Livy, but is changed by most editors to sine cultu, on account of the harshness of the expression.

50. 2. tantum his: the manuscript reading is quammis.

69. 6. tegens: the manuscript reading is agens, which may be interpreted as helpless, distrustful. Other readings that have been proposed are reticens, se tegens, et legens.

BOOK V.

4. 2. domus Germanici exitium paenitentiae esse seni: the manuscript reads germanicus titium paenitentiae senis. The correction to Germanici exitium is easy; it seems necessary to insert esse; for domus, it is plain that the speaker could not have had in mind the death of Germanicus, but the ruin of his family.

BOOK VI.

2. 6. suadere: the MS. has suaderet, which many editors retain, inserting ut after neque. suadere is historical infinitive.

5. 1. incertae: the manuscript reading is incerta; with this change the meaning is perfectly plain; but some editors change to incestae, or read Gaiam for Gaium, in order to make the affront more cutting.

11. 6. viginti: this is by some editors altered to quindecim, because a story told by Suetonius (Tib. 42) and Pliny (N. H. XIV. 22. 145) ascribes his appointment to Tiberius. But Mommsen points out that Tiberius was censor, and received the tribunician power, A.D. 13. At any rate this story is a very insufficient reason for altering the text.

28. 4. alios tres Sesoside: this is Halm's reading for the MS. aliter esse soti de. Rhenanus proposed alites.

31. 4. ut . . . ut: some editors change the first ut to et; some omit the second ut.

38. 2. Parthorum: the manuscript reads Parthorumque; some editors join que with dat; others read Medorum Parthorumque, on account of the mention of Medes (34. 6). But in this passage, Medorum is evidently used as a general expression of contempt for the effeminate Oriental troops; cf. 34. 6 n.

47. 1. exitium: this reading of Nipperdey, for the MS. exilium, which he rejected as inconsistent with futuris caedibus, above, has been generally adopted.

49. 3. patris: this word is by most editors emended to patrum; but as Pfitzner points out, the word communem is best explained by supposing it to be either her own father, or the father of her son — her divorced husband.
